Canada May Be Proving Ground For New System

Britain And U.S. at Work On Arms Standardization

London, Jan. 2 — (AP)—Military officials have disclosed that Britain and the United States are at work on arms standardization and joint officer training and yesterday the Paris newspaper Aurore forecast the eventual unification of the two armies under a secret accord it said would be signed March 15.

Aurore, a Socialist newspaper, said the first proving ground for the unification of the two armies would be set up in Canada.

A government official, yesterday confirming in part reports heard since October, said the two countries had agreed to standardize "certain items of military equipment" and already had experts talking over standardization of small arms to U. S. sizes and patterns.

The Air Ministry announced last night that the R.A.F. and the United States Army Air Forces were planning to start joint training with the exchange of 30 to 40 officers each, to be expanded toward an upward limit of 100 each. The entrance was expected to be effected "in the near future."

Aurore had reported earlier that the predicted March 15 agreement would call for joint defence in event either Britain or the U. S. was attacked.

Yesterday it added that equipment of the two armies would be made uniform; that British officer training would be patterned after West Point training, and that Canada would become the first proving ground of unification. The goal, the paper said, is a single fighting arm, with posts from the North Pole to the Rio Grande and from Asia Minor to Japan.

POLICE HUNT FOR ROCCO

SAUNDERS GIVEN 80,000 MAJORITY OVER 2 OPPONENTS

Defeat of Smith Main Election Feature; Two-Year Term for Council Defeated

Toronto, Jan. 2—(CP)—Mayor Robert Hood Saunders today was in his accustomed seat as Chief Magistrate of Toronto, returned for a third term by a smashing majority over two opponents. But in the four-man Board of Control there was an important change.

Torontonians who braved crisp cold weather to flock to the polling booths in the city's New Year's Day elections returned Mr. Saunders by an amazing margin. The vote from all 836 subdivisions gave Mayor Saunders 92,542. For Francis P. O'Hearn, who said he would reclaim $45,000,000 allegedly due from previous city financial dealings, the vote was 9,476. For Murray T. Dowson, self-styled candidate of the Workers' Revolutionary Party, the vote was 3,180.

As an indication of the total voting the mayoralty poll was 105,189 — or 12,000 votes more than were polled last year. But there are close to 400,000 eligible voters in Toronto municipal contests. Three-quarters of them stayed at home, as usual.

Smith Defeated.

Those who did turn out elected a four-man Board of Control in which a conspicuous absentee is erstwhile Controller Stewart Smith. Elected were H. E. McCallum, David Balfour, John Innes and K. B. McKellar. McKellar, whose vote was lowest of the four elected, got 49,516. Smith had 42,090.

TWO CANADIAN CABINET MEMBERS IN PRIVY COUNCIL

Hon. James Gardiner and Hon. Ian Mackenzie Are Named in King's Honors List

London, Jan. 2 (CP)—Awards of the prized Order of Merit to Field Marshal Jan Smuts, Prime Minister of South Africa, and to John G. Winant, wartime American ambassador to the United Kingdom, were notable features of the King's New Year's Honors List.

Winant was granted an Honorary O. M. in an unusual gesture of esteem for a prominent figure outside the British Empire.

The list, made public on New Year's Day, named two Canadian cabinet ministers among five new Imperial Privy Counsellors. The Canadians were Hon. James Gardiner, Agriculture Minister, and Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Veterans Affairs Minister.

Also named to Privy Council—a body of Honorary Advisors to the King—were William Glenvil Hall, Financial Secretary to the Treasury; Arthur Henderson, Parliamentary Undersecretary for India and Burma, and Clement Edward Davies, Chairman of the Liberal Parliamentary Party.

The list—carried as a supplement to the London Gazette—was only one-third the size of last summer's birthday honor's list. Persons honored ranged from British aristocrats to Sarawak headmen.

Two new Viscounts and eight Barons were included in the additions to the peerage.

Says Negotiations Are Pending Over Memoirs of War

London, Jan. 2 — (AP)—Lord Camrose, editor-in-chief of the London Daily Telegraph, today said "negotiations are pending" for the purchase and publication of Winston Churchill's war memoirs. He declined to give details.

For months reports have circulated in literary, journalistic and political circles that the former Prime Minister was well advanced in the writing of a history of the Second World War as he saw it. More recently Lord Camrose's name has been linked, on the business side, with the undertaking.

Churchill's secretarial staff has steadfastly refrained from discussing the subject and Churchill himself has not been accessible for comment.

FUSION OF U.S., BRITISH ZONES EFFECTIVE TODAY

Will Establish Joint Export And Import Agency Handled By German People

Berlin, Jan. 2. (CP)—Germany takes the splints off today and enters the new year as a tottering patient trying out her first feeble steps along the road which, ultimately, is to lead to complete self-government.

Most outstanding of many developments marking the new phase is the fusion of the British and American occupation zones, effective today with the formal end of all frontier checks.

For the Germans the core of the fusion is the establishment of a joint export and import agency which will mean that as many foreign trading operations as possible will be transferred to German hands. In a matter of months—occupation authorities hope—the new agency will have placed on the world market supplies of aspirins, cameras, bicycles, fine china and Bavarian peasant costume dolls, as well as engineering and electrical goods and the basic products of coal and timber.

All these things, it is hoped, will be on the market at prevailing world prices. Allied authorities estimate that the German export ceiling will probably be goods to the value of $1,000,000,000 a year.

German Take Over

It was officially announced in Berlin yesterday that Germans were taking over "executive functions in fields of economic administration hitherto exercised by the military government."

German leaders expressed qualified optimism today over the outlook for the forthcoming conference of foreign ministers, which will meet in Moscow next March to discuss a peace treaty for Germany.

Editors and politicians alike urged Germans to buckle down to the task of rebuilding their country.

"United and confidently into the new year," said a proclamation from the Rightist Liberal Democratic Party. "Over our ruins, forward."

The middle-of-the-road Christian Democratic Union Party's newspaper said that while it was "hard to have to wait so long for peace terms, this is not entirely unfavorable for Germany."

It was learned, meanwhile, that the U.S. military Government planned to issue an order soon requiring all enterprises employing more than 10,000 persons in the U.S. zone to split up into smaller units.

1,500 AT RECEPTION

Toronto, Jan. 2 (CP).—It was estimated that 1,500 men, and two Army Nursing Sisters and two Boy Scouts attended the first New Year's day reception held yesterday by Ontario's newly-appointed lieutenant-governor, Ray Lawson of London, Ont. The men included prominent representatives of the judiciary, clergy, Ontario government, city council and the business and professional world.

NO INQUEST TO BE HELD

Brockville, Jan. 2 —(CP)— It was announced today no inquest will be held in the death of Bryce Kennedy, 43, of Kingston, a transport driver and father of 11 children who dropped dead Tuesday near the Canadian customs office of the Thousand Islands bridge, Larue Island.

Three British Women 'Chutists Fought Huns, Shot in Horror Camp

Hamburg, Germany, Jan. 2 — (Reuters)— First full story of three British women parachutists who fought the Germans together in France and died together before a German SS firing squad in Ravensbruck "horror camp" — without revealing a word of the secrets of British airborne special missions — emerged here today at the trial of 16 camp guards.

The British women murdered at Ravensbruck were named at the trial as Mrs. Violette Szabo, 24, recently posthumously awarded the George Cross; Mrs. Lillian Rolfe, 28-year-old attractive brunette daughter of a wealthy Rio de Janeiro family; and Mrs. Danielle Williams, whose real name was Denise Bloch and whose parents live in Passy, France.

The three, who had dropped before D-Day on special missions in different areas of France, met for the first time since their capture in Fresnes prison in Paris from where they were sent by train to Ravensbruck.

On the same train were 37 British officers who had been working on special missions with the French resistance.

Mrs. Szabo risked her life to crawl to the British officers with bottles of mineral water.

Before capture she had fought it out with a Sten gun against the Gestapo until her ammunition was exhausted.

Mrs. Rolfe, who was dropped into France before D-Day as a wireless operator with the resistance movement, carried on alone after her superior officer was arrested and supplied vital information to London.

The three women managed to stay together even on hard labor gangs where the severe work broke Mrs. Rolfe's health.

Together they heard the death sentence read to them by the camp commandant aid together they were tied to a stake and shot in the back of the neck.

Triplets Born at Bancroft After Parents Battle Blocked Roads for Twenty-Eight Miles

Bancroft, Ont. —(Special)— Two tiny boys and an equally tiny girl struggled along in their second day of life in the Red Cross Hospital of this North Hastings village today quite unaware of their parents' battle against the elements to ensure them of hospital attention at birth.

They are the children of William Davidson, a trapper, who lives in a lonely log cabin ten miles north of Maynooth, or twenty-eight miles from a hospital.

At 11:58 p.m. December 31st. the first of the triplets, a boy weighing five pounds twelve ounces, was born. At five minutes past twelve, January 1st., a girl weighing four pounds fifteen ounces first saw the light of day. Five minutes later, at 12:10 a.m., the second boy weighing five pounds five ounces, crowed lustily as he entered the world.

Mrs. Davidson, the former Ellen Upson of Hamilton, was astounded when her second baby was born. "Oh, no," she smiled "not another". But that was not all. When the third baby came into being, the young mother was speechless.

Topic of Interest

In this community of one thousand souls which was virtually isolated last week by storms and cold weather, the sole topic of the day is the triplets, and of the parents' efforts to have them born in the warmth and comfort of a hospital.

With the mercury hovering around 37 below zero, Davidson cranked his ancient automobile which coughed and spluttered in the frigid air, at 2.00 a.m., Tuesday morning. It was bitterly cold. Huge snowdritfs ringed the little log home in the woods.

Six Children at Home

He placed his wife in the vehicle; threw logs on a roaring fire and said goodbye to his six children in their beds.

With frost greying his clothes he drove his car and its precious human freight through snowbanked roads. Several times he was nearly "stuck" but the car battled grimly against the elements and at 4.30 a.m., arrived at the Red Cross Hospital safely.

Family Doing Well

Dr. O. W. Anderson, Bancroft physician, brought the tiny trio safely into the world. He was assisted by Nurses R. Noskill and M. Rilett.

Late today the mother and her new family additions were reported to be doing well.

Davidson, who runs a trap line has not been blessed with too many of the material things of life, and has to make every cent count. The new additions to the family will incur greater responsibilities. Any assistance from outside sources will be greatly appreciated, a prominent Bancroft resident stated today.

Return of Restrictions on Use Of Electric Power in Ontario Likely in Two or Three Weeks

Toronto, Jan. 2. (CP)—High officials of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission said today that restrictions on the use of electric power, similar to those in effect in wartime, are "likely to be brought back" in two or three weeks as a power-saving measure.

"We're desperate for power," said a spokesman. "New industries are starting all the time and power demands are increasing every day. Something will have to be done."

He added that restrictions under consideration likely would affect sign illumination, office heaters and other types of electrical apparatus considered non-essential.

The Commission revealed that it had already arranged for several Ontario Industrial plants to reduce their use of power temporarily. These plants produced abrasives, paper, fertilizer and certain steel products.

Appeals For Voluntary Reduction

The statement came on the heels of pleas for voluntary reduction of the power load in Ontario. Dr. T. H. Hogg, Commission Chairman, warned recently that unless residents of the province co-operated by eliminating unnecessary use of power, restrictions would compel them to use less.

The demand for power had far outstripped generating capacity. Shortages of labor and materials made it impossible to catch up for some time.

The Hydro spokesman said the problem was due to come up for discussion at a commission meeting within the next two weeks. Dr. Hogg was out of the city and could not be reached for comment.

Several recent developments pointed up the urgency of Ontario's power situation. One was a general power blackout of Southern Ontario about mid-December. Power was off for half an hour following a break in a wire leading to the Toronto stockyards and Commission officials said then that the general overload was partly responsible for the extent of the shut-off.

Another day saw Toronto's street car system immobilized for several minutes at the morning rush hours. Overloads again, said Hydro men.

Sleet Storm Creates Strain.

Then when last week's sleet storm put extra strain on provincial power lines, the overload added to the system's troubles.

When it came to figures, the Hydro spokesman had plenty to emphasize his statements. The Commission"s monthly load summary report for November showed a five-per-cent increase over the same month in 1945.

Primary power load throughout Ontario showed an increase of 120,000 horsepower, with the Southern Ontario system up 3.9 per cent. But combined primary and secondary loads receded from approximately 2,625,000 horsepower in November, 1945, to 2,610,000 in November, 1946.

Curtailment in S. Ontario.

"Owing to a deficiency in power resources, loads have been severely curtailed in Southern Ontario and the demand is much greater than the system can accommodate," the official said.

As one step toward cutting down the amount of power used, the Commission from time to time called on certain plants to reduce their power load. These plants included those which produced abrasives, paper, fertilizers, non-ferrous metals and certain steel products.

Power men say November, December and January are the seasonal "high months" when power demand is greatest.

"By this February, the supply should partly catch up with the demand," an official said. "Voluntary curtailments by industry and householders have helped the situation greatly but a very heavy growth in both rural areas and large cities has kept power resources operating at capacity."

Mayor R. H. Saunders of Toronto recently suggested that as a power-saving step, Southern Ontario communities should go on daylight saving time until the emergency is passed. Some firms in North Bay, which had a local power shortage, acted on the suggestion but it was not taken up generally.

One More Year Of Sugar Rationing Seen With Increases

Halifax, Jan. 2. (CP)—Canadians can look forward to about one more year of sugar rationing but with progressive advances in the amount of the ration during that time, H. J. Hobbins, former Deputy Sugar Controller for Canada, said today.

Mr. Hobbins, who retired from his wartime post a few weeks ago, said that the end of 1947 sugar stocks in Canada, though somewhat dependent on the American situation, would be back to pre-war levels.

Others among the Aquitania's 312 passengers were Sheila MacDonald, sister of Rt. Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, governor-general of Malaya. She had attended the recent wedding of her brother at Ottawa.

O.P.P. APPOINTMENT

London, Ont., Jan. 2 (CP).—Appointment of A. J. B. Craik, Provincial Police sergeant here since 1937, to the position of inspector was made known here today. He will move to Kitchener to take over that detachment, effective Jan. 15. Inspector Craik came here from Perth. The London detachment has not yet received word of his successor.

THREAT OF NEW VIOLENCE HANGS OVER HOLY LAND

Unremitting 'Warfare' Promised to Achieve Goal of Free Palestine Says Irgun Leumi

Jerusalem, Jan. 2 —(CP)— British paratroops and sappers of the Royal Engineers today threw a cordon round the southern Yemenite quarter of Tel Aviv in a new search for terrorists who flogged a British major and three sergeants last Sunday.

"Screening" squads held more than 40 for further investigation, bringing the total of suspects held in two days' searches of the Yeminite part of Tel Aviv to more than 57. Yesterday's search of the Yemenite "vineyard" yielded 37.

Paratroops also searched Rehovoth, a Jewish township in the orange growing country 12 miles south of Tel Aviv, and held eight Jews for further questioning.

The troops moved into Rehovoth at dawn after imposing a curfew, and the operation was completed without incident, said an official statement from British army headquarters.

Meanwhile the threat of new violence hung over the Holy Land as Irgun Zvai, rejecting a United States congressman's plea for truce, promised unremitting "warfare" to achieve its goal of a free Palestine.

Asked to Halt Fight.

Irgun's action coincided with the verdict of a military court condemning a member of the Jewish underground organization to death for participating in an armed attack on a police station in which two police officers were killed last April 23.

U. S. Representative Joseph Clark Baldwin (Rep.-N.Y.), administrative chairman of the Political Action Committee for Palestine, asked Irgun to "halt operations in the Holy Land until I have acquainted the American government and people with your fight and the fight of Jewry at large."

Irgun thanked Baldwin for his "help in the campaign to free Palestine," but declared that "nothing must stop our fight."

(Dispatches from London yesterday reported increasing indications there that official British opinion was inclining to the view that the only feasible way to settle the Palestine problem was to partition the Holy Land into separate Jewish and Arab states.

Give Consideration.

(These advices quoted an official British source as saying that the government would give "full and serious consideration" to such a partition proposal should the matter be broached by Arabs or Jews at the London conference on Palestine, which is scheduled to resume Jan. 21.)

Gruner was one of 15 Irgun members wounded during the attack on the police station in

London, Jan. 2—(AP)—Strategic bombing by British and American planes successfully paved the way for the invasion of Normandy despite "overlapping and complications" in the over - all command, according to a hitherto secret report by Sir Trafford Leigh-Mallory, late Air Chief Marshal. The Air Ministry published the report tonight in the official London Gazette.

Submitted to Gen. Eisenhower in November, 1944, shortly before the Air Chief Marshal's death in a plane crash, the 50,000-word report describes what Sir Trafford, Air Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Expeditionary Air Force, calls "10½ months of the most heavy and concentrated air war in history" — from Nov. 15, 1943, to Sept. 30, 1944.

"Events thoroughly justified our strategic bombing policy and your insistence upon an adequate preparatory period of air operations for operation 'Neptune,' " Sir Trafford told Eisenhower.

Neptune was the code name for the cross-channel assault.

"The air had, by the day of the assault, completely disorganized the enemy's dense and complex network of rail lines of communication within France and Belgium," the report said.

"This having been accomplished by D-day, it was soon possible to seal off the battle area through air action, and in this way the area was prepared for the employment of ground forces with the enemy at a critical disadvantage."

Sir Trafford complained, however, of Eisenhower's administrative set-up under which, he said, the air commander-in-chief and the staff of the Allied Expeditionary Force were "required to work on two levels with two army staffs."

"This arrangement," he said, "severely taxed the staffs of Allied Expeditionary Air Force and inevitably led to overlapping and complications and at times interference with the planning of the tactical air forces and their opposite army and navy formations."

On a number of occasions, Sir Trafford said: "Our own anti-aircraft guns, both naval and military, shot down friendly aircraft" — a situation that he blamed in large measure on the lack of an air defence commander to direct fighter planes and A.A. guns at the same time.

Sir Trafford said the German air effort "was mediocre throughout," especially during the critical assault stage, because of the strategic bombing of German airfields, radar stations and aircraft factories.

Extra work gangs were sent out to repair telegraph and telephone wires north of Englehart. By mid-morning some of the lines were back in service.

Increase Approved In Work Clothes Prices

Ottawa, Jan. 2. (CP)—An eight-per-cent increase in the manufacturers' maximum prices for some men's and boys' work clothes has been granted by The Prices Board, it was announced today.

The order covers men's or boys' work clothing made of cotton and all work shirts made wholly or chiefly of wool.

The price boost, granted on the ground of increased manufacturing costs, may be passed on to the consumer by markups, but any consumer increases will be limited to 20 cents per garment.

Village Temporarily Out of Milk Supply on New Year's Day

Tweed, Jan. 2 (Special)—This village was temporarily short of its morning milk supply on New Year's morning as Foster's Dairy, together with a cold storage plant, was completely destroyed by fire. Damage, including dairy and cold storage equipment was estimated to be around $25,000, mostly covered by insurance.

Discovered at six in the morning by Mrs. Felix Rashotte and Leslie Jardine, from their apartments over a nearby hardware store, the flames were already out of control and efforts of the volunteen fire brigade were seriously hampered by the 15 below zero temperature. Following a two-hour battle the dairy building lay in ruins but firemen prevented the spread of the flames to other nearby buildings.

Origin of the fire was undetermined as the flames had gained too great a start before being discovered.

As result of the fire there was an acute shortage of bottled milk in Tweed on Wednesday morning but customers received their regular supplies Thursday as a Belleville dairy rushed surplus milk to accommodate Tweed householders.

SAYS WATCH BABY BABY WHILE IT FEEDS

Bath, Somerset, England, (CP) —At an inquest on a three-months- old boy, Dr. Charles Wilson, police surgeon, urged mothers:—

"Do not allow a baby to feed unattended in a flat position on its back or side in the cot. The child may feed quickly and swallow some wrong way—into the wind pipe—or it may choke back some of the fluid and breathe that in.

NATIVE WORKERS IN GOLD MINES GET 48c A SHIFT

Johannesburg, Jan. 2 — (Reuters)—The gold producers' committee of the Transvaal Chamber of Mines, replying to what it termed recent "ill-founded" criticism of working conditions of native labor in the gold mines of the Witwatersrand, said in a statement today:

"It has recently been stated that the wages of mine native laborers have remained unchanged for 50 years at two shillings 3 pence (46 cents) a shift . . .

"The average cash wage of all natives employed in the gold mines is not two shillings three pence but two shillings 8.3 pence (48) cents a shift."

COTTAGE INDUSTRIES WILL BE DEVELOPED

New Delhi, —(CP)—The industrial planning committee set up by the Punjab government has brought forward a plan for development of cottage industries which already employ more than 1,600,000 men and women.

The five cottage industries considered essential for village self-efficiency are the textile, pottery, tanning, metal work and vegetable oil industries and these are to be stimulated by various measures.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Jan. 2 (CP).—Cold air covers all of Canada and the United States east of the Rockies with the exception of Florida, where temperatures were in the eighties Wednesday afternoon. However, a southerly current of warm air from the Tropics overlies the cold air which covers the eastern part of the continent. This situation caused fairly continuous rain, sleet and snow throughout the southeastern United States on Wednesday. Precipitation from this source has now extended into the southern parts of Ontario in the form of continuous snow in the eastern sections of the province, and a light freezing rain in the western sections.

Appearing for judgment following conviction on a charge of theft of goods from the R.C.A.F. station warehouse at Trenton, Fred Vardy of Trenton was sentenced to two months and Leslie Ray to one month in jail. The two appeared today before Magistrate T. Y. Wills at county police court.

Charges against the two men were heard two weeks ago in county court with judgment being reserved until after the new year.

The regular weekly court was of short duration with a special sitting of the court commencing at 11 o'clock to hear a charge of dangerous driving against M. H. Card of Tweed. The charge arose as result of an accident which occurred some weeks ago on Cannifton Road when 13-year-old Marjorie Way, College street, met her death while riding a bicycle.

Snowplows Open Blocked Roads Around Bancroft

Bancroft — (Special) — This North Hastings village which was practically isolated last week through heavy storms and frigid weather is "open" once more.

The temperature has been hovering around the 37 below zero mark for the past two or three days but today it was moderating slightly.

Snowpacked roads are gradually becoming passable with county and department plows working consistently in an effort to reach isolated communities throughout the district.

Late today it was reported here that all bus services have been resumed although travel is heavy, and a number of small settlements which were cut off are now able to get to the "outside."

There is approximately 28 to 30 inches of snow on the level in this village and district.

Trailer-Truck Crashes Through Double Brick Wall

Paris, Jan. 2. (CP)—A trailer-truck crashed into the home of Mrs. G. Bosworth here early today and tore a gap six feet square in a double brick wall. No one was injured and the truck suffered little damage.

Police said the 10-ton truck, owned by Western Freight lines and driven by Thomas Wark of Tecumseh, failed to make a turn in the highway.

The truck smashed through the wall between two stairways. It brook wainscoting, shook plaster loose in the upper stair well, damaged a cellar stairway and snapped off a water pipe and a telephone line.

Asleep at the time were Mrs Bosworth, her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. C. Bremner.

Reeve Jim Moore Retires From Municipal Life After 35 Years Service

Hastings County Council circles received a rude jolt today when like a bolt out of the blue came the announcement that Reeve Jas. A. Moore, of Elzevir Township has retired from municipal life after an uninterrupted tenure of service extending 35 years.

Reeve Moore, dean of county councillors and who probably holds a Dominion record for length of service, retired after qualifying for the reeveship at nominations held this week. Mr. Carman Kleinsteuber, who also qualified for the position, received an acclamation after Reeve Moore announced his withdrawal.

The council was also given an acclamation. It is composed of Councillors Arthur Robinson, Lloyd Price, Fred Rollins and Neal Reavie. Theodore Kleinsteuber, veteran councillor, retired from the lists with his reeve.

Reeve Moore holds an enviable record in the municipal life of Hastings County. During his term of 35 consecutive years in office as the reeve of his township he has had but three elections to fight. He has received 33 acclamations.

Another feature of Reeve Moore's service is the fact that for a period of seventeen years he held the position of chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee of the County Council. He is well known in municipal circles both here and across the province.

He was very popular with his fellow county councillors and was an able representative of his community. "Jim" Moore will be greatly missed when the county body convenes for its January session later in the month.

Lusty Young Gentleman Born New Year's Morn Earliest Baby Reported

It looks as though Baby McNabb, a lusty young gentleman and the new son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack McNabb, 136 Bleecker Ave., will be dubbed Belleville's "Mr. New Year," for the chubby little bundle was born in the General Hospital here at 7.10 a.m. New Year's Day. And that makes the newest arrival to the McNabb family a strong contender for the New Year Baby prizes donated by Belleville merchants.

Mrs. McNabb, the former Phyllis Rawson, and the little fellow are both doing well.

Another New Year's Day baby is that of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel White, 127 Station Street. Their little girl was also born in the hospital at 6.20 p.m. January 1st.

As the baby contest sponsored by this newspaper and city merchants includes babies born within a ten-mile radius of the city, no award will be made until all births on New Year's Day have been reported.

Harry E. Thompson, Inspector Provincial Police and In Service 25 Years, Retires

Joined the Force in 1921 and is Veteran of First Great War

After twenty-five years of efficient service with the Ontario Provincial Police, Inspector Harry E. Thompson, in charge of the Belleville district retired from active duty with the force on December 31. Inspector Thompson relinquished his duties with the force because of ill health. His successor has not been named as yet.

Inspector Thompson has been in poor health for some time and after considering the matter with his physician and superiors of the force decided to retire from active duty. He will remain in the city for some time and take a well-earned rest.

Born in Colborne, Ont., he entered the service of the Bank of Toronto when a youth and worked for that institution in its Colborne, Sarnia, Petrolia and Havelock branches. Came the First Great War and he enlisted in the Canadian Army serving with 139th Infantry Battalion with the rank of lieutenant.

Returned to Civilian Life

After four years service he returned to civilian life and re-entered the service at the bank, being located at Brantford and Montreal as accountant. After a short term of service he left the bank and bought a farm which he operated for three years.

In 1921 he joined the Ontario Provincial Police force in Toronto and was immediately sent north to assist in the reducing of forest and bush fires. He was then assigned to Napanee and in 1928 was transferred to Peterboro. He had been there a year when he was promoted to the rank of sergeant.

After brief periods of service in Cornwall and Ottawa, he was sent to this city where he served for eleven years on the Belleville district detachment. Going to Hamilton he was stationed there for 4½ years returning to Belleville with the rank of Inspector, succeeding his former Inspector Harry Storey.

Associated With Murder Cases

Inspector Thompson was closely associated with some of the most famous murders in this county and district. It was he who formally arrested the late Fred Thain at his home near Harold for the twin murders of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Wellman. Inspector Thompson later secured Thain's confession to the killings. He was also connected with the famous Vermilyea case and other notable crimes of this district.

Courteous, amiable to all with whom he came in contact, Inspector Thompson epitomized all the qualities of an efficient police officer. He was friendly to his subordinates but withal was always an officer of the law. He was a fearless officer as many a hardened criminal discovered to his sorrow. He had a pleasing manner and was extremely popular with both the Ontario Provincial Police Force and all phases of civilian life as well.

Expresses Appreciation

Interviewed today, Inspector Thompson expressed his sincere appreciation of the fine co-operation given him by the chiefs of police and their forces in the many towns and cities of the district. "I am extremely grateful for what they did for me and their co-operation on all occasions greatly facilitated the work of myself and the division. I want to say to them 'Thank You'."

The inspector also highly praised the treatment he has received from his superior officers at Provincial Police headquarters in Toronto.

Inspector Thompson is a member of the Belleville and district Shrine Club, The Belleville Bowling Club and of Bridge Street United Church. His hobby is dog raising, and many a handsome Boston Bull terrier came from his kennels.

Inspector and Mrs. Thompson have three daughters, Mrs. Clifford Bryson, Hamilton; Mrs. John McClellan, Belleville, and Mrs. William Pigden, Belleville.

Merrill Denison Perturbed Because Canada Omitted

New York, Jan. 2. (CP)—Merrill Denison, Canadian-born writer, after describing Canadian living conditions as "probably better than in any country in the world," asked in a letter to the New York Times today "why Canada had been omitted" from the newspaper's roundup of world living conditions.

"One has only to cross the border to be struck by the atmosphere of general well-being that exists in Canada today," Mr. Denison said adding "wages and prices were in better balance than over here and the mental climate is one of confidence and self-reliance."

The fact that the Times maintains a correspondent in Ottawa, Mr. Denison said, "would lead one to believe that the omission was not a mere oversight inspired by our well-known habit of taking Canada for granted, but studied."

Mr. Denison concluded that it seems unfortunate that this condition should not have been brought to your readers' notice."

New Year's Eve Celebrated In Merry Fashion

(By The Canadian Press)

Throughout the land Canadians celebrated New Year's eve in merry fashion and then apparently laid low through most of New Year's day.

Early reports Wednesday night showed surprisingly few accidents occurring on the holiday and the bulk of police records were made up of seasonal-drunk cases.

All through the east police described the holiday as "one of the dullest and best ever".

Though many showed little interest, New Year's day brought all Canadians the right of Canadian citizenship, their first opportunity to substitute "Canadian" for "British subject" on legal documents.

That, coupled with the announcement that tea prices to the consumer are increased by 10 cents a pound, and coffee four cents, provided about the only intersting domestic news.

12 Fatalities Recorded.

Only 12 fatalities were recorded from coast to coast late last night as victims of New Year's holiday mishaps. The Canadian Press compilation showed five died in traffic accidents, two were burned and one suffocated, and the ninth was the victim of a fall.

Fire victims were Mrs. Seymour Stevens, 27, and her three-year-old daughter Linda at Russell, Man., and at Chatham, Ont., 51-year-old Thomas Regan was suffocated when he accidentally set fire to his bed.

Traffic victims included Philip Lee, 76, hit by a truck at Saint John; Charles Davie, whose car collided with a bus a the Quebec bridge approaches in Quebec city; Maurice Dupont, 18, whose car was hit by a Canadian National Railways passenger train at St. John's, Que.; Wilfred Donkin, whose car collided with a street car in Toronto, and Jack Crawford, war veteran whose car was in collision with another at Lindsay.

Three persons were killed in traffic accidents in Greater Vancouver.

Grisly Evidence Of Jap Atrocities Given Tribunal

Tokyo, Jan. 2 — (AP)—Grisly testimony about mutilations, vivisection, beheading and cannibalism by Japanese in the Southwest Pacific was presented to the international war crimes tribunal today.

The testimony was presented to show that Japanese disregard of the rules of warfare and excesses by individual soldiers were condoned by higher officers.

An Indian prisoner of war in a labor battalion at Totabil, New Britain, related by affidavit this story of cannibalism, which he said he witnessed from behind a tree:

An unidentified 19-year-old American fighter pilot, forced down, was captured and beheaded within 30 minutes, Nov. 12, 1944.

"I noticed a Japanese cut flesh from the arms, legs, chest and hips and carry same to their quarters. I was shocked and followed the Japanese to find out what they would do to the flesh. They cut the flesh into small pieces and fried it. At about 1800 hours (6 p.m.) a Japanese major general addressed about 150 Japanese, mostly officers. At conclusion of the speech, a piece of fried flesh was given to all present who ate it on the spot."

At Khandok, New Guinea, he saw a "healthy, unwounded prisoner of war tied to a tree outside Japanese secret police headquarters. A Japanese doctor and four Japanese medical students stood around him. First they removed the fingernails; then, cutting open his chest, they removed his heart on which the doctor gave a practical demonstration."

Other affidavits told of beheadings, machine-gunnings and bayonetting. Meanwhile, Japanese lawyers defending former Premier Tojo and 26 other former Japanese leaders against war crimes charges appealed through Kyodo news agency today for public co-operation to help show "why we had to fight" the Pacific War.

Quiet New Year's For Police Dept.

One of the quietest New Year's in the history of the local police department was the way which local police officers, both city and provincial, today described activities over the holiday.

Instances in which holiday celebrants made a public display as result of too much holiday cheer were very few with the number of arrests for drunkenness being considerably fewer than on the average week-end.

Five motor accidents were reported, all of them apparently resulting from excess snow conditions and none of them serious although personal injuries were suffered in one accident.

This resulted when John Fisher, Moira street, together with his wife and three other persons were sitting in a parked car on Church street when a second car collided with their vehicle. Both Mr. and Mrs. Fisher received minor cuts while a girl in the second car also received a small cut on her head.

Only minor damage resulted in the other four accidents, parties involved in most cases making amicable settlement.

IN MEMORIAM

CARTER — In ever loving memory of our dear son, Clare Carter, who was accidentally killed at Cobourg on January 2nd., 1946.

A beautiful memory, dearer than gold,
Of a son whose worth can never be told,
Alone, unseen, he stands by our side
And whispers, don't grieve, death cannot divide.
Deep in our hearts a memory is kept,
Of one we loved and will never forget,
And although the years be many or few,
We'll always be thinking, dear Clare, of you.

—Ever remembered and sadly missed by Mom and Dad.

CARTER — In loving memory of a dear husband, Clare Carter, who was very suddenly taken from us on January 2nd., 1946.

Gone, dear Clare, gone forever, ...
How I miss your smiling face,
But you left me to remember
None on earth can take your place,
A happy home we once enjoyed,
How sweet the memory still,
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.

—To be always remembered by his wife, Myrtle.

CARTER—In loving memory of our dear father, Clare Carter, who was very suddenly taken from us on January 2nd., 1946.

To us the saddest of the year,
For it was on the second day
That our dear father was taken away.
A day that comes with sad regret
And one that we will never forget.

—So sadly missed by daughter Gwendolyn and son, Barry Allan.

CARTER — In loving memory of Clare Carter, who was accidentally killed one year ago, January 2nd., 1946.

I seem to see in the soft, dim light
A face I loved the best,
And think of him when the sun's last ray
Goes down in the far-off west.
I miss you no less as time passes on,
Than I did on the day of your going,
For absence can never close the door of my heart,
And the lamp of my love is still glowing.
Your heart was the truest in all the wide world,
Your love the best to recall;
For no one on earth could take your place,
You are still the dearest of all.

CARTER — In loving memory of a dear brother, Clare W. Carter, who was accidentally killed in Cobourg on January 2nd., 1946.

Your last parting wish
We would liked to have heard,
And breathed in your ear
Our last parting word.
Only those who have lost
Are able to tell
The pain in the heart
At not saying farewell.

CARTER — In loving memory of our dear brother, Clare Carter, who was accidentally killed at Cobourg on January 2nd., 1946.

Always so true, unselfish and kind,
Few in this world your equal will find.
To a beautiful life came a sudden end,
You died as you lived, everyone's friend.

—Lovingly remembered by brothers and sisters-in-laws, Bill and Dorothy, Harold and Edith.

THE CHEESE MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION

P.O. BOX 22, BROCKVILLE, ONT.

TO ALL PATRONS OF CHEESE FACTORIES IN ONTARIO.

The Cheese Merchants' Association has recently been formed, the objects being:—

(a) To inculcate honorable and equitable practices in the marketing of cheese;

(b) To acquire and disseminate accurate and reliable information concerning all phases of the Cheese Industry;

(c) To co-operate with the Agricultural Departments of the Federal and Provincial Governments in the enforcement of all laws and regulations, and in all educational and promotional efforts tending to the advancement of the cheese industry affecting production, purchase, merchandising and sale, both domestic and export.

The Cheese Merchants' Association, realizing the difficulties confronting cheese milk producers, and in view of changing conditions, wish to draw to the attention of all producers the following:—

(1) Our Association supports the producer in his efforts to obtain a just and equitable price for his product and has submitted a brief in support to the Dominion Government.

(2) Under existing price controls the members of the Association, being primary buyers on the Cheese Boards, will pay the highest permitted prices and, with their facilities, can provide factories with all necessary services in the handling of their product:

(3) That the system of selling cheese by auction on organized Cheese Boards to the highest bidder, having proven itself in normal times as the best guarantee of the producer receiving the highest competitive price, this system should be continued. If competition is removed from any market it is the producer or manufacturer who suffers.

As an example, if at an auction sale there was only one buyer present the prices paid would obviously be less than if there were a number of buyers to create competition. It follows, therefore, that the seller of any commodity should have the privilege of selling to the buyers who will pay the highest competitive price:

(4) That no radical change in the system of marketing should be made without full consultation and hearings of all branches of the Cheese Industry:

The members of our Association, composed of primary buyers at Ontario Cheese Boards, solicit your support in the above program.

Post-Holiday Time Begins

The merriest of Christmases and happiest of New Year's feasts have passed into history and the people are beginning to settle back into the accustomed activities of the workaday world. That it will take some time to get into the pre-holiday mood is wellknown to everyone. Less rich fare is one of the evidences of the post-Yuletide season that will be marked everywhere. Planning for entertainment has usurped a great deal of time in the household and fortunately everyone in this regard has been in the same postion, so that the holiday season has this year as always developed a character all its own, differing from every other season of the year, but like other Yuletide seasons which have always had the unmistakeable marks of Christmas and New Year's time.

It is not possible to pass through the many experiences of that holiday time without feeling permanent results. The overflowing hospitality, the sense of good will, the faith in human nature and in the revelation that there is so much in life to inspire cannot be forgotten. Unconsciously these times of emotional outpouring weave their way into the lives of many directly and through the influence of others.

In the good old days of centuries ago, Yuletide did not end with midnight after New Year's Day, it carried on until the twelfth day after Christmas, that is January 6th., the day of the Epiphany, symbolizing the coming of the Magi to the town of Bethlehem or the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles. So the people of today have historic authority for carrying on the seasonal festivities to Monday next. In Italy it was customary to give gifts to children on the twelfth day, which was the occasion of great festivity. Many decades ago Twelfth Night, was the time of many curious customs dating from ages before.

Festivities of the year celebration of Christmas season even now last long past New Year's.

Carrie Jacobs Bond

Carrie Jacobs Bond, who wrote "The End of a Perfect Day," "I Love You Truly" and a large number of songs which gained a wide circulation died a few days ago in California at the age of 84 years.

Unlike many others she wrote both words and music. This is an achievement which counts for the harmony that exists between the words and the score of her work.

Mrs. Bond in her lifetime had the satisfaction of knowing that her songs had touched the hearts of many millions. Sale of "The End of a Perfect Day" reached the great total of five million copies which passed into the hands and homes of the people. The sale of "I Love You Truly" and "Just A-Wearying for You" have run very high.

Yet publishers of music and others once told her that her songs were "too plain" and that they would never sell. How greatly these prognostications were confounded is revealed in the fact that the people of nations sang and hummed these sentimental compositions not only in the time of her greatest productivity, that is in the years from 1895 to 1910 when it is said that people liked to weep over the songs they sang but also in later years, even into the present age. For sentiment is really ageless and there was so vital a wedding of the words and the music in her songs that popularity was assured. It is said today that there are two or three of her "plain songs" which may become folksongs, one of the highest tributes to a composer's genius. If they do, that will mean that they will live to the end of time.

Comparison of her work with that of so much which passes current for a time and then disappears because it has not the quality of agelessness, is all to the fame of Mrs. Bond. Many of her songs were written in a day when sentiment was somewhat different from what it is today but her words and notes linger with us. The present age has produced much in song but it has dissonances and broken rhythms as a writer in the New York Times says, who notes that "perhaps, among the disonnances and broken rhythm, we could still do with a touch of sentimentality."

Once she said, "the multitude needs music, perhaps more than cultured friends. Let me write the simple songs for the people, rather than the intricate and curious pieces which only the critics extol for their eccentricities."

It is a sense of satisfaction to those who like music, even with sentiment, that Carrie Jacobs Bond knew her merits which must have satisfied her artistic nature for the artist likes to know that his and her work carries the appeal to the human heart.

A-Materials For Cancer

"Atomic piles" now being built up in Harwell, England, will produce materials for treatment of cancer. These materials will act as a supplement to radium. This announcement was made by Professor Cockcroft, United Kingdom Director of Atom Research on 13th December. A metal such as cobalt would be put into the pile and left there for a month, he said. By then it would have acquired properties very similar to radium. A small piece of cobalt would have an activity about equal to the biggest radium source used in medical treatment.

Exports of Thoroughbreds

The buying of Britain's thoroughbreds for export to all parts of the world is one of the outstanding features of the December Sales, taking place at Newmarket, England. The export figures already exceed $400,000. The total value of United Kingdom thoroughbreds sold overseas this year estimated at $1,000,000. The sales for export include the Irish Derby winner Slide On, to the Swedish National Stud, and the Royal Hunt Cup winner, Friars Fancy, to the president of the Thoroughbreds Association of Canada.

Antarctica

Women have never set foot on vast Antarctica, says Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, leader of the navy expedition which has set out for the continent around the South Pole. But women are well represented in the names of Antarctic regions, the National Geographic Society notes.

Take a look at the maps. There is Queen Maud Land, with coastal sectors named for Princesses Martha, Astrid and Raghnild. There are Victoria Land, Princess Elizabeth Land, Queen Mary Coast, Queen Astrid Coast, Queen Alexandra Range.

More often than royalty, however, relatives of explorers have been honored. At the edge of Marie Byrd Land, named for the admiral's wife, is Eleanor Bolling Bight, honoring his mother. In Marie Byrd Land, Mount Glace McKinley is one of the many high peaks that give undying fame to women.

Widely separated in Antarctica are Capes Anna, Anne and Ann. Islands or bays are named for plain Jenny, Mabel, Emma, Bertha, Louise, Adelaide, Marguerite, Wilhelmina and Charlotte.

Mount Caroline Mikkelsen rises on the Ingrid Christensen Coast in Princess Elizabeth Land, with Four Ladies Bank just off shore. The Adelie penquin lives on the Adelie coast, named by a French explorer for his wife.

Newspaper Facts

The eating-out habit has become continent-wide. The National Association of Restaurants estimates that more than six billion meals a year are served annually in restaurants in United States. Canadians eat about 550 million meals a year in their favorite restaurants, tea shoppes or snack bars. Obviously eating out has become big business, remarks Winnipeg Tribune.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST
(Copyright, 1946, Edgar A. Guest)

BLINDNESS OF AGE

There is always sure to be:
"What he sees, no one can see,"
Folks will say.
"There are others we'd prefer,
But he's going to marry her,
Some fine day."

"What in him she seems to see
Is what wholly bothers me,"
Will be told.
But, you youngsters mustn't mind;
There is none loves makes so blind
As the old.

They are not allowed to view
What so lovely seems to you,
Which is wise.
And a sorry world 'twould be
Were the young compelled to see
With old eyes.

When the right one comes your way,
I'll not ask of you to say
What you see.
For so many didn't know
What your mother, long ago,
Saw in me.

Mr. Harry Bryant made the presentation and in a neat speech referred to the fact that Mr. Barclay had been with the firm for over twenty years. Mr. Barclay graciously acknowledged the gift and expressed appreciation of the kind things said about him.

Belleville Juniors were defeated by Kingston at the arena here, the score being 5 to 4. The Belleville boys showed remarkable stability throughout the game. The following composed the teams: Bankers—Phillips, W. Hamilton, Taylor, Allan, Ilsey, R. Hamilton and Turner. Park Nine—Boland, Pepper, Connolly, Storms, Connell, W. Gerow and D. Gerow. Start at Bottom

A British official, who asked reporters not to give his name, said experts discussing arms standardization were "starting at the bottom and working their way upwards.' He reported no decision yet to standardize all British and U.S. military equipment, but he did not rule out this possibility.

Britain, he said, "is not averse to standardizing military equipment with the Russians." He told newspapermen that Field Marshal Lord Montgomery, British Chief of Staff, would bring back any Russian proporals on the subject from his visit to Moscow this month but did not plan to talk arms reduction.

Informed quarters said that U. S. flying colonels and R.A.F. group captains—the equivalent rank—would lead small groups of officers exchanged under the new joint air training plan.

The officers, the Air Ministry said, are to be put into schools or attached to commands and staffs to be trained in staff methods, tactics, equipment and research.

"Britain and the United States are rapidly completing plans for land, sea and air co-operation if they are involved in another war," said the News Chronicle today.

The Communist Daily Worker declared that yesterday's announcements proved that "British armed forces are being rapidly tied hand and foot behind all the most ruthless and aggressive tendencies in American capitalism."

MARMORA

First Election In Deloro Village In 27 Years

Marmora — It looks as though the village of Deloro will have the first municipal election on January 6th since its incorporation in 1919. Whereas the reeve C. H. Buskard and three public school trustees for two years, H. I. Dalton, W. Brown and G. Brooks were given acclamation, seven names were received as nominees for the four seats on the council. They were: J. A. Paquet, A. W. Drew and W. Mumby (retiring councillors), H. O. Loveless, F. Wiley, F. Everard and M. Borland. The latter has decided not to qualify but the remaining six are expected to. H. A. McNally of last year's council who has sat on that body for several years, now being a resident of Marmora was not nominated. There will consequently be one new face on the council if not more. C. R. Quinn, village clerk, presided at the nomination meeting.

SAUNDERS GIVEN

Two other candidates were M. A. Sanderson, head of a pest exterminating firm, with 26,021 votes, and Harry Bradley, perennial contender, who wound up at the bottom with 10,744.

He was the chief target of an anti-Communist campaign in which one of the most vociferous workers was Sanderson, who published advertisements headed "You Bet I'm a Vet" and which continually thumped on the theme that Moscow has no place in Toronto civic affairs, that Communists are essentially undesirable. He used much more energetic language than this. But the ads didn't gain him election.

Approved Two Projects.

Torontonians also elected 18 members of city council, two from each of nine wards. Three former aldermen, were linked with Controller Smith as targets of the "beat the Reds" agitation. Two of these were re-elected—Norman Freed in Ward 4, Charles Sims in Ward 5. Ald. Dewar Ferguson, an official of the Canadian Seamen's Union, lost out in Ward 6.

Voters approved the question of erecting in future a civic square adjacent to the present city hall, by 32,385 against 18,558.

They also approved the Regent Park housing reconstruction question, by 29,436 against 17,870.

But they rejected the question of a two-year term for city council, as against the present one-year term. Voting for the two-year term were 48,259; voting against it were 51,228.

The Mayor had no special pronouncement after the results were in. But the four controllers joined in forecasting a new era of harmony in conduct of the city's business.

In New Delhi, the Viceroy, Viscount Wavell, announced that no recommendations for awards had been submitted from India "in view of the attitude of the major political parties in India to honors and titles."

The Moslem League previously had renounced all British titles, and leaders of the Congress party reportedly had declined to submit any list to the Viceroy.

A total of 38 new Knights was created, with many of the awards going to scientists, educationists, lawyers, industrialists, commercial men and public officials. Among those upon whom Knighthood was bestowed was Wilfrid Walter Nops, clerk of the Central Criminal Court

The title of Knight of the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George was bestowed upon Sir Ronald Ian Campbell, British Ambassador in Cairo, and Sir Maurice Drummond Peterson, Ambassador to Moscow.

A number of personalities of the theatre world also were on the honors list, including Ralph Richardson, prominent British actor, who was made a Knight Bachelor. Council, and Baron Jowitt, Britain's Lord High Chancellor.

Baronetcy Conferred

The title of Baron was conferred on Sir Hastings Ismay, personal chief of staff during the war to Winston Churchill when Churchill was Prime Minister; Charles Dukes, vice-chairman of the powerful Trades Union Congress; Fred Kershaw, member of the Labor Party's Public Health Advisory Committee; Sir Ernest Simon, housing expert and chairman of the Manchester University Council; Capt. Morgan Garro-Jones, former Labor member of parliament who is expected to join the government frontbenchers in the House of Lords; Sir Walter Layton chairman of the News Chronicle and the Star, London daily newspapers; Sir Maffey, United Kingdom representative in Eire during the war, and Lord Justice Sir Geoffrey Lawrence, President of the Nuernberg War Crimes Tribunal.

One 'Big Bang' For Helgoland

Hamburg, Germany, Jan. 2 — (AP)— A British naval officer said recently the great German island fortress of Heligoland would be blown up about March 31 in a blast he said would be "the nearest rival to the atomic bomb."

The 15 miles of tunnels in the fortress will be crammed with naval depth charges and blown to oblivion in one "big bang," the officer said.

Heligoland, formerly a British colony which was ceded to Germany in 1886 in exchange for Zanzibar, was developed by the Germans into one of the most powerful naval fortresses in the world, dominating the eastern half of the North Sea and posing a constant threat to Britain. The British occupied the island in May, 1945.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

ODDITY IS NOT ENOUGH

I am the youngest of 13 children (writes a reader) and while my father was away from home dread diphtheria struck six of the youngest including myself. Mother sent for the doctor in town, who had retired and was running a drugstore, who did the best he could, but when father returned home he found two of the boys and one of the girls beyond remedy and began dosing the other three with turpentine and kerosene, and it was the belief of everybody that this treatment saved the six children. The doctor himself agreed. My father had learned of these remedies for diphtheria in his boyhood in Alabama. I forget just what the doses were, but I remember he gave the turpentine first, and if it failed then the coal oil followed, and it worked. (C. H. F.)

Whether they had diphtheria or just simple sore throat, I believe the use of turpentine or kerosene (coal oil) or both, in any dose, had nothing to do with their recovery—except that the repugnant and possibly poisonous remedies probably retarded natural recovery.

On the assumption that C. H. F. asks me — although he may be telling me—I say that in my opinion the only remedial virtue in kerosene (coal oil) administered in any dose from a drop to a spoonful, is that it may produce vomiting by its nauseating taste —and in rare circumstances that may justify its use.

Turpentine, that is, genuine oil or "spirits" of turpentine obtained from distillation of the oleoresin obtained from pine trees and not the synthetic solvent painters sometime call "turpentine", is a good remedy for internal use in small doses in some cases of chronic bronchitis, bronchietcasis, etc. as I describe in detail in the booklet "Call it Cri"—ask for the booklet in writing in inclose twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope. The turpentine derivative, terpin hydrate, is official in the Pharmacopoeia; two or three grains of this crystalline white powder is more easily taken in doses of two or three grains twice or three times daily, after food, for six weeks, once or twice in the year, to relieve the hard cough of chronic bronchitis, bronchiectasis etc. It should be taken in capsule or tablet. If the so-called elixir (aromatic liquid) preparation is taken, beware of preparations containing codeine, heroin or other narcotic ingredients which are harmful if not dangerous for one with chronic bronchial trouble, in my opinion. Remember, old timers, I advise only pure turpentine or terpin hydrate for such coughs, and not any dope.

A boy had appendicitis. His doctor procrastinated until the boy was in pretty serious condition. Then the doctor called a surgeon to operate. I went along to give the anesthetic. It was out in the country too far from the nearest hospital. By the time we reached the bedside the boy was apparently moribund with general peritonitis. While the surgeon tried to nerve himself to tell the family it was too late to operate the father suddenly announced that he would not consent to an operation. We retired. From the family doctor we learned that a series of chickens split in halves were applied to the boy's belly. The boy made a good recovery.

Now I haven't the slightest doubt that the warm blood of the chickens had nothing to do with the extraordinary recovery. But I suppose that boy's family and neighbors were convinced that some mysterious remedial or healing influence passed from the freshly killed chicken through the belly wall to the affected structures within the abdomen. Occasionally in country practice I have seen the split carcass of a lamb similarly applied in the vain hope of producing a cure in some desperate case, but never with the astonishing denouement we encountered in the case of the boy with peritonitis (inflammation of the bowels).

The lower you go in the scale of intelligence the greater the faith in such odd or peculiar remedies or methods of treatment.

I hope, old timers, that if you have any remarkable remedies or cures to report, you will not ask me to give you my opinion of them. Life is too short—and anyway, here is my opinion in advance: I think all such anecdotes are as significant as the travels of Kilroy.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Who invented the electric light bulb?

The electric light bulb was the result of a series of experiments and discoveries and no one person deserves the entire credit for its invention.

Thomas A. Edison did not make the first electric light bulb, as is generally supposed; but he did make the first practical one that was manufactured and marketed.

All early uses of electricity for lighting were with "arc lamps." The luminous substance in arc lamps is gradually consumed, while in incandescent lamps it is not consumed.

Sir Humphrey Davy in 1802 produced an arc light by heating carbon and metal strips to incandescence with an electric current.

In 1844 three years before Edison was born, Jean Foucault, using Davy's principle with improved apparatus, produced an arc light sufficient to light the Place de la Concorde in Paris. Eleven years later Jules Duboscq exhibited an improved arc lamp at the Paris Exposition.

Late in 1876 Paul Jablochkoff, Russian electrical engineer living in Paris, produced his "electric candle," the first really practical [illegible] light, which was widely used in Europe for several years.

[illegible] Brush, of Ohio, patented an arc lamp, which was first used to light a public square in Cleveland, April 29, 1879. The streets of several American cities and towns were lighted with Brush arc lights before Edison perfected his electric light bulb.

Meanwhile a number of inventors had been working on incandescent electric lamps with varying degrees of success. The chief problem was the production of a satisfactory filament. Sir Joseph Wilson Swan, English physicist, as early as 1860 had produced a crude electric light with a carbon filament made by packing pieces of paper with powdered charcoal in a crucible and subjecting them to high temperatures. A fine strip of this carbonized paper was mounted in a glass vacuum and connected with a battery. The battery, though sufficient to make the carbonized filament red hot, did not raise it to complete incandescence, but the method was essentially the same as that employed 19 years later by Edison.

Swan continued to improve the filament, finally making one by "parchmentizing" cotton thread by the action of sulphuric acid, and on December 18, 1878, he exhibited a successful carbon filament lamp at Newcastle upon Tyne. On October 20, 1880, he gave in the same city the first public exhibition of electric lighting on a large scale by means of glow lamps.

But almost a year earlier—October 21, 1879—Edison, after making about 2,000 experiments and spending $40,000 on fruitless attempts, had succeeded in making a practical incandescent electric lamp in which a loop of carbonized cotton thread glowed in a vacuum for forty hours.

This first Edison lamp, made by the inventor's own hands, was presented to Henry Ford in 1932 by Charles Yale, who collaborated with Edison in developing incandescent lamps.

Eggletons Receive Messages From the King, Prime Minister King, Premier Drew, Bracken

"I never get tired of these annual get-togethers. There is always something new, and I do enjoy having members of the family in to see us."

Such was the happy comment on New Year's Day of 87-year-old Mrs. Robert Eggleton of Stirling, who with her 90-year-old husband on January 1st. celebrated her 71st. wedding anniversary.

Throughout the afternoon and evening Mr. and Mrs. Eggleton were "at home" to members of their family and friends who gathered to pay the couple homage on their anniversary.

Receipt of anniversary congratulations from King George VI, Prime Minister King, Premier George Drew and Mr. John Bracken were one of the highlights of the day for the happy couple.

But in all their 71 years of married life Mr. Eggleton confessed that there had been few occasions on New Year's Day that the temperature had been colder than the 15 degrees below zero registered Wednesday morning.

"Why," he recalled, "the day we were married there was no snow and it was so mild that we drove to Stirling in the democrat and we didn't need topcoats."

One of the longest married couples in Ontario, Mr. and Mrs. Eggleton are both in good health despite their advanced years with the groom of 71 years admitting he could still do a bit of carpentry work, a trade from which he retired approximately ten years ago. "I might go to Belleville occasionally and help my son who is building a house there," he said.

SIXTY-TWO GIRLS WORK AMIABLY IN COMMON KITCHEN

Amateur Cooks at Hostess House in Regina Eliminate Confusion by Working on Shift System

Regina, Jan. 2 (CP)—Some friction might be expected where 62 amateur cooks use one kitchen but the girls at the Hostess House residence here claim not a skillet has yet been thrown in anger during the meal-time scramble.

About 40 of the cooks are ex-servicewomen students at the Canadian Vocational Training school across the street from their home which is supervised by the Y.W.C.A. Most of them are studying to be stenographers, dressmakers and hairdressers but others are taking home economics and academic courses. The remainder of the girls have jobs in the city.

Each girl at the residence has a locker for her own cooking utensils and food, and prepares it in her own fashion on a huge army-type stove in the communal kitchen.

However, the girls live four to a room and usually work in a quartet with one girl doing the cooking for a week while the others do the room-cleaning and other odd jobs.

Confusion in the kitchen is also mimimized by a shift system under which the first group start their cooking at about 4.30 p.m. and the three other shifts come along at half-hour intervals.

The residence, formerly used by the air force was opened to the girls last April when the city decided that such accommodation for ex-servicewomen in training was needed. Now there are a few "civilians" but preference for entry is given to the "service types." The house is always filled to capacity.

Form House Committee

To counteract any signs of sloppiness in the kitchen the girls have formed their own house committee and pay a fine of 25 cents before they redeem any utensil carelessly left lying about. Proceeds so far have paid for a Christmas party

Mrs. J. M. Fisher, a Y.W.C.A. director who is resident hostess at the residence, says she has had a "wonderful" time since she started at the project and the co-operation shown by the girls is "amazing."

Besides neat rooms furnished with two double-decker army bunks and dressing tables, the girls have a communal dining hall and a lounge. They can have their friends in any time but boy friends must leave at 11 p.m.

There are no rules regarding when residents must enter at night and the front door is never locked.

"Most of the girls went straight from school to the services where they had plenty of discipline and here they are being re-habilitated with a minimum of rules," Mrs. Fisher said.

Many of the girls are from Saskatchewan centres but several come from other provinces. Youngest is 14-year-old Joyce Entwhistle who lives with her ex-W.D. sister Ruth, both from Parkman, Sask. But generally they are in their early 20s.

The happy couples have received many gifts and congratulatory messages, including one from the bridesmaid of Mrs. Fretts, Sr., Mrs. Ila Berkley, Chicago.

At the top of the drive in a wash of bright sunshine stood the house, a big square house with irregular wings built off from it and a long tail of annex stretching up the hillside in back. It was of plaster painted a cheerful warmwarm cream with a chocolate trim; it had no pretensions to architectural convention or even to beauty, but it was pleasantly big and airy and spacious-looking, and Jennifer could see that the rooms might well be on different levels and connected with all sorts of makeshift passages and steps up and down. She might have decided at once that she liked it if a stronger and stranger emotion had not swept all others from her mind.

"Why, you're the house I dream about," she said.

Her throat thickened and her heart began to beat fast. It was all very well to have dreamed about this house—without actually seeing it in the dream, which made it completely confusing — but it was awesome, downright scary to come upon it standing here before her eyes.

In a dream one never saw things or persons as with human seeing; one sensed them, rather. "It was you, Betty," one said vaguely at breakfast; "you looked like Mrs. Redd, the grocer's wife, you know, and you had this sort of live-duck hat on your head; but it was you." Or, "I thought it was Miss Deane from the office, but she kept saying, 'Tummy hurt, tummy hurt,' the way Ena does, and I kept thinking that she was Seely, although I knew all the time it was Miss Deane."

And perhaps it was this queer intermingling of the senses that made people at breakfast tables so unwilling to hear dreams, so bored with their eccentricities. Jennifer had heard Monty say in scornful deprecation of anyone who had this failing: "She's the kind of woman who tells you what she dreams."

But this was her dream house; she had been here a hundred times, no matter what anyone said. Jennifer mounted the flight of steps to the front door and rang the bell.

The door was standing wide open to the sweet afternoon air; an old man in butler's black came in answer to her summons and said that Mrs. Giddings was out on the sun porch and would be glad to see her.

"I know where the sun porch is." She did not quite say it aloud but followed him through the hallway and through a sort of breakfast room to the deep screened porch that was lined with potted plants and shaded by green striped awnings from the garden that pressed against it.

"Well, you found your way here," said the harsh old voice of Mrs. Giddings from the deck chair where she was lying.

"I did really find my way because I didn't know I was in this neighborhood at all," she said simply, with her own disarming smile.

The old woman's eyes looked rather truculent, and she was studying her between narrowed lids; perhaps she didn't want a caller today.

"I'm staying at Davenbury," Jennifer continued, "just for a few days, with the Crittendons. I go away tomorrow—at least I hope I do if this girl whose place I took comes back," she went on, floundering under the steady stare.

"Walked over from the Crittendon place, eh?" Mrs. Giddings demanded.

"Yes, and—and this was what seemed to me so funny," Jennifer said a little hesitantly but too full of the surprisingness of it to be able to keep it back. "I've dreamed of this house—many times. Ever since I was quite little. The gates looked so familiar to me, and the drive, and when I got to the hall door it seemed...."

"Well, go on," encouraged the old woman as she paused.

"Well, for instance, in my dream there's a room upstairs with the window open, and curtains blowing in and out, and a tall tree outside," Jennifer said. "And a little pony that walked into the house—but the clock's gone from the hall, the one with the two men and the big hammer on it. And Meela, who fell with the clothes basket all the way downstairs—"

Frightened now, she stopped short. Mrs. Giddings continued to regard her with the same impenetrable stare.

"So you know who you are?" she asked now in a grating voice.

Jennifer's first reaction to this was a puzzled half smile, but her color had faded and her breast moved up suddenly.

"I—why, yes," she said, swallowing; "but this was my dream. I was telling you...."

There was a moment of absolute silence when the eyes of both women were riveted together.

"I mean, I felt as if I had been here before and I couldn't have been," Jennifer said presently in a faint voice.

"Why not?" There was a sharp challenge in the little phrase.

"Because....because...." The girl's words died into silence. "Was I here before?" she asked in a whisper.

"You don't remember it, eh?"

Jennifer was very white.

"No."

"You don't remember running around these rooms as a baby?"

"No." The girl's voice was hardly audible. She sat turned to stone, with her eyes fixed on the older eyes.

"I've known it some months," said Mrs. Giddings in a brisker tone. She sat up, jerked at pillows, settled herself again. "The last time my niece and Nancy were here I was with her at—what's the place, Vogelsang's? I asked her who her friend was and she told me. I hadn't asked her before. You're like your father; you've nothing of your mother in you. Where's your father now?"

Jennifer swallowed with a dry throat.

"My father died when I was three."

"Your mother would have come straight back to me if your father had died when you were three. She never even wrote me."

"My mother died first. I don't remember my mother."

A silence. It was the old woman's turn to speak incredulously.

"Your mother died first!"

"I think she had another baby and she and the baby died. But I'm not sure. And my father — he didn't know how to take care of me, Betty says. Anyway, he married Betty."

"Mary died!" repeated Mrs. Giddings. Her voice sank to a whisper. She was talking to herself. "And I never knew," she said. "Flesh of my flesh and bone of my bone, and I never knew! I thought she had gone away, was living, perhaps, in another state, and that she had never forgiven me. She must have died only a few months after she left this house."

"You mean.." Jennifer began. She had to make another effort to speak. "You don't mean..?"

"I mean you're my granddaughter. I thought perhaps you knew it and that your father and mother were forbidding you to let me know you knew," the old woman said impatiently and rapidly. "I couldn't see how you could fail to know it! When I asked you the other day to come and see me, what did you think I meant? Just out of friendliness?"

Jennifer spoke with colorless lips.

"My mother was your daughter?"

"Your mother was my daughter Mary. My only daughter. She was to be married—this house was decorated, the bridesmaids were dressing when somebody brought me a note. She'd married one of the instructors at the university, a long-haired man three times her age. When he found out how I felt—he never had any worldly wisdom—he was a babe in arms where business was concerned—he sent her home on a visit to me. That was when you were born. I forgave her, I adored you, but I forbade her ever to communicate with him again. For a while I know she didn't know where he was. Then one night he showed up here, he wanted his wife. He was shabby and tired and lonely—and she was beautiful," the old woman murmured, her reluctant eyes softening. "Mary had everything. I had great plans for her; we were all going to Europe; we loved each other. Until she ran away she had never been a night away from me in her life."

She fell silent, and Jennifer sat as if in a trance, watching her. Red spring sunset went down the walls of the sun porch; glowed on the line of red geraniums that stood in trim green pots along the window ledge.

"The minute she saw him she made her choice," said the old lady. "'I'm going with him,' she said. 'Go pack your things,' I said to her. She looked at me a minute and then she turned and went away. I haven't seen her since."

She paused on the last phrase; a change came into her face. "I won't see her now. You tell me she's dead."

"More than twenty years," Jennifer answered.

"More than twenty years — Mary! Well, so you lived with your father?"

"Not long. He died the next year. He had gone to Nevada City; he was doing something about a mine. And then, Betty says, he was to go to South America, and we came down to a boardinghouse in San Francisco and he got pneumonia and died."

"Who's this Betty you speak of?"

"She was a girl who came in and helped when my mother was sick. We had someone in the kitchen, a friend of Betty's aunt, and she got Betty to come in. And Betty sort of took hold of me, and when he was going away to South America my father married her so that she could come too."

"And you've lived with a servant?" The tone was merely speculative, but Jennifer's color rushed up.

"Betty was always good to me!" she said quickly.

"How'd she take care of you? Douglas Richie never left her a cent."

"My father left life insurance," Jennifer corrected it warmly. "Betty was a mother to me, and when it was used up she went to work and afterward she married again."

"Stepfather kind to you?"

"They didn't live together after two children were born. Betty worked then part time, and after I finished high school I worked in a mail-order house," Jennifer said, her breath coming a little short and her voice unsteady, "and we lived in a little flat on Eddy Street, and we raised the girls somehow—"

"You went to work after three years high school. Didn't finish, eh? That doesn't sound as if your Betty was any too good a mother to you."

Jennifer got to her feet. She was trembling and frightened, but not so much of the terrible old lady as of her own violent emotions.

"She did all she could for me!" she said. "If I was sick Betty went out and got me cough medicine; she mended my sweaters and took me to movies when we could get someone to sit with the babies! My own grandmother didn't do that for me," she rushed on blindly. "My mother's mother might have made my life very different! Betty did more for me than you did! I was cold and dirty and tired and discouraged. I had two dresses—beside a dress Seely gave me that I hated. I went to work in a hot office when I felt sick and blue and spent all my time with older women I didn't like, and ate smelly lunches out of paper bags, and walked home through cold windy streets! And it wasn't fair, it wasn't fair," Jennifer ended on a storm of tears, "when all the time you could have made my life like other girls' lives—you could have saved me all that I had to go through—all the suffering— all the shame—and now you blame Betty!"

And, crying loudly like a child, she turned her back on her companion, groped for her handkerchief, stood looking blindly out at the garden that was strangely bright now in the long rays of the spring sun.

"Well," the old woman said moderately. "Well." And then after a long silence during which Jennifer more than once blew her nose and wiped her eyes, struggling to regain her composure, she added: "I have a bad temper, Jennifer."

No words could have affected Jennifer so strongly, suddenly reminding her of all the mistakes and oversights that go to make up any human life, reminding her of that combination of stupidity, thoughtlessness, selfishness that is the inheritance of all mankind.

"I guess I have too," she said with a gulp and a shaky laugh.

"Perhaps those experiences of yours have helped to make you the sort of girl—the sort of woman you are," Mrs. Giddings said.

"Perhaps," Jennifer said lifelessly, all her fire gone. She sat down again.

"You realize that as far as money can help all that trouble is over," said her grandmother. "You can use your own judgment about accepting it," she added quickly, reading Jennifer's hurt, proud expression aright. "You can take your own time," she went on, "about letting anyone know of this. You need never let anyone know. You are quite right about my having done you an injustice. My daughter knew I would forgive her the moment she came to ask for forgiveness; I was waiting for that. I didn't think—somehow I never thought of her being dead. Dead all these years!

"Well, so there's you. I was going to ask you to let me help you without ever seeing your father or letting him know. He's dead too. So that's over and it's for you to make whatever arrangements you like. I'd like to have you here with me; think that over. Whatever you decide, I'll put a check to your account every month. And of course eventually all this is yours," the old woman ended with a sweep of a fat old arm that included the room and the house and the garden outside them.

Jennifer could only stare.

"No, I never had any other child but the boy I lost and your mother," Mrs. Giddings said, answering the question that was slowly formulating itself in Jennifer's mind.

"Nancy used to call you 'Granny.'"

"I know she did. My nieces' children all do. Nancy's mother has an eye to the main chance," her companion said somewhat grimly.

"But....but ....seeing you at Vogelsang's," Jennifer stammered, thinking aloud, "and never knowing....and never guessing."

"I only knew it a few weeks ago, just before Nancy and her mother went East. I was trying to identify you one day. I said, 'That pretty girl who models your dresses.' 'Oh,' she said, 'I took her to lunch with me one day —that's Jennifer Richie.' I've learned to control myself; I never said a word. But a day or two later I walked into Vogelsang's and sat there watching you. And then I knew. You look like your father, but you have some of your mother's ways—you have some of Mary's ways."

She fell into a moment of musing and Jennifer sat quite still in a new world. It was almost as if the physical aspects of the old world had fallen into new patterns again like the glasses in a kaleidoscope. Everything was changed. Never again need there be an unaired, crowded little flat with old, odorous clothes bulging out of its shallow closets; never again stockings all runs, sleazy nightgowns faded from cheap pink or cheaper gray, shabby purses with a one-dollar bill and a little silver for their only contents.

"I've been a bitter woman for more than twenty years," said her grandmother suddenly. "You can make it right with me now; you can let me do some of the things for you that I wanted to do for your mother. I thought she was stubborn—God forgive me. I waited. I went to Paris and had a flat there for seven years. I travelled to China, crossed Russia, waiting all the time."

"How could she have found you —Grandmother?"

The last word came after the more formal title had been on the tip of Jennifer's tongue and had been discarded. Its effect was electrical. Mrs. Giddings sat up straight, nostrils dilated, eyes wide.

"Now look," she said, "you're all I have. I'm all you have. We're going to be friends, you and I. When you call me that I know that you've forgiven me my cruelty to your mother, my hatred of your father. That's the way it is, isn't it? I'll do anything, my dear. I'll fall in with anything you want. But you—you be my granddaughter, you let everyone know you're my granddaughter. And the happiness"—she faltered suddenly—"the happiness that I never thought was coming my way again...."

"She knew she could always get in touch with Furlong," said Mrs. Giddings presently, clearing her throat, answering Jennifer's last question. "He's my lawyer. But, poor child, she had only a few months to live, and she never did. Jennifer," she went on imperiously, "what you went through didn't hurt you. You've made a fine, sweet woman of yourself, a woman with manners that any duchess could be proud of. It wouldn't hurt Nancy and this little Crittendon monkey—of whom I hear some very funny reports—to have to face the world, earn their own living, get some sense. For what you've missed I'll make up. You'll be only the stronger for it all. I wasn't a rich girl; my father was a country doctor. He sent me to college—yes, I'll concede that," she interrupted herself to say thoughtfully, "he did send me to college. I had seventy-five dollars a month to live on; it was little enough, but I got through. Plenty of girls, even in those days, weren't any the better for the freedom they had then. But it helped me. And who," she ended suddenly, "who helped you?"

"Lots of people. A man named Monty Smith for one. A painter." Jennifer was shaken from tears and high emotion; she was still suffering a spiritual shock. But she could manage to talk, and with talk everything seemed easier and her nerves steadied. She told her grandmother of Monty, of the Evans family, of the Floods and of Vogelsang's. And finally in a rush and with another burst of tears of Jim.

"My dear child," said the old woman, who had listened in fascinated silence, sometimes chuckling, sometimes grave, always tremendously diverted by this new companion, "you can whistle him back any moment that you want him. Got frightened of being a wife, did you? Well, a girl's wedding day, if she has any brains or sensitiveness at all, isn't all roses. I was married forty-five years ago, but I can still remember the way my heart thumped and the way my mind raced about, thinking of locking doors and pleading a bad headache—"

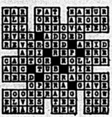
Tuesday's Puzzle Solved



Little Benny's Note Book

Satturday afternoon I went to the Little Grand with Puds Simkins and Shorty Judge to see the Five Berp Brothers in The Pie Throwers, being a pritty funny picture but not very, and we stayed and saw it all over again to make sure we hadn't missed anything, which we hadn't, and Shorty said, What do you say we stay one more time, just for good measure?

Nothing doing, not for this picture, it's not werth it, I said, and Puds said, Sure, good night, even twice was more than this picture deserved.

Which it was, and Shorty said, Well heck, we dont want to just walk out, do we? What do you say we get thrown out? he said, and Puds said, Okay, let's get thrown out. What shall we do, start whisseling and stamping? he said.

No, let's think of something new, Shorty said, and I said, Sure, let's pretend to laff all our might at everything whether it's funny or not, till the usher comes and throws us out.

Sounding like a swell idea, and we started to laff and keep on laffing no matter what was happening in the picture, and the next thing we knew everybody else in the audience was laffing too on account of us probably sounding so funny, the result being the usher couldn't even hear us and have a excuse to throw us out, so we started to walk out ourselfs in diskust, and the usher was standing in the back of the theater talking to some fat man, saying, Here's the 3 boys that started all that laffing, Mr. Upstein, and the fat man said, Then they're responsible for waking up the coldest audience that's ever been in this place since I've been manager here.

And what did he do but give us each a pass to get in free any time we wanted.

Says Eisenhower Is Ready to Run If People Want Him

Washington, Jan. 2. (AP)—The Times-Herald said today in a copyright story that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was reported "ready to run for president in 1948 if the people want him."

Eisenhower, the Times-Herald said, is said to have told friends during informal discussions while on a fishing trip off Miami over the holidays that "I will run for president if the people of the country want me to run."

The friends were not identified.

"The statement was the first evidence that the General has given any attention to frequent reports that he was being felt out as a nominee by representatives of both major parties."

Attempts to reach Gen. Eisenhower at Miami, said the paper, brought the response that he was away on a fishing trip.

Maple Leafs and Canadiens Continue Victory Strings By Beating Wings, Hawks

Boston Bruins Keep Pace by Defeating the New York Rangers

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Resolutions of the lower ball for "better things in 1947" quickly went by the Board as the National Hockey League started off the New Year with nary a change from seasonal performances.

The upper three of the loop got richer at the expense of the other trio as all six teams saw action in a holiday-night card.

The league-leading Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens, hot on heels, both continued their flying pace. The Leafs defeated the fifth-place Detroit Red Wings 2-1 at Toronto and the Canadiens kept three points behind by drubbing the cellar-dwelling Black Hawks, 5-2, at Chicago.

Boston Bruins, who still hold third position despite a five-game string of four losses and a tie, got back into a winning strike by whipping New York Rangers 3-1, at Boston. The Rangers now are five points behind Boston.

Detroit's Red Wings, who closed the old year on a cheerful note with a 5-4 New Year's eve victory over the Rangers that marked their first win in 14 starts, slipped back into the rut again before a crowd of 12,791 at Toronto.

All Scores in Second

The Leafs, winners of all but one of their last nine games, got the odd goal in a second period in which all the game's scoring was concentrated.

Don Metz, veteran forward whom Toronto brought up recently from Pittsburgh Hornets of the American League, fired the first goal on a play with rookie defenceman Jimmy Thompson and Garth Boesch, another rookie rearguard, took Ted Kennedy's pass to make it 2-0. Gordon Howe, 19-year-old forward, tallied Detroit's only score.

Referee George Hayes got the worst of a first-period fight between Toronto's Bud Poile and Pete Horeck of Detroit, suffering a cut nose that needed dressing-room repairs when he tried to separate them.

The Canadiens, who have yet to lose a game to Blacks-Hawks in five meetings, looked good enough to keep it up forever before a capacity throng of 17,594 at Chicago.

Billy Reay and Maurice Richard, the league-leading marksman, paced the Montreal triumph with two goals apiece while Rookie Leo Gravelle got the other. For Chicago, Captain Robert (Red) Hamill and Bill Gadsby, a former Regina Junior, were the scorers. It was Gadsby's first tally since coming up from Kansas City Pla-Mors.

Bruins Humble Rangers

With the usual capacity crowd of 13,900 at Boston Garden, the Bruins humbled Rangers with a pair of tallies in a minute and 39 seconds that broke a 1-1 deadlock. They came early in the second period, little Bobby Bauer backhanding a 15-foot shot for the winner and Joe Carveth adding the clincher.

In the opening period Joe Bell tallied for Rangers and Don Gallinger tied it up for the Bruins, whose last previous victory December 18 was at the expense of the Rangers.

Winnipeg, Jan. 2—(CP) — The holiday season meant parties and glitter for most people but 600 Manitoba boys spent their vacation on ice — and they were accompanied by nothing more glamorous than a broom.

The boys started preparing months ago for the largest event of its kind in the world — the Manitoba High School Curling Bonspiel. The 'spiel opened today and will wind up during the weekend. A record number of 153 rinks are entered.

This year's classic features five Ontario rinks. One of the quartets, skipped by Bill Noakes, journeyed from Fort William while Kenora has three entries and Keewatin one.

The majority of the rinks—107—hail from outside Winnipeg and the remaining 46 are from Greater Winnipeg. Last year there were 101 rural rinks competing against 51 from the city.

The competition is being held under the supervision of members of the Manitoba Curling Association Junior Committee and the Manitoba Physical Education Association.

Every rink entered is assured of at least four games, a banquet and other forms of entertainment. Special prizes will be awarded to the youngest rink in the 'spiel and to curlers coming the greatest distance.

Last year's winner in the main event, Herman Arnason of Gimli, Man., is back this year to defend his laurels. And he has an added incentive to win. The victor will meet the top Saskatchewan junior rink in either Regina or Saskatoon late in February for the Sifton Trophy, donated by Victor Sifton, publisher of the Winnipeg Free Press.

A 21-year-old Winnipegger, who claims the title of "The youngest fight manager on the North American continent," is exhibiting his boxers out Vancouver way and apparently making quite a success of the venture.

Allan Greenberg went into the pro business last September when he took Manitoba amateur middleweight champion George Cote and army welter king Wilf DesJardins out to the coast. Since then Greenberg has added four more Winnipeggers to his entourage of leather-pushers. One of them, Tony Roberts, is a former Canadian amateur bantamweight titlist.

Greenberg's interest in fisticuffs is the result of a frustrated gridiron career. He was a high school football star and played with the Montreal Navy team that won the Grey Cup in 1944. A trick shoulder seted up during the Winnipeg Blue Bomber spring workouts this year and he forsook football for the mitt-slinging game.

World Title Her Target — Marilyn Take, 18-year-old Toronto figure skater, is leaving nothing undone in her training routine in anticipation of a trip to Sweden in February to compete in the world figure-skating championship. Marilyn trains outdoors in order to become familiar with parallel conditions to those that will prevail in the title competition. One of Canada's outstanding skaters, she shows evidence of grace acquired while studying ballet. On the left, she goes through the air at the Varsity outdoor rink. Centre, Marilyn poses prettily on the dasher in Varsity Arena. Right, she pivots with sensitive timing and balance outdoors. She will travel by air to Sweden in company with her father, staying in Canada until 10 days before the championship meet, and tapering off her training routine under the critical eye of her tutor, Osborne Colson, former Canadian amateur champion before he turned professional.

440,000 FANS WITNESS TWENTY BOWL BATTLES

Illinois Stuns 92,000 at Pasadena by Defeating U.C.L.A. 45 to 14

By JOE REICHLER

New York, Jan. 2 — (AP) — Echoes of the greatest "bowling" clatter in football history were still resounding today with most of the talk centred around Illinois' almost incredible feat of knocking off a hitherto unbeaten University of California at Los Angeles team 45-14 before 92,000 stunned onlookers at Pasadena's Rose Bowl.

It was by far the largest single game turnout of 20 Bowl battles — the largest number ever — which treated a total turnout of 440,000 fans to 77 touchdowns runs and passes.

The victorious Georgia, Rice, Georgia Tech, Oklahoma, Hawaii and Delaware teams all contributed to this New Year's display of gridiron fireworks, but the game that will be remembered longer than any of the others is the 33rd edition of the Tournament of Roses.

The underdog Illinois scored in every quarter except the third to register as many points against bewildered Bruins as previously unbeaten U.C.L.A.'s last seven opponents combined.

The big thrill was provided by U.C.L.A.'s 143-pound tailback, Al Hoisch, who raced a kick-off back 103 yards for a touchdown, the longest and only one from a kick-off in Rose Bowl competition.

A capacity crowd of 73,000, which came to watch a scoring duel between Georgia's all-America Charley Trippi and North Carolina's freshman Charlie Justice saw the undefeated Georgia Bulldogs come from behind to hand the tarheels a 20-10 lacing.

Duel Never Materialized

The duel between Trippi and Justice never materialized as Trippi gained but 54 yards in 14 rushes and Justice only 31 in 17 attempts. Trippi completed two passes in seven attempts, netting 50 yards. One of his tosses brought a score, but another was intercepted to set up Carolina's score. Justice threw only one pass, completing it behind the line for a five-yard loss.

An 83-yard drive, climaxed by halfback Carl Russ' 25-yard run and lateral to Hugh Keeney, who ran another 25-yards for a touchdown, and a safety, all in the first period enabled Rice to blank a rugged Tennessee team 8-0 before 38,000 Orange Bowl spectators at Miami.

Arkansas, outgained 271 yards to 54, balked three drives inside its own 10-yard line to gain a scoreless tie with power-laden Louisiana State in the 11th annual Cotton Bowl game at Dallas before 38,000 fans.

Western All-Stars Win

The Western College All-Stars scored a 13-9 victory over their eastern rivals in the 22nd annual east-west Charity game.

The University of Hawaii rallied in the second half to nose out Utah University 19-16 before 20,000 to win the Pineapple Bowl at Honolulu.

In other Bowl tilts, Cincinnati triumphed over Virginia Tech 18-6 in the 12th annual Sun Bowl game at El Paso, Tex.; Delaware increased its victory string to 25 straight with a 21-7 win over Rollins College of Winter Park, Fla., in the Cigar Bowl; Catawba overpowered Maryville College 31-6 in the inaugural Tangerine Bowl at Orlando, Fla., and New Mexico and Montana State battled to a 13-13 tie in the first San Diego Harbor Bowl.

SOCCER RESULTS

London, Jan. 2 —(CP)— Scots went roaring with holiday enthusiasm to a full foot ball schedule yesterday and in the day's top game saw the divisions "A" leaders, Rangers, held to a 1-1 draw by Celtic, their old enemy.

England, with less general observance of the New Year's holiday, had fewer games. English fans saw Manchester City trim Fulham 4-0 to take the lead in division II.

Some 80,000 spectators saw the traditional Rangers-Celtic clash at Glasgow. Because Rangers failed to win, Aberdeen had a chance to take over the divisions leadership but instead went down to a surprising 4-0 defeat before Falkirk. Hiberian beat Harts 3-2 to take second place and Aberdeen was knocked down to third.

In Scottish division B, Dundee remained on top by beating Dundee United 2-0. Airdieonians, in second place, defeated Albion Rovers 1-0, the latter team now standing third.

In England, more than 400,000 spectators saw 18 games. Middlesborough defeated Grimsby 3-0 and jumped two places in the first division to stand second to the leading Wolverhampton Wanderers.

HERSHEY BEARS AND CLEVELAND IN DRIVER'S SEAT

Providence in Third Place in East and Indianapolis in Second in West

Providence is in third place in the East, Indianapolis clings firmly to second place in the west and Hershey and Cleveland continue as respective east and west leaders following New Year's Day fixtures in the American Hockey League.

Providence took third place away from Springfield last night by downing visiting New Haven 3-1 on the strength of third-frame markers by Billy Arcand and Cliff Roach. In the first 12 minutes of play Johnny Chad counted for the Reds and Jean Denise for New Haven.

Meanwhile, Springfield registered a third-period rally to avoid a shut-out but bowed to Hershey's high-powered attack 7-3. Clare Martin scored once in the first for Hershey and Frank Mario twice. Norm McAtee and Gordie Bruce counted in the second. In the third Ferny Flaman and Jack McGill added the final Hershey markers.

Cleveland's lead in the west was lengthened to 3 1-2 games last night as the Barons put down Pittsburgh Hornets 5-3. Goals by Dan Sprout, Johnny Holota and Jack Lavoie put the Barons ahead 4-1 until midday in the second frame. Then Mel Hill and Pete Langelle crashed for the net for the Hornets. Lavoie clinched the game for the Barons in the last minute of play with his second tally. Benson tallied in the first for Pittsburgh.

In a clash of the respective west and east cellar teams, St. Louis galloped over Philadelphia 8-3 for Philadelphia's 27th loss of the season. Harry Liscombe counted twice for St. Louis and other flyers' goals were supplied by Rosy Rossignol, Paul Gladu, Morey-Rimstad, Fraser, Richardson and Pearson. Philadelphia's goals were scored by Vic Narduzzi, Vic Lofvendahl, and Clayton Lavell.

In a game marked by a five-minute peanut-throwing session by fans, Hershey downed Pittsburgh 6-1 Tuesday night while Indianapolis staved off a last period Buffalo rally to win 6-5.

Pla-Mors Within Point of Tie For Leadership

(By The Associated Press)

Kansas City Pla-Mors were within one point of a tie today for the United States Hockey League's northern division leadership by virtue of a 7-1 victory over Omaha Knights, a team which until last night had jinxed the Missourians on their home ice.

Omaha and Minneapolis are deadlocked for first place, but Kansas City can move into the top spot by winning its game against St. Paul tonight.

The Pla-Mors, in winning their first home victory over the Omaha team last night, scored in every period of a penalty-marred match, in which both teams used their fists as well as their sticks.

Omaha's Don Morrison assisted with the Knight's goal to add to his scoring leadership in the league. He had 23 goals and brought his assist total to 17. Dick Butler of Kansas City also assisted and pulled away from his teammate Wingy Johnson for undisputed third place among the leading scorers with nine goals and 22 assists.

In last night's only other game Dallas, the southern division leader stretched its margin to three games by overcoming runner-up Tulsa, 5-2, and almost shutting out the Oilers for the second time. The Texans now have 34 points, six more than Tulsa.

Though his team was outplayed, Tulsa's Scotty Mair increased his hold on second place in the scoring ranks. He raised his assists' total to 17, and he previously had 19 goals. Tulsa didn't score until midway in the third period.

In addition to tonight's Kansas City-St. Paul contest, Dallas will play Fort Worth.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

An optimistic bridge player says: "My partner is right half of the time." He is a pleasure after a pessimistic player who says: "That partner of mine is wrong half of the time."

Optimist or pessimist, the correct bid on the second round is easy to spot. There is no reason to miss it if you follow the order of choice in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump.

In conjunction with this, you must adhere to simple mathematical needs, of course. A raise in number by you shows another trick. With no additional trick, you must not raise.

To conform with this, you may have another takeout that you are unable to show. Or you may have an assist that you are unable to show. Only because you have not the additional trick if you must raise.

We have been talking about this pair of hands:

South	North
♠ Q 9 8	♠ A K J 2
♥ K 4 3	♥ A 2
♦ A K Q 3	♦ 10 7
♣ K J 2	♣ A Q 10 9 3

South opens with a diamond, showing at least five tricks. North responds with a one-jump to three clubs. This promises at least six tricks, with two sure tricks among them.

No more takeouts are in south. With adequate support for clubs, he assists to four clubs. Having raised the partnership number, he admits having a sixth trick.

With six tricks shown by south, north can see a total of 12 or 13 tricks in their pair. At the same time, north has found out that their trump suit can be clubs.

Fortified with this much, north is in the mood for slam. He is already quite confident that they have a small slam. There is good reason to believe there may be a grand slam.

Some players might take their chances with one or the other at once. We prefer to get there after learning more about aces and kings. There is no harm in being as safe as you can.

The Movie Column

By IRIS WILSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Canadian motion picture exhibitors agree with their neighbors south of the border on nine of 10 choices for the Top Ten Money Makers of 1946, although placing only the top three in the same places as the United States exhibitors.

Bing Crosby has been chosen for the third successive year by both Canadian and United States exhibitors for the top spot.

The Canadian choices for the first 10 were in this order (United States choices in brackets):

Alan Ladd, ninth in the Canadian list, is 14th in the American. Roy Rogers, 10th in the American list, doesn't make the Canadian first 10.

The Canadian preference in western stars as almost that of the United States exhibitors. Roy Rogers placed first in the voting on both sides of the border. The Canadians placed Gene Autry second. The American choice was Bill Elliott. Canadians placed Elliott third.

Spotlighting the Stars

Cornel Wilde, who makes one picture a year for Columbia under the terms of his contract with Twentieth Century-Fox will be starred by the former studio in "Royal Mail," a story built around the establishment of the first postal system in England in 1840.

Bob Hope will be honored by the Chicago press photographers next April as the most co-operative star in Hollywood.

Joan Crawford, who took her kiddies east for an old-fashioned white Christmas, has taken a house near Montreal and will extend vacation through January.

Hickey McFadden To Play With Buffalo Bisons

(By The Canadian Press)

One of the season's biggest hockey blow-ups seems to have died down with announcement yesterday that Les Hickey and Jim McFadden, former Ottawa Senators forwards, will make their pro debut Saturday night with Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League against Pittsburgh. Two weeks ago the two Canadian players suddenly left Ottawa with the intention of joining the Buffalo team. Ottawa officials, however, refused to give them up without a fight. Senators boss, Tommy Gorman, filed an injunction against the Buffalo club, its Houston, Tex., farm club and scout Hap. Emms. The two players were detained at Fort Erie, in the meantime and charges and counter-charges flew thick and fast. The controversy ended Monday when Gorman withdrew his injunction, leaving Hickey and McFadden free to join the Buffalo club.

The announcement that they would play Saturday was made by Dr. James Airlinger, Vice-President of the Bisons.

St. Louis Browns of the National League announced yesterday that veteran outfielder Gene Moore, 30, has been sold to Toledo of the American Association for an undisclosed sum.

A touring Ottawa St. Pats junior hockey team last night took a 12-4 decision over the Moncton all stars at Moncton, N.B.

Recalling classic Allan Cup other years, Port Arthur Bearcats last night defeated a University of Toronto hockey team 7-4.

Despite weather which hovered around the five above zero, mark, 4,000 harness racing fans turned out yesterday at Toronto's Dufferin Park to witness trotting and pacing races.

By WILLIAM F. McDERMOTT in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Newspaper stories on the death of W. C. Fields emphasized the comedian's addiction to the bottle but neglected, I thought, to stress sufficiently the more relevant and complimentary fact he was a very great artist. I suspect that he was not so gargantuan a consumer of Satan's brew as he made himself out to be. He was an accomplished billiard player and excellence in that pastime requires steady nerves. For many years he was a professional juggler, an art which demands the utmost physical dexterity and quickness of eye.

Such a profession might be supposed to condemn its practitioners to the most disciplined and abstemious ways of life. But Fields had created a character for himself as an amiable imbiber and he played up to it.

People are indulgent to this form of excess in its fictional manifestations, even though they have a strong distaste for the reality. From "Rip Van Winkle" and "Lightnin'" and "The Old Soak" to the current "Harvey" and "The Iceman Cometh", the stage has been exhibiting plays about good-natured topers and and many of them have been prodigious successes.

Sets Alcoholism High.

"The Iceman Cometh" must mark an alcoholic record in the modern theatre. Practically all of its large cast of characters are continually drunk, or drinking or thinking about drinking.

One of the principal actors in the drama is James Barton, who played a vaudeville act for years in which he impersonated with wonderful pantomimic skill the comic manoeuvrings of a man, who, as the Irish say, "had a drop too much taken."

I believe Barton is a teetotaler. So, I understand, is Frank Fay, who plays so accurately and delightfully the character in "Harvey" of a potted citizen who sees rabbits six feet tall and finds one of them a pleasant and helpful companion.

But to get back to Bill Fields, or were we far away from him? Fields was originally a pantomimist and juggler. He never spoke a word on the stage in the early "Ziegfeld Follies", but he was enormously funny. His personality was inherently amusing and, in a curious way, ingratiating.

Pretended to be Clumsy.

He was an excellent juggler, but he pretended to be maladroit and butter-fingered and he was always dropping things and getting mixed up and finding his hands full of cigar boxes which wouldn't juggle and insisted on falling to the stage in hopeless disarray. It doesn't sound funny as I tell it but anybody who saw it will remember that it was.

His pained bewilderment at the stubbornness and perversity of the inanimate objects he was trying to juggle, his faculty for getting into trouble and the suggestion he gave of a unique, humorous and picturesque character—all these combined to make him irresistibly amusing in a show where the competition was keen.

As I remember, Ed Wynn, Leon Errol and Bert Williams, the last a wonderful Negro comedian, were in Fields' first Ziegfeld show. Ziegfeld was supposed to have no sense of humor but he had the sense to hire great comedians. Fields was merely one of the many rarely endowed comedians who gave distinction and memorability to the Ziegfeld shows.

Kidded Barrymores.

I have forgotten when he first started to speak from the stage, or when he began playing dialogue roles. He sang a song in an early Ziegfeld show with Fanny Brice and Raymond Hitchcock entitled "Lionel, Ethel and Jack", kidding the great Barrymore clan, and Ethel protested that it was offensive, but withdrew her demur after she had heard the song.

It seems strange now that Fields' facility for verbal comedy was so long suppressed. The nasal twang in his voice was perfect for a certain kind of comedy and he had learned the art of timing by long experience in the vaudeville halls. Nobody could say a comedy line that was suitable to him with more devastating effect than Fields.

The required art and discipline and these qualities were more or less overlooked, or underestimed, I suppose, because in late years he had built up a character and he was thought of as a picturesque personality rather than as the great artist of the theatre which he fundamentally was.

COOK VEGETABLE SKINS

Skins should be left on when cooking vegetables, so that vitamins and minerals which often escape into cooking water may be retained.

RUN BY BENZENE

A forerunner of the internal combustion engine was a French model which ran by "inflammation of spirit of tar" as benzene was known in 1809.

Part of Refundable Tax May be Returned Soon

Ottawa, Jan. 2 (CP)—Finance Department sources said there was a possibility Canadian taxpayers would receive a part of the refundable portion of personal income taxes collected during the war years before the repayment date in 1948.

Repayment date for the refundable portion, which totals $263,741,000, is fixed under the low for a year from April, 1947. The Government, however, has power to advance this date should conditions warrant.

Officials said that if production and consumption of consumer goods levelled off and signs of deflation appeared it was possible repayment would be made earlier.

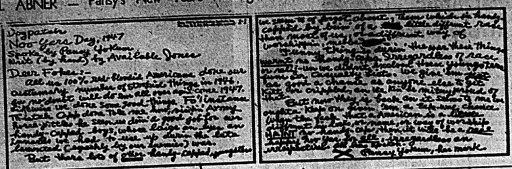
LI'L ABNER — Pansy's New Year's Message

By Al Capp



Dogpatch
Noo Yers Day, 1947
Spoke by Pansy Yokum
Writ (by hand) by Available Jones
Dear Fokes:-
All us 100% red-blodid Americans done our customary number of stoopid things in 1946. an no doubt will do 'em all over agin come 1947. Likewise we done some good things. Fo' instance Mister Capp done tole me how, visitin' Army horse-pitticles he seen us done a good job for our handy-capped boys, whose laigs an eyes an innards we had to use up durin the late lamented (espeshully by our enemies) war.
But there's lots of other handy-capped youngsters we seem to of forgot about, them which is handy-capped by bein of a [illegible] little different race than most of us, or a different way of worshippin', mebbe [illegible].
Funny thing is durin' the war these things warn't no handy-caps. Irregardless of race or relij-un we didn't excloode these youngsters from our casualty lists. We give 'em just as good a chance as anyone else to get kilt or crippled, an we kin be mighty proud of that.
But now they is back an it seems to me we oughta keep on givin 'em a fair-an-square chance. When the fack that a American is a little different by race, or name, or way of worship AIN'T no handy-cap, then it will be a real happy Noo Year for all, irregardless an unrespective. All has spoke.
X Pansy Yokum, her mark.

Trial of Nazi War Criminals Outstanding World News Story

(By The Canadian Press)

Trial of the Nazi war criminals at Nuernberg, a chronicle of evil that remained on newspaper pages for 11 months, was selected by Canadian telegraph editors as the outstanding world news story of 1946.

Voting in a Canadian Press poll in which each was asked to name the six best world stories and the six best Canadian, they chose the disclosure of a Russian espionage ring and the subsequent spy trials as the best Canadian story of the year. A close second choice was the 81-day steel strike which afffected 10,000 workers at plants in Sydney, N.S., and Hamilton and Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

The selections:

Canadian news: 1. Espionage probe; 2. Steel strike; 3. Dick torso murder trial; 4. Dominion-Provincial conference; 5. Windsor tornado; 6. Viscount Alexander's arrival in Canada.

World: 1. Nuernberg trial; 2. United States coal strike; 3. Bikini atom bomb test; 4. United States elections; 5. Paris peace conference; 6. Palestine disorders.

Every editor voting in the poll, revived after seven years in which war was the only story, named the Nuernberg trial. Most topped their list with it, though a few headed their selections with the Bikini atom bomb test of the general story of atomic development.

The two-week United States coal strike, ended Dec. 7 by John L. Lewis after his trial and conviction for contempt of court, drew two thirds of the total vote given the trial of Hitler's helpers.

The dramatic June Bikini test was not far behind, followed by the November U. S. elections, the Paris peace conference and the Palestine disorders. The spy probe, while chosen as the top Canadian story, failed to make the world list, placing ninth.

Third in the Canadian list, behind the espionage story and the steel strike, was the October trial and conviction of Mrs. Evelyn Dick at Hamilton for the torso murder last March of her husband, John Dick. The unsuccessful Dominion-Provincial conference of last spring was fourth and fifth place went to the tornado which took 16 lives and injured 13 in the Windsor area June 17.

Transport Officials Await Word On Mercy Mission

Ottawa, Jan. 2 — (CP)—Transport Department officials today awaited word on the success of a mercy mission by the Canadian government ship Saurel which, it was hoped had brought a happy new year to the 100-odd inhabitants of the tiny fishing hamlet of Natashquan, Que., on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The Saurel set out from Charlottetown Monday on a dash to the isolated little hamlet and was scheduled to arrive New Year's Day with 40 tons of precious food and supplies which must see Matashquan through the winter. The original shipment was missed about a week before Christmas, when the steam packet which supplies the north shore towns was forced by ice to forego its last visit of the season.

How desperate the village was for food and supplies was not known, since no word was received directly from there. However, the steamship company which normally supplies the town convinced the Transport Department that the emergency warranted despatching the steel-prowed icebreaker to the rescue.

Certain it was that Matashquan tables had sorely missed their Christmas turkeys and other good holiday foods which usually brighten the bleak lives of the fishers, loggers and hunters who make up the centre's population.

Late last night, Transport Department officials reported they had heard no word from the Saurel, which was expected to wireless the success of the mission. They said merely that they believed the mission must be completed.

Natashquan, lying roughly halfway between Quebec City and the Strait of Belle Isle, is at the mouth of the river of the same name, which empties into the gulf just opposite the southeastern tip of Anticosti Island. No roads or railways connect the village with other points, and it can be reached only by water.

An early freeze-up of ice in the river kept the regular supply boat from landing, although it is believed to have reached all the other towns along the north shore.

French Minister Leaves for Talks In Indo-China

Paris, Jan. 2 —(AP)— Dispatches from Indo-China said today that French Colonial Minister Marius Moutet, investigating trouble with Viet Nam Nationalists in that country, was going north where he had an invitation to peace talks.

Agence France-Presse reported that Moutet had left Saigon in the south by plane for Hanoi, capital of Indo-China and of the Viet Nam republic. Ho Chi Minh, president of the republic, was said to have invited Moutet, over the underground Viet Nam radio, to meet with him and discuss ways to end fighting between Viet Namese and French troops. Ho was believed in hiding near Hanoi.

French circles would not venture any predictions as to whether Moutet would receive Ho. Authorities termed his flight risky because of bad weather and possible anti-aircraft fire from Viet Namese entrenched in Hanoi's outskirts. News of the trip was delayed for security reasons, and the agency did not give the exact times of his departure and expected landing.

Moutet had just returned to Saigon after a tour of Laos in western Indo-China and Cambodia in the southwest. He reported the two protectorates loyal to France but at the same time disclosed that a rebellion had been quelled in western Cambodia.

The news agency reported yesterday that French troops had taken three weeks to put down that rebellion, involving 2,000 to 3,000 self-styled Cambodian "Issaraks," armed from Siam, trained by Viet Namese and numbering some fugitive Japanese soldiers in their ranks.

Urge Understanding For Wayward Girls

London, (CP)—A plea for more understanding in dealing with unstable adolescent girls—"superficially good-time girls"—was made by a joint committee of the British Medical Association and the Magistrates' Association which issued a report on psychiatry and the law.

"It is wrong to treat as guilty of an offence a girl who needs and cannot find care and protection," the committee said, adding that unsuitable detention homes were likely to exacerbate rather than improve their tendency toward misconduct.

The committee urged a fuller understanding of the general causes and treatment of misbehavior since "often all that such a girl needs is some activity that will bring variety, color and interest into her drab life."

which he was accused of firing a gun.

The death sentence is subject to confirmation by the Palestine military commander.

Military authorities meanwhile announced the detention of 47 persons in the all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv following an investigation into the retaliation flogging of a British major and three soldiers last Sunday. The announcement said that 2,242 persons had been questioned during the investigation.

London, Jan. 2 — (AP)—The British cabinet was summoned to its second meeting in three days amid indications that the government intended to start off the new year by seeking a speedy solution of the situation in Palestine.

Matters appeared to have been brought to a head by the failure of efforts to bring Jewish representatives to round table conferences with Arab leaders here and by recent developments in Palestine which have included the flogging of British soldiers in retaliation for similar punishment meted out to members of the Jewish underground.

An official British source said yesterday that the government was ready to give "full and serious consideration" to proposals to divide Palestine into separate Jewish and Arab states. The source added that information had been received that many Arab leaders were willing to listen to such a plan.

The London Press meanwhile reported that counter-activity by anti-Jewish elements, who have been blamed for fires in two London synagogues recently, had been extended to personal threats against well-known Zionists, one of whom was said to have been given a police guard.

QUICK ACTION SAVES PARTY

Niagara Falls, Ont., Jan. 2 (CP).—Quick thinking on the part of two police officers saved five persons from possible death yesterday when their car stalled on the New York Central Railroad tracks in the path of an oncoming train. Constable Follett noticed their predicament in time to help them out of the car, while Constable Austin ran down the line to signal the train to a stop. The train slowed down but struck the auto, causing damage of $125. A Mr. and Mrs. Bell of Timmins were among the auto passengers.

DAISY WENT FOR STEAKS

London, Jan. 2 (AP)—Daisy, a spotted cow with an aversion to becoming steaks, upset the routine of the Portswood slaughterhouse, the schedules of the Southern Railway and the tranquility which police have a right to expect on New Year's Day.

Daisy bolted for freedom through a laundry near the slaughterhouse, got into the railway's marshalling yards, charged trains, chsaed a stationmaster and two assistants into a standing train and bore down on a signalman, who scrambled up a post.

After five hours police outmanoeuvred Daisy, who was put out of action by a well-placed rifle shot.

She will become steaks anyway.

FELT BETTER FEW DAYS AFTER TAKING SYNTONA, SHE SAYS

Every person who suffers from stomach disorders that make you feel miserable and spoil the appetite and bring on headaches, dizzy feelings, indigestion, nervous irritability or rheumatic aches and pains; every such person should follow the example of other citizens who have taken Syntona and obtained grand relief.

Here is another of the realities of what Syntona can do for you as reported recently by Mrs. L. Johnston, 890 7th. street east, Owen Sound, Ontario.

"I was very weak and rundown after having a severe attack of bronchial asthma. My appetite was very poor and what little food I did eat gave me gas, indigestion and sour acidity afterward. I would get a full, heavy, bloated feeling accompanied by shortness of breath and dizzy spells. Frequently I would develop a sick headache and my nerves would be so upset I couldn't get to sleep at night. I had backache and pains in my limbs and joints.

MRS. L. JOHNSTON

"Through talking with a friend I found out about Syntona and after I began taking this medicine it was only a few days when I began to feel better. My appetite is now improved so much that I enjoy my meals. I am not having gas, sourness or indigestion afterwards and I am free of headaches and dizzy spells. The aches and pains are relieved and I know my nerves are calmed down, because I sleep so much better than I did before. I think Syntona is just grand and I tell all my friends how good it is."

Heavy Snowfall Snarls Road, Rail Traffic in Ontario

Turns to Sleet, Freezing Rain, Temperature Drops

(By The Canadian Press)

Snow turning to sleet and freezing rain covered most of southern Ontario until the weather turned colder this morning. On top of the storm of last weekend, the new downfall snarled road and rail traffic, interrupted most air flights, caused further interruptions in telephone and telegraph communications and resulted in power failures at some points.

Streets and highways from Windsor to Eastern Ontario were covered with six inches or more of snow on top of which came sleet and rain that made the going almost impossible in some places.

While temperatures were from seven to 38 below zero all through the west, and below zero again at Ottawa and Montreal, the Ontario belt had much milder weather which was the cause of the trouble. Minimum temperatures were 18 degrees at London, 14 at Toronto.

The weather bureau explained that moist tropical air flowed on top of cold polar air causing the freezing rain along Lake Erie and snow elsewhere in southern and eastern Ontario. A minor storm from Kentucky, of all places, will be centred over eastern Ontario tonight but once this has gone a general improvement can be expected.

The accident toll was unusually low, chiefly because traffic was at a standstill. In Toronto a streetcar collided with a parked truck, damaging the entire side of the trolley and sending three out of 40 passengers to hospital for treatment of cuts and bruises. Near Brantford a chartered motor bus travelling from Toronto to Minneapolis spilled into the ditch and overturned, but of the 27 persons aboard only two needed hospital treatment, and they were released in a few hours.

Power failures resulted in a 4-hour blackout for Amherstburg, near Windsor; and interruptions in service for parts of Windsor, and for Port Burwell, Eden and Langton, in Elgin and Norfolk counties.

Many motorcars were abandoned in the deep snow and slush in Toronto, including the official city car used by Mayor R. H. Saunders. His Worship, who was unable to keep an engagement to made a radio speech, said he was calling department heads into conference today to get some system into snow clearance. He said civic officials apparently didn't know which streets needed clearing first.

The sleet coated trees with ice and caused worry around Chatham that fruit trees would be ruined as branches toppled. Telegraph and telephone wires were interrupted around Owen Sound and also at Smithville, between Hamilton and Welland.

TRIAL OF PARIS POSTPONED

New York, Jan. 3 — (AP) — The trial of Alvin J. Paris, charged with attempting to "fix" the New York Giants-Chicago Bears championship football game Dec. 15, was postponed until Monday after inportant witness were prevented from arriving by bad weather yesterday.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Jan. 3—(CP)—Synopsis: The central part of Canada and the United States is covered with Polar air. Temperatures in Northern Ontario have dropped to 20 to 30 degrees below. In sharp contrast war moist air from the Gulf of Mexico has pushed northward over the southeastern United States raising temperatures during the night in parts of Ohio and Pennsylvania to over 50 degrees. This warm air has been going aloft over the colder Polar air over Ontario causing freezing rain along the north shore of Lake Erie and in the Niagara Peninsula and snow elsewhere in Southern Ontario. As the cold air continues to push southeastward the rain and snow will gradually clear from the province to be followed by clear cold weather in most sections.

Muddled Case Of Missing Co-ed Still Unsolved

Columbus, O., Jan. 3. (AP)—Prof. E. E. Kimberly expressed fear today that his 20-year-old daughter, missing with a 42-year-old former convict, had been "doped".

The Ohio State University instructor, informed of a report that the couple appeared at a Cleveland residence late yesterday and Miss Mary Virginia Kimberly declined to part company with her companion, remarked:

"If that is true, I am convinced that my daughter has been doped."

Meanwhile, police in Ohio and neighboring States intensified their search for the red-haired Ohio State senior and Robert M. Hemming, who disappeared Wednesday afternoon when he called on a pretext of driving her to a friend's home.

The couple had not been reported in Columbus early today. Relatives of Hemming in Cleveland said they urged Hemming and the girl to return to Columbus at 5.30 p.m., yesterday.

"I'm going to marry that girl," the relatives quoted the son of a prominent family in suburban Upper Arlington as saying during a 15-minute visit at their home in Lakewood, a Cleveland suburb.

An unidentified cousin of Hamming said the couple gave no indication they would follow her advice to return home. Miss Kimberly, appearing friendly and natural, refused to leave the car during Hemming's brief visit, the cousin said.

"This has been a horrible thing for the family," said Sara Hemming, daughter of the hunted man.

Earlier, Miss Hemming, high school and college companion of Miss Kimberly, said the cousin telephoned her the missing pair had started back to Columbus about 5.45 p.m., yesterday because they "got scared" after hearing a news broadcast.

Frank D. Carey, Upper Arlington police chief, said the search "absolutely is not off" and admitted hearing rumors "we cannot discuss at this time" that the two were on their way here.

The tangled threads of the mysterious disappearance first began to weave themselves into a snarl early yesterday afternoon. Professor E. E. Kimberly appealed to police to find his daugher. He said she was lured from her home at 2.30 p.m. Wednesday to a story of a fake party to be given for Hemming's daughter, Sara.

A wooden floor used for roller skating at the Civic Arena was stored in the building as was a quantity of cement, lime and insulating materials.

30,000 Workers Idle in Hamilton When Storm Causes Power Failure

(By The Canadian Press)

An estimated 30,000 workers were idle in industrial Hamilton today as the result of a power failure arising from last night's blustering snow and sleet storm which left Southern Ontario blanketed under snow as deep as nine inches.

The load of ice brought down high tension lines which serve the city's big industries and its approximately 200,000 citizens. It halted manufacture of gas and caused what was described as "tremendous damage" to the telegraph and telephone lines. Hundreds of rural telephone lines also were affected.

Hamilton's power failure, attributed to a break in service from the Decew Falls power development, was believed due to ice coating on vital power lines.

Telephone and hydro lines also were down over a wide area in Welland County as wires and trees sagged under a thick coating of ice. Hoar frost on road surfaces made driving conditions good.

Chatham reported its worst ice storm in the memory of most of its citizens. Tree limbs and hydro and telephone wires snapped under loads of glistening ice. Power failed in several sections of the city. Icy roads made driving hazardous.

Traffic moved slowly on Toronto streets as the city started to

95 P.C. WAR VETS OF SECOND WAR HAVE FOUND JOBS

Veterans Minister In Year-end Review Says 40,000 Veterans Are Still Unemployed

Ottawa, Jan. 3. (CP)—Indications are that 95 per cent of the roughly 1,000,000 Canadians who served in the forces in the Second World War have found peacetime occupation, Veterans Minister Mackenzie said today.

In a review of the wear 1946 which saw the tasks of his department swell to their peak, he estimated that possibly 40,000 veterans were unemployed today, although out-of-work benefits at the end of December were being paid to fewer than $20,000.

Paying tribute to the spirit of the veterans themselves, Mr. Mackenzie said their co-operation had helped greatly in getting the department through a period of swift and heavy demobilization which at times almost shattered the machinery established to handle it.

"We have paid out a total of about $100,000,000 in re-establishment credits," Mr. Mackenzie said. "Of this, approximately $18,000,000 has been used as part of the down payment on homes of their own. To obtain this it was necessary for veterans to put up about $9,000,000 of their own money. This means, of course, down payments of $27,000,000 in cash and probably represents commitments of about $200,000,000 made by veterans using their credits."

From the credits, veterans have bought in excess of $50,000,000 in furniture while another $14,000,000 has been used for working capital for businesses which veterans owned, or for the purchase of new businesses.

Under the Veterans Land Act, the hope was expressed a year ago that during 1946 a total of 15,000 settlements would be reached.

"At the end of October actual approval for 21,702 settlements had been given. Of these, 12,592 were full-time farmers, 8,796 were small holders and 314 commercial fishermen. I think I am being conservative when I say that at the year's end actual approvals will be in the neighborhood of 25,000. The vast majority of these have been given in the past 12 months."

The Minister referred to criticism of some of the homes built by the act administration but said the director had had to overcome the same problems as any private agency building a large number of homes. All complaints would be investigated fully, and adjustments would be made where the facts showed them well founded.

A year ago, the minister said, a total of 20,882 veterans were attending universities or qualifying for admission to them. In the last 12 months this figure had practically doubled, and at present there were about 40,000 veterans taking advantage of the opportunity for higher education. In vocational training the 16,457 trainees at the end of 1945 had increased to 35,000.

"Most of these young men and women who have gone into business on their own account are doing surprisingly well," Mr. Mackenzie said. "It is not unusual to be told of veterans established in their own businesses since VE-Day who now are employing as many as 20 and 25 other people."

BUTTER PRICES WILL REMAIN UNTIL APRIL 30

United Kingdom Bacon Price Being Raised $4 per 100 Pound

Ottawa, Jan. 3 — (CP)—Desire on the part of the government to release butter stocks being held in storage by uncertain producers is believed to be behind Agricultural Minister Gardiner's announcement that there will be no change in prices until next April 30 at least.

At a press conference yesterday, the minister said ceiling prices in relation to subsidies on milk going into butter and cheese would be reviewed before April 30 but there would be no change at present on maximum prices of butter, cheese and concentrated milk.

It was learned that the government has been anxious about butter stocks which have been held by some producers who, uncertain of future trends in butter prices, have held their supplies for possible speculative purposes. It is believed the minister's statement will tend to release these stocks by removing to some extent the doubt as to the future of prices.

Mr. Gardiner also announced higher returns for Canadian pork producers in 1947 and 1948 with the statement that the United Kingdom contract bacon price is being raised $4 per 100 pounds and that the domestic price is being adjusted correspondingly.

The revised British contract calls for a price of $20 per 100 pounds for grade A Wiltshire sides F.A.S. the Canadian seaboard, compared with $25 in the existing contract. Part of the contract will go into effect in the near future, although Sept. 1 in set as the effective date. It will run until Dec. 31, 1948.

The minister said in discussing butter the government would "consider arrangements for the importation of a quantity of butter" to maintain the present individual butter ration of six ounces weekly.

Canada was mainly relying, as is seasonal, on storage butter supplies. An increase in prices now would not benefit producers and would merely have the effect of raising prices to consumers.

Private Plane Owner Has His Problems

Ridgeway, Jan. 3—(CP)—Some of the travails of private plane ownership were explained by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Detenbeck on their return here from a 15,000 mile trip to the United States and Mexico. They had four forced landings on the trip — one in a mountainous region of Mexico where they were approached by a crowd carrying shotguns. Their Spanish phrase book was no help — no one in the crowd could read. They were fortunate enough to meet the only man in a nearby town of 20,000 people who understood English shortly after landing, and he rescued them.

FRENCH COLONIAL MINISTER FIRED ON BY SNIPERS

Marius Moutet Making On-the-Spot Probe at Hanoi at Time

Hanoi, Indo-China, Jan. 3. (AP)—French Colonial Minister Marius Moutet was fired on by snipers shortly after he arrived in Hanoi yesterday for an on-the-spot investigation of conditions there.

French authorities said today that the Cabinet minister and his official party were visiting a hospital when shots were fired, apparently from an Annamite house near the hospital. None of the French was hit, they reported.

Moutet, sent to Indo-China by the French government to inquire into three-week-old fighting between French and Viet Namese Republican forces, flew to Hanoi, Indo-Chinese capital and storm centre of the trouble in northern Tonkin, from Saigon in the south.

A French communique said that the French garrison at Nandinh still was repulsing violent, artillery-supported Viet Nam attacks. Elsewhere in northern Indo-China, only patrol activity was reported.

Canada to Have Balanced Budget

New York, Jan. 3 —(CP)—A four-page supplement in the New York Herald -Tribune reviewing Canadian business and commerce today was headed with an article by Prime Minister King.

Mr. King pointed out that: "The economic systems of the United States and Canada are so closely linked that the total trade between our two countries is greater than the total trade between any other two countries on the face of the earth."

Other articles foresaw "Canada... keeping her price curbs," forecast "A balance budget for the first time since 1940," and cited the Dominion's foreign trade at a peace-time peak of $4,200,000,000.

The Dominion's paper and and pulp industry together with her mining, railroad, steel, fishing and tourist industries and farming also were reviewed and another article said: "Quaint Quebec (is) fast becoming an industry centre.

Break Attributed To Inadequate Number Guards And Prison's Deterioration

New York, Jan. 3 (AP). — The city's 17,000 police today were ordered to be ready to "shoot to kill" in the manhunt for nine felons, one a confessed killer, who staged a daylight escape from ancient Raymond street jail in Brooklyn.

By the number of men delivered, the break was the largest in the city's history. But it was astonishingly quiet and involved no violence.

Warden Thomas McDonnell attributed the escape to an inadequate number of guards and to the prison's deterioration.

"The jail," he said, "is over 100 years old. Its bars are rotten, its windows are rotten."

Williams gave this version of the break:

The nine prisoners, unescorted, were returning from a prison medical examination yesterday sometime between 1.15 and 1.45 p.m. They departed from the customary route back to their cells and passed an open door leading into a cell facing Fort Greene Park.

Cut Through Bars.

One of the men climbed up to the cell window, and using a hacksaw, cut through the bar and squeezed through an opening.

Fifteen feet to the rear of the jail is a 20-foot retaining wall at the foot of the park. The wall had been cracking in recent years and planks, a foot wide and three or four inches thick, had been jammed against the wall to short it up.

A plank was just outside the open cell window and the prisoners apparently scrambled up it to the top of the 15-foot prison wall, from which they dropped into the snow-covered park.

The men disappeared without being observed, although they passed within 20 feet of a police booth overlooking the prison yard.

A patrolman was assigned to the booth at the time of the break. According to his report, the patrolman was shovelling snow at the time and had his back turned.

Police believe the break was masterminded by Anthony Iiello, 36, who recently pleaded guilty to murder, and Alfred Minutolo, 34, former Alcatraz prisoner.

Customers Like Chorines' Scanty Costumes; Girls Don't Object Either

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Jan. 3 —(CP)— The customers love the scanty costumes worn by night club chorus girls, but what do the girls think of them?

That question beside this reporter's initials in the assignment book sounded like sweet music. What better way of meeting pretty chorines without the benefit of formal introduction? And if you know New York chorus girls, you know that formal introductions always are in order—drat it!

The reporter in question casually walked out the office door and headed post-haste to 52nd Street — the rue de night clubs.

A knock on the dressing room door, a flash of a press pass and the interviews were ready to start.

Pad in hand, pencil poised, the question is posed:

"Since chorus girls must expose themselves in scanty costumes, why did you decide to be-

Continued Acts Of Violence Anger British in Palestine

Underground Threat Made To Kidnap British Soldiers

London, Jan. 3—(AP)—British government and Jewish agency sources expressed belief today that Lt. Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham, Palestine High Commissioner, would ask the cabinet for authority to launch an offensive to smash Jewish resistance in the Holy Land.

The prediction came as new violence erupted in Palestine. An official announcement in Jerusalem said an underground threat had been made to kidnap British soldiers, and that all ranks had been ordered, for their personal safety, to carry arms at all times, and to venture out of barracks only in pairs.

Three British soldiers were injured near the coastal village of Kfar Sirkin early today when their jeep was blown up, evidently by an electrically-detonated mine.

Searchers still hunting for the men who recently flogged four British soldiers found a quantity of dynamite in a house in Jerusalem, on a route believed taken by underground forces who attempted a flamethrower attack in the area.

The attacks had the British government on the spot with two alternatives in prospect — either to find a final solution to the Palestine problem or to put the Holy Land under complete military rules.

Earlier stern British countermeasures were predicted in the wake of widespread attacks last night by the Jewish underground on British military installations in which at least one British officer was slain and a score or more of persons wounded.

Big Outlaw Operation

It was one of the biggest simultaneous operations ever launched in the Holy Land by the underground, which used mines, grenades automatic weapons and home-made flame throwers in at least 12 separate attacks in Jerusalem, Tel Aviv, Tiberias, Hedera and Kiryat Haim, thus ending a month-long period of relative peace in Palestine.

Political observers predicted the attacks—which some sources said presumably were launched co-operatively by Irgun Zvai Leumi and the so-called Stern action from British authorities in the form of "comb-outs" curfews and other measures in an effort to find the persons responsible.

(The attacks followed by only a few days strong world Zionists Congress condemnation of the use of violence in Palestine and occurred only a few hours after David Ben-Gurion, chairman of the Jewish agency executive, declared in London that he felt sure a Jewish state would be created in the Holy Land.

(A British government source said at the same time that Palestine was facing martial law or a small-scale war, adding that one more incident there "might blow the lid off." Conferences on the future of the strife-torn Holy Land, upto now boycotted by the Jews and Palestine Arabs are scheduled to be resumed in London Jan. 21.)

Blows Struck

Official and unofficial reports gave this picture of the blows struck by the underground:

At Tiberias, on the Sea of Gallilee 75 miles northeast of Jerusalem, the attackers used two home-made flame throwers in an assault on a military car park, but were beaten off.

At Kiryat Haim, in the vicinity of Haifa, one British officer was killed and at least five wounded.

British military headquarters in a Jewish section in western Jerusalem and in Tel Aviv were attacked by persons using grenades and automatic weapons. Ten persons were wounded in Tel Aviv and three in Citurs.

Heavy firing in the centre of Jerusalem followed the attack there, but no casualties were reported.

Another flame thrower was used in Jerusalem, where a police patrol car was attacked with fire, but without casualties. At Hedera an attempt was made to blast the army fire station An Arab constable was wounded.

Three grenades were thrown at R.A.F. billets in the street of the Prophets in Jerusalem. There were no casualties.

A number of British soldiers were hurt as a result of road mines in scattered areas of the Holy Land. Two policemen were hurt when their radio car was blown up at Sarona.

Man Loses Hands Assisting Friend

New York, Jan. 3 (AP) — Ernest Belladonna's favor for a pal in a Brooklyn macaroni factory cost him both hands.

When his friend came to work and said he had forgotten his locker keys, Bellrdonna said:

"Well, you hustle home and get them and I'll run your machine.

Belladonna was inserting a die in the machine when a cutting blade fell on his wrists. His hands were amputated an hour later.

Hitchhiking Little Penguin Adopted By Sub's Crew

The sub's crew, delighted with his antics, has made him mascot.

Cosmo zoomed aboard the sub Tuesday morning as the craft proceeded through ice floes with other ships in the Antarctic expedition. Since then he has been enjoying a free ride at United States Navy expense.

The 18-inch tall penguin refuses tidbits offered him by the crew, preferring to dive overboard and feast on shrimp. Unable to fly, he boards the sub with a hop out of the water.

Admiral Cruzen, using a helicopter and the ice breaker North Wind, hunted an open lane to take his fleet of five ships on southward.

Bernard Shaw Says He is "Extinct"

London, Jan. 3—(AP)—George Bernard Shaw is "extinct," he said today.

The 90-year-old playwright and stage, asked to support a movement for amnesty for Irish political prisoners, replied:

"It is a waste of your time and energy sending the enclosure to an old man of 90 who has retired from political life and whose name cannot add any weight to your own.

"Strike me off your active list as extinct."

CHEESE PRODUCERS TO HOLD ANNUAL MEETING IN TORONTO

Fourteenth annual meeting of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association is scheduled to take place at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto on January 7th and 8th at which besides the election of officers for the new year, addresses by ranking dairy officials will be heard.

Secretary treasurer of the organization Mr. S. L. Joss of Belleville will give his report on Tuesday morning while at the annual banquet Tuesday evening Dr. H. Barton, deputy minister of agriculture, Ottawa, will be the guest speaker. Election of officers will take place on Wednesday afternoon. Current president of the association is W. O. Coon of Elgin, Ontario.

BEVERAGE ROOM HOURS EXTENDED

New regulations extending the hours of sale were introduced on New Year's day. Beverage rooms remained open from noon until 6.30, then closed till 8. Then they re-opened till midnight.

Introduction of the new hours came as a surprise to many patrons, hotel proprietors reported today, but the majority greeted the change with approval. The number of patrons, it was stated, was not large because many left as the usual closing hours approached.

INJURED IN FALL

John Ellis, 11 Albion Street, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital on Thursday evening suffering with a possible fracture of the lower right leg. The fifty-seven-year-old man slipped and fell near his home, and was later taken to hospital. He is under the care of Dr. Van Blakslee, and his condition today was reported favorable.

POLICE COURT

Pleading guilty to a charge of breaking and entering the Vanity Fair and to stealing $25 in cash, Dominico Biello, 19, of Montreal, was sentenced to two months in the county jail when he appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills in city police court Friday morning.

The offense took place prior to Christmas with the accused being arrested and in custody since December 24th. Biello also faced a drunk charge and was assessed the customary $13 fine or in default will serve 10 days "on the hill."

Although the morning's court docket was a lengthy one, proceedings were comparatively short as numerous charges of breaking and entering laid against several local youths, were again laid over until a later court.

21.8 Inches Snow Fell in December

Despite the fact that the first part of the month of December was anything but typical of Canadian winter, "Old Man Winter" got in for a few below-the-belt punches just before the year's end.

According to statistics kept by officials at the Belleville Water Purification Plant, the past month saw a total of 21.8 inches of snow, while the temperature dropped to a frigid nine below zero. This compared with only 3.2 inches of snow in December, 1945, and a minimum of 4 below.

Total precipitation during the past month was 3.76 inches, including 1.58 inches of rain, while the maximum temperature recorded was 53 degrees, compared with the 43 degrees one year ago. The mean temperature for December, 1946, was 25 degrees compared with 20 degrees in 1945.

Three Members Of Family Recover From Exposure

Swift Current, Sask., Jan. 3—(CP)—Three members of a MacMahon, Sask., family are recovering in hospital here today from exposure, suffered when they were lost for 15 hours in a blizzard with 30 degrees below zero temperatures in this southwestern Saskatchewan district.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Riemer and their nine-year-old daughter Irene were found by search parties Dec. 27 only a mile from their home, after they were reported missing following Boxing Day visits to neighbors.

The family was stranded when the horse pulling their sleigh became exhausted as they battled through the blizzard towards their home.

Mr. Riemer left his wife and daughter in the sleigh in an attempt to find assistance but collapsed when he reached an abandoned shack.

All three were badly frozen but were reported to be "improving."

Triplets Join Family — Mr. and Mrs. William Davidson, father and mother of triplets in the Red Cross Hospital at Bancroft, are seen with their six children ranging up to 13 years of age. They live in isolated cabin 10 miles north of Maynooth.

Davidson Triplets Reported Doing Well; Bancroft Rallies To Assistance of Parents

Bancroft, (Special.) — Three chubby bundles of humanity crowed lustily in their cots in the Red Cross Hospital nursery here today, unaware that their entrance into the world caused a mild furore in the village, county and province.

The "Three D's" as they have been affectionately dubbed by a proud village and district populace, are doing very nicely, thank you, while their mother, still a trifle bewildered at the sudden unexpected triple increase to her family of six, is progressing favorably.

The father, William Davidson, a trapper living three miles south of Maynooth, has gone to his lonely log cabin to take care of his family of six children, and to wonder how he is going to solve a terrific housing problem.

One-Room Cabin

For the compact little log cabin home has only one room and for some time has been more or less bulging to house the eight members of the Davidson family.

Now, with the arrival of the "Three D's", called such because they have been named Donald, Doreen and Douglas, the trapper has a real problem on his hands.

Davidson, who drove his wife through weather with the thermometer registering 37 degrees below zero to the Red Cross Hospital here on Tuesday, was pleased when the first baby was born and that his wife was doing well.

Came the second at five minutes past midnight, just after the New Year was born, and the trapper, startled, exclaimed, "No, not another." When the third baby arrived at 12.10 a.m., Jan. 1, he exclaimed, "What am I going to do?"

Mother Doubted News.

According to Dr. O. W. Anderson, who brought the tiny trio into the world, Mrs. Davidson was "horrified to learn she had given birth to triplets. She doubted that they were her children. However, she soon got over that and was very happy with her babies. Now she loves them."

The residents of this North Hastings village are inordinately proud of belonging to a community that has the honor of not only bringing the first triplets of 1947 to the world but the first "Canadians" called such under the new act of Parliament which came into force on New Year's Day.

Proudly one of them exclaimed today: "Bancroft might be the 'sticks' as outsiders term us, but when it comes to delivering the goods, they can take off their hats to the sturdy northerners of Hastings County and to the good country doctor for bringing into the world the first 'new Canadians' and the first triplets of 1947 to Ontario."

And the good people of the north country have rallied to the aid of the Davidson family and its new arrivals.

Layettes Ordered.

Dr. Roland Haryett, president of the Bancroft Lions Club, has contacted Lion Harold Skuce, chairman of the welfare committee, and instructed him to procure three complete layettes for the new babies, also appropriate clothing for the young mother.

The thirty-eight-year-old father of the triplets left Hamilton, Ont., with his wife and family of six last June after the strike of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company in that city left him without work. They packed off to a home near Maynooth where he engaged in logging work and running a trapline.

His wife is a daughter of Mrs. James Upson, Hamilton, who has 20 grandchildren including the triplets.

No Other Multiple Births.

There were no previous multiple births in the Upson family although Mrs. Upson herself had 16 children, 12 of whom are still living. She disclosed that two daughters-in-law are expecting and added, "I'm wondering if there'll be threes there."

Mrs. Davidson, who is 36 years of age, has six other children, three of whom were born while they lived in the Maynooth country in past years. They are Samuel, 16 years; William, 15; Ellen, 13; James, 6; Mary, 4 and Benny, the youngest until the triplets arrived, about 2.

Children Sang Carols, Gave Funds to Hospitals

They are Dick Latta, Arlene Dickie, Beatrice and Doreen Wright. These youngsters possessed of splendid voices imitated the famous waifs of England, and toured the city singing Christmas carols outside residences.

Their efforts were rewarded. Master Latta and Arlene Dickie, singing as a twosome, collected $5.00 which they sent to the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, while young Dickie, Arlene, Beatrice and Doreen Wright, singing as a quartet, raised $4.75 which they sent to wounded soldiers in Christie Street Hospital, Toronto.

More Plumbing Fixtures for 1947

Ottawa, Jan. 3 (CP).—Canadian builders will find it easier in 1947 to obtain needed plumbing and heating equipment, official sources said today on the basis of a survey just completed among manufacturers.

One spokesman said a 25-per cent over-all increase probably would be shown in output of valves, fittings, pipe, pumps, plumbing fixtures, heating boilers and radiation supplies. Improvement would be particularly noticeable in the last six months of the year when production reached its 1947 peak.

Production of boilers and furnaces was expected to advance from 25 to 33 per cent while the output of stoves and fans also was said to be due for a substantial increase.

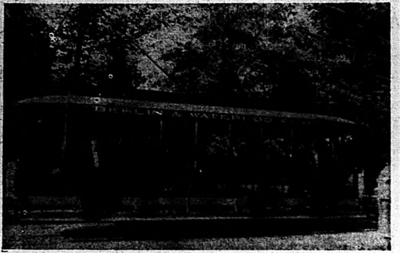
KITCHENER GETS FIRST NEW TROLLEY COACHES

One of the fleet of new trolley coaches, first in Ontario, which replaced the antiquated Kitchener-Waterloo street car system New Year's Day. The province-wide ice storm crippled the tram system four days before the coaches went into operation.



This type of open-air "Toonerville Trolley" operated between Kitchener and Waterloo in the summer for many years.

Mercy Mission To Ice-Bound Hamlet Completed

Charlottetown, Jan. 3—(CP)—The government ice-breaker Saurel completed its mercy mission to the ice-bound hamlet of Natashquan, Que., yesterday after a freezing gale in the Gulf of St. Lawrence had prevented it from reaching its destination in time to bring the 100 villagers their New Year's dinners.

A brief message from the 1,100-ton vessel last night said ice and gales had caused a two-day delay as it steamed northward with 40 tons of supplies for the village on the north shore of the Gulf which was reported short of food.

Transport Department officials had hoped that the Saurel, taking over delivery of the supplies after ice turned back a coastal vessel, would reach the village in time to bring New Year's cheer to the fishermen, loggers and trappers who had already missed their Christmas turkeys.

But Capt. C. A. Chouinard reported his ship had bucked winds of gale force since leaving Charlottetown Monday. Wednesday night she was forced to take shelter in the lee of Anticosti Island as ice formed on her sides.

As the wind slackened the Saurel turned about and headed across the 25 miles of open water towards the village which lies just north of Anticosti's eastern tip.

Within sight of Natashquan ice caused another delay and supplies which would normally have been unloaded at a small wharf had to be carried across the ice by the villagers.

Last night the Saurel was lying close to the ice pack offshore waiting for daylight to complete the unloading of its cargo.

Capt. Chouinard's message did not say how desperate the village was for food. But the Saurel was sent out after the steamship company, whose coaster was turned back a week before Christmas on its last voyage of the season, convinced the Department of Transport that the emergency warranted sending the ice-breaker.

Thurlow Junior Farmers Meet

Thurlow—The December meeting of the Thurlow Junior Farmers was held in Cannifton Township Hall on Monday, December 30th. Two new members, John and Rodger Robson, joined the club, increasing the roll call to ninety.

The correspondence in connection with the various Junior Farmer Conferences being held in Ontario was read by the secretary, Carl Thompson. The delegates to the Kemptville Junior Farmer Conference are—Carl Thompson and Douglas Sills; to the Toronto Conference on January 8th—Ross Livingston and Don Sills.

It was decided that the club would charge $1.00 per couple, with no lunch, at the dance which they are holding on January 9th in the Community Hall, Stirling.

It was decided that at the close of their club's first active year that they would hold a banquet for which some arrangements have been made.

It was moved by Joe Bradden seconded by Carl Haynes, that the program for the banquet be left in the hands of the executive.

The meeting was addressed by Mr. Roscoe Robson, M.L.A., who encouraged the members of the club to vote if they were eligible and to encourage others to vote if they themselves were not at the municipal elections.

Mr. Harry W. Burns, Assistant Agricultural Representative for Hastings County, outlined a program which the club might follow for the year 1947. It was moved by Clayton Ritz, seconded by Ronald Badgley that the club adopt this suggested program. The program committee for January, February and April were then named and the topics for their addresses were then given out.

Meyer Considered Model Prisoner At Dorchester

Dorchester, N.B., Jan. 3—(CP)—A year after his death sentence for responsibility in the murder of Canadian troops was commuted to life imprisonment, German General Kurt Meyer is working here in the library of the Maritime Penitentiary where he has come to be regarded as "a model prisoner" by officials.

Prison officials have declined to be quoted on Meyer's activities since he arrived in Canada last spring, preferring he be allowed to slip normally into the daily routine of the institution.

It was learned today, however, that Meyer has been making strides in his study of English and has been getting along well with fellow workers with whom he shares the duties of book-binding, classification and general library tasks.

He was assigned to the library after a study of his talents and inclinations. One source told The Canadian Press Meyer had the highest intelligence quotient of any of the prisoners at the time of his entry.

He was described as a co-operative prisoner and one so used to dealing out discipline that he had learned to accept it.

It was learned that Meyer has not been known to discuss with either officials or fellow prisoners the political beliefs which inspired the fanatical S.S. troops he commanded and for whose acts he is serving a life sentence.

Almost exactly a year ago the former S. S. divisional commander was sentenced to death by hanging after a Canadian court martial convicted him of responsibility for the murder of 18 Canadian prisoners of his troops in the early invasion fighting in France.

That sentence was passed Dec. 28, 1945, but on New Year's Day, 1946, it was announced his sentence had been commuted to life imprisonment in Canada.

He was brought to the Dominion, landing at Halifax April 30, and was whisked away to Dorchester, almost before the news of his arrival in Canada had leaked out.

Mother Leads 7 Children To Safety From Fire

Noranda, Que., Jan. 3 — (CP)—As flames caused by an oil-stove explosion swept through her frame home, a mother led her 7 children to safety before firemen arrived to battle the blaze in 22-below zero weather.

Shortly after the fire started Wednesday night, Rene Clermont, father of the children returned from his job in a nearby mine, and not knowing his wife and family were safe, struggled with firemen to gain admittance to the building.

The Noranda Fire Department was extinguishing a chimney fire when the alarm was sounded and they did arrive at the Clermont residence, firemen found the nearest hydrant frozen and hose had to be stretched for 500 feet.

Fire centred on the front section of the building but was rapidly sweeping toward the rear when Mrs. Clermont guided her children through a back door.

30 Homeless In Ottawa Fire

Ottawa, Jan. 3 (CP) — Fire which broke out late last night in the Corona Apartments on Daley Avenue in Ottawa's Sandy Hill district left 30 persons homeless today.

At an early hour today firemen reported the blaze under control and said there were no injuries.

The fire apparently broke out in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Royal, and by the time firemen reached the scene smoke was billowing from the fourth floor of the four-storey building.

Absent from the premises when the fire broke out were Mrs. Robert Keddy and Mr. A. E. Lefebvre, who was visiting his wife in hospital, where she recently gave birth to twins. Mrs. Keddy had planned to leave today with her husband to live in Toronto.

Two firemen narrowly escaped injury at the height of the blaze when a 20-foot length of burning eaves crashed to the ground while the men were attempting to place a ladder against the side of the building.

A light wind, bearing some snow hampered firefighters as the families attempted to remove their belongings into the near-zero weather.

SCOTLAND PLANS TO REHABILITATE HIGHLAND COUNTY

Poverty-Stricken Areas Are Made Test Case in Broad Experiment to Aid Dying Communities

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Cromarty Scotland, —(CP)—A plan to make part of poverty-stricken Ross and Cromarty, one of Scotland's biggest countries, a "test-case" experiment in West Highland rehabilitation is put forward by the county council.

Already the health department is co-operating in a survey of conditions in the west coast Applecross area with its sparse population and primitive communcations. The plan is to extend the study to other mainland districts and try to find a way to solve Highland difficulties.

The dual problem is to overcome congestion in the Isle of Lewis and the population collapse in parishes of the northwest mainland.

Even though the east fringe has fertile soil and some industry only Dingwall and Invergordon among the four biggest towns have shown population growth during the last 90 years. Cromarty has declined rapidly through the failure of the herring fishery and a strong inclination in Scotlnd toward economic centralization.

The couny council has asked the government to direct new industry into a proposed new town in the Invergordon area and plans reconstruction of new roads, housing, social centres and water and drainage schemes along the eastern seaboard.

Build Generating Station

The north of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board is building a big generating station at Loch Fannich in mid-county and smaller units to bring electricity to the western coast. The forestry commission is already established there and the herring industry board contemplates making the Kyle of Lochalsh a fishing port.

Lewis has an eye on the great new airport built beside Stornoway for military purposes and already being used by an infrequent civil air service to the mainland.

But most of the enterprises now in sight are completely unrelated; and they do almost nothing to meet the land hunger of Lewis and the depopulation of the western mainland.

Congestion is at its worst around Stornoway where the housing shortage is so critical that the town council will not consider applications for houses from any outsider.

In contrast, a survey of crofter housing on the mainland showed there are almost no able-bodied residents between the ages of 18 and 50 in the coastal area One house in five is empty. In all Gairloch parish there are only 30 men of military age when the Second World War began—less than one-quarter of the number who joined the Seaforth Highlands in one day in 1914. Twenty years ago were 24 children in the school at Kishorn, at the of Loch Carron. Now there are six.

On Applecross peninsula, 60 per cent of all houses are unfit for habitation, judged by normal municipal standards.

These are the problems which Ross and Cromarty hope can be solved if its "test-case" experiment is carried out.

Consumers Encouraged

It has been taken for granted by consumers that sugar rationing will have to be carried on for some time. It is unlikely that anyone thought that the end of the system was at hand. So in the statement of the former deputy sugar controller for Canada, H. J. Hobbins, the other day that Canadians can look ahead to one more year under control, there is a sense of satisfaction by his forecast that there will be progressive advances in the amount of sugar rationed during the present year and that the end of 1947 will see Canada, while somewhat dependent on the American situation, with stocks of the product at levels that prevailed before the war.

Sugar like milk and butter is a prime essential in the food needs of a country and that is more and more emphasized by the ration system, such restrictions of this kind have the quality of attracting attention to the food that is in shortage.

Travel To Be Resumed

As the greatest war in history is steadily receding into the past and history and as nations have opportunity for recuperation after the great burdens they bore in the years of struggle, come the signs that the nations abroad are preparing for the influx of tourists even in the present year. Countries in Europe enjoyed the visit of travellers in the past and made of this trade a gigantic business. Signs are not wanting now that travel is returning to a state of normalcy in Britain and on the Continent, so that when travel officials say that they expect this year will see the greatest travel movement in years, they will be believed. This prediction they base on the improvement of the train, bus and plane services in Europe, though train schedules are somewhat slower than before the war but as equipment is reconditioned, improvement will be the result and that the flow of travel will follow. Plane and bus services in Europe and Britain are being restored to regularity. Hotel accommodation of course is in demand but in many haunts of tourists the accommodation situation is said to be normal. As for food, meals in restaurants and hotels are adequate and prices are within bounds, it is said.

Europe accordingly is showing that she is recovering from the strain and the outlay of war. The travellers help these countries find their way to stability.

Snow And Snow Removal

How quickly man becomes accustomed to and dependent upon the contributions of inventions to the lightening of labor is seen here in the interest which the use of the snowplow on sidewalks has aroused. On every hand is evident the readiness of residents to accept the help of the plow on one of the tasks few men like—clearing walks of snow.

Winter has set in in earnest this season though snowstorms have fortunately been delayed so that the early part of winter was almost free of snow except for several light falls of snow which soon disappeared. Steadiness of the cold weather since Christmas and of heavy snowfall during the past week have drawn attention to mechanical clearing of walks as demonstrated by the sidewalk plow which last winter for the first time was put into service and gave the people an opportunity to appreciate what a labor-saver mechanical equipment of this kind has proven to be.

Modern transportation needs paved the way, the road plow has for years been serving communities which saw the advantage of this machinery in keeping traffic open on the roadways.

In these days with the necessity of clearance of the roads of snow which would impede traffic, it is accepted that snow should be removed at the earliest possible time. With plows working on road clearance, it was a natural result to call in the use of the sidewalk plow.

In other days snow removal by the use of the shovel was accepted as a necessity and duty. Today man has learned the lesson that science and invention have provided in machinery that will lift this burden from the city dweller.

Man can thank the motorcar for this to a great extent. Motors require fairly good roads but roads if covered deep in snow make travel very difficult and slow with the natural result that it is advisable that snow be removed from streets in business sections so that the business of the community and the country may be kept moving.

Increase Scientific Training

An important report just placed before the Chancellor of the Exchequer by the Parliamentary and Scientific Committee, recommends the expansion of existing university facilities in Britain involving a capital expenditure of $400,000,000. The main object of this scheme is to achieve an increase of fully qualified United Kingdom scientists from the present number of 55,000 to at least 90,000 in order to meet the demand for additional scientific manpower caused by the extensive prospective scientific developments envisaged in Britain as part of the overall reconstruction program. It is intended that the target set at 90,000 shall be reached in ten years, but the committee emphasizes that quality must be of first importance in scientific work, and this must on no account be sacrificed to the object of achieving the target by 1955.

Comfort

This is just what somebody—don't ask us who—has been waiting for, says The Christian Science Monitor. It looks like a clock and works like a thermometer. It registers both heat and humidity. All to the end that it may tell you what you might never know—that is, whether you are comfortable or not.

Advertising of this gadget now, before the worst of the northern winter has set in, should transform the family scene by next spring. Never again an interchange in which Grandma declares she's sweltering, and Niece complains that for her part she's frostbitten, while Sonny and Susie, Mother and Dad, take up climatic positions in between.

Set the "comfort register" on the mantel. Let the family look at it together. If it says the temperature is right and the humidity right, then what does it matter what anyone says? Can't you see the family going back to their chairs one by one, long faces suddenly glowing with contentment?

World's Largest Door

The largest door in the world will be fitted to the new aircraft assembly hall at Filton, Bristol, which has been built to house the Brabazon Mark I aircraft. The door is 1,045 feet across and 65 feet 9 inches high. It weighs 200 tons and can be thrown open in two minutes. The Brabazon, the world's biggest airliner, is expected to go into service in 1951. The Mark I prototype with piston engines will probably fly in the summer of next year, and will be followed by a second prototype with propeller turbine engine.

Device Used Against Smuggling

Another wartime device originated by Britain also has a peacetime role. The Customs and Excise authorities are assembling a fleet of trawlers and minesweepers especially equipped with Rada—an invention by Britain which played so vital a part in wartime aeronautics—to defeat smuggling. Radar gear will enable Customs' ships to detect smugglers' craft in the thickest fog and overhaul them when otherwise they would be helpless from poor visibility.

An artificial hand with which a disabled person can write easily and clearly has been developed in Britain. It has a jointed thumb worked by shoulder action which presses against the tips of the first two fingers. The Ministry of Pensions' limb-fitting centre in London, which is responsible for this new artificial hand, is not yet satisfied however. It is now trying to devise a still more serviceable mechanism which will enable all the fingers in the hand to move.

ADVICE TO A YOUNG WIFE

If he starts to talk of mother and the pies she used to bake;
If you hear him sadly sighing for a chocolate layer cake;
If the food his stomach's craving, as he likes it you would cook;
You can learn how mother did it, just by following the book.

If you've ventured into marriage without being oven-wise,
To discover that your husband's fond of mince and apple pies;
If upon his face at mealtimes there's a disappointed look,
You can win him back to smiling just by following the book.

If your mother didn't teach you all the arts of pot and pan,
And you find you have to feed him if you want to please a man,
There are volumes for that purpose. Keep one handy on a hook.
You can make those apple fritters, just by following the book.

Washington Spotlight

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Jan. 3 (CP) — A stocky, 35-year-old Lithuanian-born Hebrew, with the fire and passion of a militant crusader, left here the other day for Paris to direct a war against British rule in Palestine.

He is Peter Bergson, a citizen of Palestine who has been in the United States nearly seven years organizing for the establishment of a Hebrew nation in Palestine.

Bergson is taken seriously by "The Hebrew Committee of National Liberation" which he organized and which he claims has a membership of 150,000 Americans of all denominations.

Its membership is known to contain many whose persons and whose work have gained the high admiration of American people. Writers, artists and politicians are included.

The committee occupies a small mansion in "Embassy Row" on Massachusetts Avenue, which it hopes one day will be the Hebrew Embassy in Washington.

Bergson was born in Lithuania, near Kruk, 35 years ago. When an infant his family, escaping from a pogrom, took him to Palestine. He was educated in Jerusalem and virtually all his adult life has been spent in the fight for establishment of a Jewish nation in the Holy Land.

Before the war he had been operating in central Europe with forces seeking to ameliorate the plight of Hebrews subjected to restrictions and persecutions arising from National Anti-Semitism. He got out of Europe in 1939 and came to the United States. He travels on a passport issued by the British Palestine authority.

He has just left for Paris to head a "special office which is preparing the establishment of a government in exile of the Hebrew Republic of Palestine."

Before leaving Washington he virtually placed himself in a state of militant warfare against British authorities—also against other Hebrew or Jewish agencies not affiliated with his liberation committee.

His aim, he said, was to "transform the present sporadic struggle in Palestine into a full-fledged active force for National Liberation."

The resistance forces in Palestine are "soon to be formed into a unified body," since "the time for pleading and begging for British decency and common sense is over."

He compared current events in Palestine with the American Revolution and forecast that within a couple of years "Palestine will be a free and happy land."

Bergson did not refer to the peaceful objectives of the United Nations nor to the practical obstacles which have made the Palestine issue one of the most difficult problems of the times.

As the United States nursed its second consecutive peacetime New Year hangover and individuals checked up on the cost of the celebration, the Chamber of Commerce offered some sobering figures on national finance, such as: Estimated 1947 Federal government expenditures will be 60 times the figure for 1916; they will be more than was spent for all the years from 1921 to 1930 inclusive; since 1933 corporations have paid more in taxes each year than in dividends to the stockholders, and in some instances have paid more to the tax collector than to their employees

Contributions In Nov. Reached All-Time High

Ottawa, Jan. 3. (CP)—Contributions of the employers and employees of the Unemployment Insurance Fund in November reached an all-time high of $7,519,961, the Unemployment Insurance Commission announced today.

Previous record month was October, 1946, when these contributions were $934,387 less.

The November increase was largely accounted for by contributions by Dominion Government Departments. The Transport Department contributed $873,500 as payment against certain wartime service for which credit for Unemployment Insurance is given free to seamen by the government. This payment takes care of practically all service of this type which now is credited to Merchant Seamen.

A second payment was an amount of $921,415 paid by the Veterans' Affairs Department for time spent with the armed forces allowed to veterans under certain conditions, after they become established in insurable employment. These payments by D.V.A. are made monthly but were particularly high in November.

Total revenues of the fund during November were $9,842,168, including $1,503,919 contributed by the Dominion Government as its monthly share and $818,286 under the heading of "interest on investments and profit on sale of securities."

Benefit payments to insurable workers unemployed amounted to $2,233,378 in November, a reduction of $228,102 from the previous month.

Under the Unemployment Insurance Act, the Dominion pays all costs ad administering Unemployment Insurance and the National Employment Service, in addition to its share of one-fifth of the amount of contributions paid into the fund by employers and employees, this means that no expenses incurred in the management of Unemployment Insurance are charged to the fund

95 P.C. WAR VETS

75,000 on Pension.

In the pension commission the number of disability and dependant pensions in force on account of veterans of the recent war had increased from 45,216 at the end of December, 1945, to 75,000.

"We have had very few complaints in spite of the terrific load thrown on the commission during the past 12 months," Mr. Mackenzie said.

He said "there were times early in the year when our treatment facilities were almost overloaded, and when our medical staff faced a load which seemed almost impossible. While there were of necessity some delays, few of these were serious. The doctor-of-choice plan was adopted, which permitted a certain amount of treatment from a man's personal physician. This greatly relieved our own facilities.

"A great deal of new hospital construction was completed, and we face 1947 with very few serious problems from a treatment stand-point."

Consolidate Legislation.

One of the accomplishments was consolidation of all veteran legislation into the veterans charter through the work of the parliamentary committee on veterans affairs.

The Minister said he had few worries in regard to employment of veterans. Employers had far exceeded the department's expectations in giving veterans opportunity. They had also shown a sympathetic understanding of the philosophy of employing veterans with physical disabilities, with the result that most of the disability cases were being absorbed into employment where they were not under any economic handicap.

The department was conducting a steady educational campaign on behalf of older veterans and groups of citizens across the country were giving it excellent support in seeking jobs for them . . .

He was optimistic that the majority of the employable older veterans would be absorbed into peacetime positions.

"As we enter a new year we see little ahead to cause serious concern," Mr. Mackenzie said.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

ARTIFICIAL DEXTERITY AND NERVOUSNESS

Wait, now, I apologize at the outset for using the word "nervousness." Frankly I don't know what "nervousness" means, but I use it here to imply in a general way some of the following, to wit, restlessness, fussiness, impatience, uneasiness, lack of stability.

It has been my observation — of course I know no more about this than any doctor knows and, so far as I know, nobody else does— it has been my observation that persons who have had two-handed training, even though only as they may get it by practicing such things as writing, drawing, painting, hammering, sawing, carving with right and left hand alternatively, are likely to be calm, confident, easy to get along with, whether they are particularly talented or not. On the other hand it has been my observation that naturally left-handed persons who have not been permitted to use the left hand for such fine work, are likely to suffer from some speech impediment if not actual stuttering or stammering, and even though they have no noticeable difficulty in speaking they are likely to be of awkward bearing, frustrated, difficult to get along with.

For instance there is the X family. Mr. X is so hard to talk to or play with that you tend to evade the man when you can. But Mrs. X is such pleasant company that you enjoy meeting her for a casual chat or for an evening—with Mrs. X present the neutral or unpleasing personality of Mr. X is not noticeable.

Now Mr. X was naturally left-handed as a child but his parents and teachers compelled him to use the right hand for writing and drawing, although he has always used the left hand for other things. Mrs. X can and does write equally well with either hand, and has enough skills in various ways to enable her to entertain or amuse her friends and derive plenty of fun out of it herself, such as playing piano, singing, whistling and especially reciting anecdotes and folk stories. Mrs. X is so much at ease that she puts everybody around her at ease, whereas her fidgeting husband, poor geek, seems always about to take off and he contrives to make you feel you are detaining him from important business elsewhere. The X children, from what I have seen of them, happily take after their mom, at least one son does—I'm not so well acquainted with the rest of the family.

All this, remember, is just my belief. As I have said before, I don't know anything about it, and I doubt if anybody knows anything about it.

Save Your Teeth

Dentist said I have a bad case of pyorrhea and I must have at least eight of my back teeth pulled. Another dentist said they are not so bad, in fact he didn't even take an X-ray. I am worried.

(Mrs. D. R. W.)

Answer—My advice is that you have your physician consult with your dentist and do not sacrifice a tooth without the agreement of them both that the tooth is beyond repair or usefulness. In the booklet "Save Your Teeth" "dead teeth" and "pyorrhea" are discussed in detail. For a copy send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why is it called Caesarean operation?

The removal of a child from the mother's womb by cutting the walls of the abdomen when natural delivery is impossible is known in obstetrics as a "Caesarean" operation, birth or section.

The popular and most probable explanation is that the name was suggested by a legend that Julius Caesar was brought into the world by this method.

Pliny the Elder and other Roman writers refer to Caesarean operations in connection with the births of Scipio Africanus, Manlius and several other ancient Romans, but they do not say that Julius Caesar was born in that manner, and there seems to be good reason for believing his birth was natural.

In Caesar's day the Caesarean section — delivering a child through a cut in the front of the abdomen — was not performed on living women. An early Roman law required that such an operation should be performed on every pregnant woman who died. Later the operation was also performed on pregnant women at the point of death. At first the operation was resorted to solely as a religious measure in the interest of the unborn child after the life of the mother had been despaired of. The law required that an unborn child should be removed from a dead mother and buried or cremated separately even when there was no prospect of saving its life.

Julius Caesar's mother Julia lived many years after his birth and he wrote numerous letters to her.

Nevertheless there was an early tradition that Caesar was born by what is known as Caesarean section. This popular belief was illustrated in an edition of Suetonius's works published in 1506. Accordingly it may be, as in many other cases, that the name was derived from a legend that was untrue.

Some writers believe the name goes back further than Julius Caesar. They assert that children delivered in this manner were known among the Romans as "Caesones," and that "Caesar" as a family name was first applied to a person so born and so known.

Other writers hold that in its obstetrical sense "Caesarean" is merely a corruption of Latin "caesus," past participle of "caedure," to cut, "caesura," literally meaning 'a cutting," being derived from the same source. There is, however, nothing in the etymological history of the word to indicate that it had such a derivation or that its form was ever anything except that of an adjective formed from the proper name "Caesar."

A still weaker theory is that the operation received its name from the fact that the "lex regia" under the Roman kings became "lex Caesare" under the Roman emperors.

V.O.N. News

With wintry weather having little influence on the attendance, the weekly Child Welfare Conferences held each Friday by the Victorian Order of Nurses in the Kiwanis Centre steadily grow as their value in contributing to the health of children from babyhood is recognized more and more by mothers and fathers in the city. Here the mother receives expert advise on health matters of her little one. The child's progress is carefully watched, with accurate records being maintained. When medical advice is necessary, the mother is recommended to take her baby to her own doctor.

Aside from the health value of attending the clinic, the weekly visits often bring together mothers who are strangers in the city and who can chat with each other on topics of which they are most interested. Attendance represents a cross section of the city and an interesting addition to the gatherings in recent years are the servicemen's wives who come from other lands. The intelligent interest shown in health matters by the mothers who are regular attendants at the clinics promises well for the sturdiness of their boys and girls.

Smooth Dinner Gown

By PRUNELLA WOOD

ADRIAN designed this handsome smooth dinner gown for Joan Crawford, doing his best for an Academy Award winner. It is a two-piece model, palest pink crepe studded with a Milky Way motif in reverse, as it were, since the vari-sized sequins are black, not blazing white.

This model is of the type which serves us well in the north or at a warm sunny resort for evening doings, and incidentally, is particularly attractive for the hostess in her own house.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Your hands are washed and dried a dozen times a day

Don't Let Your Hands Grow Old

Hands are no problem to Mrs. Useless. She has plenty of leisure for sessions at the beauty shop, never has to flick the dust cloth over furniture or give the windows a shine. The weekly manicure, with an occasional arm and hand massage, keeps her in form.

Hands are the number one beauty worry of the woman who must juggle pots and pans, wash out baby clothes, dig into the dark recesses of the kitchen range and fight dirt. The dark lines in the knuckles stand for good deeds, and the courage with which a brave woman faces her daily job.

Redness, rough surface, prominent veins, are blemishes caused by hot or cold water, by contact with strong cleaning agents, by not frictioning oil into the skin to make up for the lack of natural oil.

In the winter season, especially, it is vitally necessary to use a hand lotion, not only at bed time, but also during the day. Preparations that disappear in a few minutes will not interfere with work. They counteract the effects of grime and strong soaps. Every boss of the menage should have a bottle of one of these delightful aids in the kitchen and in every bathroom.

After doing heavy work, the homemaker can soften her hands by adding cornmeal to the soap suds when washing them. The tiny grains grind the dust from knuckle creases; the starchy content soothes the skin surface. The cutaneous covering of the hands is no different from that of the face. It has the same texture, has just as much need of petting, massaging, lubricating. At least twice a week the hands should be frictioned with a cream of some sort. Lamoline is an excellent medium. Get a tube at your drugstore; apply it after you have given your complexion its cosmetic night cap. Work diligently on the knuckles. Friction the fingernails and the surrounding cuticle. You will not be bothered with hangnails if you use this treatment regularly

We cannot change the contour of the hands, nor should their contour bother us. Dainty little hands, like feet, crammed into number three shoes, do not conform with the general make-up of the modern woman. But we can "dress" our hands by keeping them beautifully white and young looking, by giving fastidious care of the fingernails.

Protection is the first need. One often observes the combination of young face and old hands. The face gets all the attention, when it really needs it less than the hands, that are subjected dozens of times a day to casual washing and careless drying.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The Problem of the Stay-At-Home Husband

One of the problems deposited most frequently in the lap of a department like this concerns that familiar character "The Tired Business Man."

Here he is again, distressing still another young wife who'd like, and should of course have, a little normal recreation in her husband's company but can't get any co-operation from him toward that end.

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am a young married woman of 26, and my husband is 28. We have been married eight years, and have four lovely children of whom both of us are very proud. My husband is a very good family man, and he doesn't smoke, and drinks very little, and only in the house.

"Before our marriage, we knew each other for about five years. My problem is this: he doesn't want to go out any place after he comes home from work, and he doesn't work hard. He doesn't like to dance or go visiting or to the movies. Every time I make an appointment he gets mad and we have a fight, and it ends up he stays home. But if he makes an appointment, he expects me to keep it.

"While he was in the service, in all his letters he kept saying how he wished he was home to take me here and there, and where he would take me when he did get home. But when he got home, he forgot all about it. We are young and have to have some recreation. Would appreciate any advice you could give me.

"E. W."

Now first of all, I wonder if this husband's attitude—or maybe his temperament or disposition—has changed from what it was before he went to war. "E. W." doesn't say whether this is a new problem that has arisen since his discharge from service, or whether it is one with which she has always had to cope.

If her husband always acted this way, and is only being his natural self when he refuses to give her a fair deal in the matter of recreation, that is one thing. If it is an attitude that has only shown itself since he got home from the war, it is something else again. In the first case, the condition is a deep-seated personality trait. In the second instance, it might be only a temporary mood that is a hangover from his war experiences; a phase in his readjustment to civilian life.

Which type of problem is it that you have here, "E. W.?" That's the first point to be considered in deciding on a program.

Let's say it's your husband's normal way of behaving to refuse to be fair in carrying out the normal social activities that should be a part of every couple's life. What are you going to do about it?

Well, first, I think you're going to ask him, some evening, or some Sunday, when he's feeling good, if he won't talk the whole thing over with you. Even though he seems to act in such an unreasonable manner, some of the things you say about him give me the impression that he's intelligent enough to agree at least to this. Then, you're going to tell him, just as calmly and affectionately as you can—and above all, you're not going to get angry and quarrel— that you can't do the good job you want to do for him and your home and children unless you have a reasonable amount of outside social activity to give you a change of scene and thought once in awhile. Tell him no woman can concentrate on a house and children all the time without having it affect her nerves, and you don't want that to happen.

Then tell him you can understand that after a day at work he might feel more like settling down in his armchair at home than going out again, and if that rests and refreshes him more than any other type of recreation, it's all right with you. But you're sure he can understand that what you need to rest and refresh you is something more active, a change from those four walls you've been inside all day. So you're sure, too, he won't mind if you go out with your friends to the movies, to a dance or a party now and then.

Then go ahead and do it. Don't urge him to go along with you. Of course it won't be as much fun as though you had him with you, as a congenial companion, but it will certainly be more fun than staying home night after night. And plenty of other wives—doctors' wives, for instance — whose husbands actually are unable to go places with them very often, have to make their own fun and manage to work out a very satisfactory social life for themselves.

Naturally, you won't overdo it. You'll maybe spend a couple of evenings a week out, and you'll try to work in some good times afternoons, too. But if you can carry through a program like this, avoiding complaint and making no demands on your husband, it could easily be that after a while he would decide to go along after all.

On the other hand, if it's a result of the war, you can wait patiently and understandingly, knowing he will undoubtedly come out of it before long.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

She Shouldn't Ask to be Godmother

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A young couple who are very dear friends of mine are expecting a baby in the early spring. I know they are very fond of me, as I am of them, and I would love to be godmother to their child. Would it be proper for me to mention this to them, or wait to see if they ask me? Would the fact that their faith is different from mine matter?

S. F. L.

No, it would be entirely improper for you to volunteer to be godmother for this child, particularly since there is a difference of faith. Since you and they are such intimate friends, they will invite you to be godmother if they wish to, but for you to try to appoint yourself might very well cause extreme embarrassment to all concerned.

Tuxedos Not Correct For Day-time Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What is the correct attire for the bridegroom and ushers at a church wedding held in the morning? The bride is to wear the traditional white gown. Your answer will settle a discussion in which A claims that tuxedos are permissible while B insists that cutaway coats and striped trousers should be worn.

A. P. P.

A is entirely wrong, because tuxedos are informal evening wear, not to be worn before six p.m. at the earliest. If the wedding is a strictly formal one, formal day attire (cutaway coats, striped trousers and formal accessories) is correct. If a semi-formal wedding, the men may wear either cutaway coats or oxford jackets, striped trousers and appropriate accessories; or if the semi-formal wedding plans are more or less on the informal side, the men may wear business suits, preferably dark blue.

"Spinster" Dinner for Bride-Elect

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Who gives the "spinster dinner" for a bride-to-be? Who is invited? Will personal notes do as invitations? And are gifts brought for the bride-to-be.

T. C.

Occasionally a group of unmarried friends of the bride-to-be give an informal "Spinster" party for her, a dinner, luncheon, or tea, as a farewell from the ranks of the unmarried. This party usually includes only the group of co-hostesses and the guest of honor but other unmarried girls, intimate friends of the guest of honor and the group, may be invited. Usually the invitations are by word of mouth. And usually, unless this party is indicated as also a shower, gifts are not brought to the guest of honor.

News of Her Son's Engagement in Local Newspaper

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a widow and I would like to announce the engagement of my son in the newspapers of the place where we live. I have never read this kind of announcement, and so I am wondering if this would be correct for me to do. My son's fiancee has already announced it in her home-town newspaper. If you approve of my doing this, will you please tell me how to word the announcement?

C. E.

It's entirely correct for you to send this announcement to your local newspaper, and this often is done by the fiance's family so that their list of friends will know the news. To indicate that the fiancee's family have already made the announcement, this is a good form for a beginning:

"Announcement has been made by Mr. and Mrs. William Alan Forbes, of San Antonio, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ruth Forbes, to Mr. George Peter Eliot, son of Mrs. Paul Graham Eliot, of this city and the late Mr. Eliot." For the rest of the announcement you might use the details (perhaps schools attended, clubs, and war service, for example) used in the announcement published by the family of your son's fiance in their local newspaper.

If Your Eyes Are Neglected Make-Up Won't Help a Bit

To rest the eyes, apply a toning lotion to cotton pads and relax for fifteen minutes

By HELEN FOLLETT

GLANCE at your eyes in the mirror. If you feel all fagged out, limp as a rag, chances are your eyes won't have a bit of star-shine in them. That won't do. The eyes are the predominating feature. If they are bright and sparkling, facial defects will not be noticed.

Take good care of them. Bathe them twice a day with warm water, then with cold. Do not abuse them by reading or sewing in a dim light. They are wonderfully made, delicately designed mechanisms; it is a crime against health and beauty to neglect them. Make-up won't help a bit if eye strain is present.

Don't forget that expression gives them lustre and loveliness. The woman who faces life splendidly and gloriously, whose wits are quick and keen, who is alive to everything that goes on around her, is bound to have interesting, glamorous eyes, no matter what the shape and color may be. She'll have lovely eyes when she is seventy years old because nothing will change them. She possesses beauty of high grade because it is created by character and personal charm.

Look at the people who pass you on the street. Regard their eyes. That is an interesting pastime and will teach you a lot.

Few eyes seem to have anything to say, but some light up a welcome to you. They bespeak friendliness, kindness and sympathy. They twinkle with good humor.

It's sensible to have due regard for the settings of these good looks jewels. Keep the surrounding flesh firm and free of lines, by nightly anointments with a nourishing cream. If the big party is on and your eyes look weary, apply pad and moisture with a fragrant toning lotion for fifteen or twenty minutes.

Woman Missionary Spent Nine Years in Wilds of Nigeria

Durban, South Africa, (CP)—After years of isolation in the wilds of Nigeria, a British woman missionary is again learning how to cross streets. She is Miss Belle Graham who lives near Jos in northern Nigeria and who now is on a year's leave.

With a Scottish colleague, Miss Helen Griffin, she lives in a thatched hut near Jos. The hut has openings for windows barred to keep out roving leopards and other wild animals. To get to their "home" they take a narrow gauge railway for 33 miles from Jos and then get out and walk another 27 miles. Horses are useless as transport because the dreaded tsetse fly kills them. There are not roads and the boulder-strewn, hilly terrain would wreck a bicycle. There is only one 12 inch native path and native bearers carry their luggage. The two women's nearest white neighbors are at Jos 60 miles away.

They do mission work, educating the natives and giving medical help. They've been doing this work for nine years now and broke ground in a new territory where the tribe had never seen white people. The natives look on them as "not human" but as having risen from the sea on account of their color.

Their work takes the two intrepid women visiting from "town" to "town" and tribe to tribe, and Miss Graham says they are never afraid of the natives in view of the somewhat strange tribal rites and customs of these people.

If a baby ails, it becomes automatically the property of the water spirits and is taken to the nearest water and left there. If the mother of the young baby dies, the infant is carried to a high and dangerous rock and abandoned. If there is an epidemic in a village the witch doctors "smell out" and usually find the culprit, a baby, who is then buried alive.

Miss Graham and Miss Griffin spend a lot of time in rescue work in these cases and are unhindered, for as long as the tribal rite has been carried out the natives are indifferent to results.

Sauerkraut

(By W. J. Duchaine in Christian Science Monitor)

* * *

Sauerkraut is not of strictly German origin after all. Cabbage is one of the oldest cultivated vegetables. The superhuman task of building the Great Wall of China in 200 B.C. is credited to no small extent to the workmen subsisting mainly on sour cabbage. Cato lauded the cabbage in his writings in 700 B.C. and the Egyptians used it in their ceremonial feasts.

It is believed that the Mongols introduced sauerkraut to eastern Europe during their invasions and that eventually its use spread to Germany and other countries.

To many farmers, cabbage for kraut provides the principal cash crop. Average yields are 10 tons to an acre, and this year the crop brought $13 a ton. Slightly more than 20,000 acres were planted last spring.

* * *

Sauerkraut factories are located principally in small towns in the cabbage-growing areas, and furnish seasonal employment for the farmers, housewives, and other part-time workers. The factories usually contract ahead of time at a set price for all or part of a farmer's crop. If they need more cabbage, they buy on the open market at harvest time.

Cabbages move by trucks from farm to factory and the truckloads are a familiar sight on the highways in the kraut areas during the fall harvest. At the factory, the cabbages are unloaded carefully into bins. Conveyors move them from bins to the canning plant, where they first go into a coring machine which shreds the tough core.

Mechanizations is not completely possible in the sauerkraut industry. The next step is to the cleaning tables, where manual labor is still required. There, expert women workers remove the tough outer leaves, blemish spots, and other defects. Then the cabbage heads go to the shredding machines, where razor-sharp knives slice the cabbage into shreds, usually 1/32 of an inch in thickness.

From the shredding machines the slaw is taken on a conveyor belt or in hand carts and transported to huge tanks with capacities ranging from 40 to 60 tons of cabbage. The slaw is distributed evenly throughout the tank and salt is spread over it in layers at the rate of 2½ pounds of salt to 100 pounds of cabbage.

When the tank is filled to about six inches over the rim, cabbage leaves or clean cloths are spread over it and the wooden cover of the tank placed on top. Then heavy weights, usually cement blocks of about 180 pounds each, are placed on the cover. Four or five tons of such weights are needed for each tank. These compress the cabbage shreds and salt in the tank, helping to squeeze out the cabbage juice. The salt also helps draw out the high water content of the cabbage and starts fermentation.

Fermentation is accomplished under rigidly controlled conditions of temperature and other factors. Tests are constantly made to determine the temperature within the vat, acidity, and salt content of the juice. In about two months the cabbage and salt in the vat have become sauerkraut and it is ready to be packed for the market.

The juice may be drained away or pumped out either then or in stages as the vat is emptied. In normal times, most of the juice goes through further processing and then is canned for market. Lack of cans this year has curtailed this operation, however.

The kraut is removed from the vat and taken to the final processing room. It is placed in a preheating tank so as to assure uniformity of acid and salt content. Then it is heated, partly to destroy any impurities and partly to complete the sauerkraut-making process. While still steaming it is placed in cans and given another short process, sealed, and then cooled before labeling and cartooning.

Lovers of sauerkraut are assured of an ample supply this year. The pack is larger than in recent years, and most of it is staying at home, unlike during the war, when much was allocated to the armed forces.

Maple Leafs Widen N.H.L. Lead With Two Luck-Tinged Goals Over New York Rangers

Defeat Manhattan Squad 5-4 and Were Lucky to Turn the Trick

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Viewed strictly from a worm's-eye level—and that's been the National Hockey League lot of New York Rangers for nigh onto three seasons—it would seem powerfully easy to apply the label of "lucky stiffs" to Toronto's boisterous young Maple Leafs.

It was enough to make the Manhattan Blueshirts turn green with envy the way the Leafs stole a 5-4 victory from them last night on what the New York crowd of 15,083 evidently considered a pair of luck-tinged goals.

One of those goals by the league-leaders wasn't too flukey. Lifting Toronto into a 2-2 tie in the second period, it was shot by veteran Captain Syl Apps, assisted by Bill Moe of the Rangers. Just as Apps was about to shoot, Moe's stick slashed down on his and the puck bounced once, then hopped crazily over goalie Chuck Rayner's knee.

One For The Book

The other was one for the book. With Rangers pressing early in the third period, Leafs cleared the puck down the ice and forward Joe Klukay trailed it. Raynor stopped the puck, swung around to clear, pulled it into the net himself. Klukay drew official credit for the counter.

That goal gave Leafs a 5-2 edge and the tired Rangers, playing their third game in three nights, fought back on tallies by Edgar Laprade and Ab Demarco to cut the lead to one goal. But that was as far as they got.

Together, those Toronto tallies just emphasized the way Dame Fortune has smiled on the Leafs this season while giving the Blueshirts the cold shoulder.

For one thing, the game marked the third straight victory for the Leafs, who now hold a five point edge over the second-place Montreal Canadiens. All were by a one-goal margin.

Similarly, it marked the third-straight loss for Rangers, two of them by a single goal and the other by a two-goal margin. The Blueshirts still hold fourth place but now they have played as many games as Detroit Red Wings and are only a single point ahead.

Close To Cellar Spot

Also, the New Yorkers are dangerously close to the cellar position they held for the last two seasons because Chicago Black Hawks while four points behind Detroit, have five games in hand on both the Rangers and the Wings.

For more than half the game, it looked as if it would be a different story this last time out. The Rangers spotted Toronto a 1-0 lead on Don Metz's first-period tally but went ahead on goals by Bill Moe and Church Russel early in the second session.

Then came the "Blooper" goals by Apps, followed by Toronto counters by Ted (Teeter) Kennedy and Gaye Stewart and the game-winning tally that Klukey scored by remote control.

It was the only game of the night, and the teams idle tonight before a four-game weekend.

THE BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

Ted (Teeter) Kennedy's second-period goal when Toronto Maple Leafs beat New York Rangers 5-4 last night moved the Toronto marksman into sole possession of second place in hockey's Big Seven, eight points behind the leading Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Montreal Canadiens. Previously Kennedy had been tied with Milt Schmidt, Boston, and Billy (The Kid) Taylor of Detroit.

REFEREES HOLD SPOTLIGHT IN HOCKEY LEAGUE

One Arbiter Tears Up Rule Book Sent to Him by Coach of Team

(By The Associated Press)

The referees held the spotlight today in post-game talk among United States Hockey League fans.

During a game at Fort Worth last night between Fort Worth Rangers and Dallas Texans, referee Harry Ornest, of Edmonton, was hit by an irate spectator. A physician reported he suffered a concussion.

Before Ornest was struck he had been booed when he called a slashing penalty on the Fort Worth captain, Scotty McPherson.

At St. Paul, attention centred on Referee Hap Arnott who tore up a rule book in full view of the fans during a game between the Saints and Kansas City.

Arnott had disallowed a St. Paul goal late in the third period, ruling that the puck had deflected off goalie Doug Jackson's glove before entering the net. When the Saints' manager sent out a rule book, Arnott ripped it up.

St. Paul won the contest, 5-4. By losing the game Kansas City muffed a chance to move into first place in the Northern Division. It was Kansas' first setback in seven games. In six previous tilts they had won five and tied one.

Wingy Johnston, Kansas City forward, securing his hold on third place among the League's leading scorers by making one goal and three assists. He now has a total of 18 goals and 16 assists.

Omaha and Minneapolis are tied for the Northern Division leadership with 36 points each. Kansas City has 35.

No games are scheduled tonight.

HERSHEY BEARS ALONE AT TOP

(By The Canadian Press)

Hershey Bears now hold an over-all lead in the American Hockey League—largely because Gordie Bruce helped himself to four points in the league scoring race. In their own Eastern Division, the Bears are 20 points in front of New Haven Ramblers.

Bruce won his points by counting three times last night and assisting with a fourth tally for the bulk of the markers in Hershey's 5-2 defeat of the home team Springfield Indians.

Early in the first period, Bruce drew first blood for the Bears and in the second he added two more markers. Jack McGill and Frank Mario crashed the net for the remaining Hershey tallies while Paul Courteau and Art Hergenratter scored for the losers.

LAST NIGHT'S STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Joe Klukey and Ab Demarco, who scored for New York Rangers in a third period rally when Rangers threatened to tie the game, which Toronto won 5-4.

Turk Broda, Leaf netminder, whose brilliant play turned back several Ranger shots that looked like sure goals.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

FORMER N. H. L. PLAYERS MAKING GOOD

This appears to be the year for veteran National Hockey League players to hang up their skates and take over the coaching reins. Reg. Hamilton, who played for years on the Toronto defence and played last season and part of this year for Chicago is now coaching the Kansas City team in the United States Hockey League. Bob Davidson, one of Toronto's all-time great left wingers who started off the present season as assistant to Coach Happy Day of the Maple Leafs is now looking after the destinies of the St. Louis Flyers in the U.S.H.L. while Murray Armstrong, former Detroit Red Wing centre has been appointed coach of the Dallas Texans in the same league.

FOLLOWS FOOTSTEPS

When Bill Quackenbush played against the Canadiens the other night with a cast on his fractured left wrist he was following a precedent established by two of Detroit's greatest players. Don Grosso, one of the finest forecheckers in the history of hockey, wore a cast on a cracked wrist as he aided the Red Wings in smashing through to the Stanley Cup finals in 1941 and 1942.

Bruising Jack Stewart played despite a cracked wrist and helped Detroit win the Stanley Cup in 1943. Stewart was a tower of strength on the Red Wings' defence with his thumping body checks but his grip was so weak that his stick had to be taped to his glove.

• • •

PERSONALITY OF THE WEEK

Win Green became trainer of the Boston Bruins in the 1928-29 season after serving two years as assistant to Tommy Murray, the Bruins original trainer. Before he became trainer of the Bruins, Green was the leader of a band that played all attractions at the old Boston Arena. Greenie called his old band the "boilermakers", although they were sometimes referred to by other names.

• • •

Even after he first started training the Bruins Win would double as a band leader. When it would come time for the players to leave the dressing room and take the ice "Greenie" would doff his white trousers and "T" shirt, and don his musicians uniform. He would then hustle over to the podium and wave the baton, with few of the spectators realizing that the fellow waving the baton was the same chap who would be later rubbing salve and liniment into the aching muscles of the hockey players.

• • •

Green started out as a clubhouse boy of the Boston Red Sox at the time his father was trainer of the well-known Boston baseball team. He worked up from assistant trainer to become the full-fledged trainer of the club in 1938.

• • •

Although he still carries a card in the musicians union, Green now beats out his rhythm on the muscles of star athletes. Hockey requires more of his time than does baseball, for the hockey equipment is handled, repaired, shipped and watched over by the trainer, whereas in baseball when the last player has left the field, "Greenie" isn't half-a-dozen steps behind him.

• • •

Being trainer of two outstanding sports organizations keeps Green busy throughout the year and leaves him very little time for a vacation. However, Green, one of the most likeable characters in Boston sport seems to revel in the going. He says the most embarrassing thing to happen to him is when he grabs the shoulder of an injured player, and then have the player say, "No, no, it's my knee."

• • •

Coach Don Williams of the Belleville Bees had his beardless hockeyists out in force again at the Arena last night and the younkers went through another hour of stiff practice. The kids were throwing all caution to the winds and laying on the hickory and body with abandon. It was real rough stuff at times but there were no casualties and the boys appeared to enjoy the rough going.

• • •

Doug. Day, "Huck" Reeves and Wardaugh seemed to be the best line out there although others seemed to be quite effective from an individual point of view. There were about 25 aspirants for the squad on the ice and the weeding out process is scheduled to begin shortly.

• • •

Coach Les Shiels had his Intermediates go through a heavy grind during the 6 to 7 period. Shiels has already whittled the original 25 players down to eighteen and further scaling will be done in the near future. Right now, Les informed us last night, "I could use a couple of defencemen to good advantage." They go at it again tonight between seven and 8 o'clock with the Bees taking the ice between six and seven.

• • •

Right now there is a strong possibility that the game scheduled between Trenton Juniors and the Bees for Monday night may be postponed and there is another possibility that the Trenton team might drop out of the loop entirely, according to reports circulated here last night.

• • •

It appears the Trenton management have not been able to ice a team as yet, although what the trouble is no one appeared to know. There were some smart junior players in the town to the east last year, but right now there appears to be few or none, or sumpin.

• • •

The Intermediate "B" group of the district comprised of Trenton Flyers, Mountain View, Bloomfield and Picton Combines will officially pry the lid off their hockey pot next Wednesday with all four teams going into action at the Hume Arena here in a double bill.

• • •

Trenton and Picton will raise the curtain in the first game which gets under way at 7:45 and the second game will follow immediately after the ice surface has had its face lifted and the fans given a breather. Flyers appear to have a fairly well balanced team and are well fortified up front. Mountain View has been practicing here and appear to have plenty of material. What Picton and Bloomfield has, is not known here, but if last year's performances are a criterion then the lads in service blue will know they've been in a hockey game before the last fan falls off the rafters.

• • •

Incidentally, here's where industry can give a helping hand to the hockey association. Leo and Vernon Goyer, two of the Redmen stars, are at the moment unemployed and would like to get jobs here in order to play with their mates. It is understood they have had attractive offers from a village in the county which boasts a Trent Valley League entry, but they would rather stay in the old home town and play with their pals. Any offers will be greatly received.

• • •

The Trent Valley Loop gets under way tonight in Madoc with the Norwood squad furnishing the opposition to the village lads — providing, that is, that the roads are passable.

• • •

How Larry MacPhail, president of the Yankees, was outtalked by a Notre Dame alumnus at the Irish-Army football game and kept out of a room in his own stadium was revealed by Bernie Crimmins, a member of the Notre Dame coaching staff. Clarence Kozak, a graduate of the school who made all the trips with the team, turned the trick.

• • •

Coach Frank Leahy gave Kozak a job—to guard the dressing room door after the game in the Yankee Stadium, while he talked to his players. "He didn't want any interruptions," relates Crimmins, "so Kozy, posted at the door, on hearing a knock, opened it only a trifle. It was MacPhail.

• • •

"Kozy said: 'Sorry—you can't come in.'

"MacPhail yelled: 'I can't come in? Say, I own this place!'

"Kozy replied calmly: 'Yeah? Well, that's too bad—we rented the place for the afternoon.'"

COBB TO MAKE ANOTHER RUN

Salt Lake City, Jan. 3. (AP)—Gus P. Backman, executive secretary of the Salt Lake City Chamber of Commerce, said that John Cobb, of London, England, holder of the world's land speed record, would arrive here today to discuss plans for a new run.

Backman said Cobb planned to make his new assault on existing automobile speed records on the Bonneville Salt Flats, 125 miles west of Salt Lake City, next Summer.

The British racer is expected to confer here two days before going on to San Francisco.

Cobb set the present speed record of 369.7 miles per hour for a measured kilometre on the Bonneville Flats in 1939.

HAS FAITH IN TEAM

Sydney, Australia, Jan. 3—Jack Bromwich, a member of the defeated Australian team in the recently concluded Davis Cup tennis matches, believes that Australia's present players are "quite capable of regaining the Davis Cup" in 1947.

In an article published by the Sydney Morning Herald, Bromwich declared "my confidence for 1947 is based on the belief Australia will challenge in American zone and that Australia's team will play at Wimbledon before going to America. The advantage of that is that our representatives would have solid match play against the best players on grass courts and under championship conditions."

HAMILTON TIGERS UNBEATEN IN SENIOR HOCKEY

Rivals Close in on Junior Champions, St. Michael's Majors

(By The Canadian Press)

Despite a 3-2 setback at the hands of Ottawa Senators in intersectional competition, the veteran Hamilton Tigers, unbeaten in 14 games of league competition, looked like the best bet to represent Ontario in this year's Allan Cup playdowns.

Meanwhile Toronto St. Michael's College Majors, power team of the Ontario Hockey Association's Junior "A" loop, enjoyed a protracted holiday layoff and watched rival clubs struggle to get within striking distance.

The Senators, currently leading the Quebec Senior Hockey League, make their Allan Cup bid in the Quebec division and their rousing exhibition tilt with the Tigers may well be the preview of an Eastern Canada final. Tigers' nearest competition — Toronto Staffords who trail them by 14 points — whipped an all-star Sudbury club 8-4 in an exhibition game.

In the O.H.A.'s junior loop the St. Michael's club has dropped one of its 19 starts to the second-place Oshawa Generals, who trail the Irish by four points.

The Ottawa District Leagues, which rely mainly on natural ice, have just started their schedules. Carleton Place and Tichborne have won their opening games in the Rideau Senior League while the five-team Ottawa city junior group has Canadiens in front, followed by Monties, St. Pats, Senators and Hull.

Sudbury Wolves lead the Nickel Belt senior circuit with four wins and a loss. Copper Cliff Redmen, only junior club in the district, are second in the group and boast the league's two leading scorers.

A tight race is in progress in the five-team Porcupine District Senior League with Porcupine Combine juniors in the thick of the competition. However, the Combines lost an exhibition tilt with Barrie Flyers, fifth-place club in the 10-team O.H.A. junior "A" circuit.

The North Bay area, also dependent on natural ice, has barely started its schedules.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

In case you came in late, a bid of four no-trump does not expect to play there. Even in the wilds of the biggest cities, it is the accepted signal for asking slam information.

Among some tribes, it merely asks partner to, show any slam help. In semi-civilized communities, it asks for information about aces only. But in cultured circles, it asks partner for aces and kings.

Come back to this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠Q 9 8
♥K 4 3
♦A K Q 3
♣K J 2
NORTH
♥A 2
♦10 7
♣A Q 10 9 3

South opens with one diamond. Among other things, he promises five tricks. North responds with a one-jump to three clubs. Among other things, he promises six tricks.

The second bid by south is four clubs to show his assist and a sixth trick. North is slambitious. To determine whether they have a bid of six or seven, he must know how many aces and kings in south.

So, north here bids four no-trump; the signal for asking partner about aces and kings. To this south replies five no-trump. This is The Kibitzer convention signal for showing one ace and three kings.

Remember that south has admitted holding six tricks. He is now saying that four of his tricks are an ace and three kings. What can he have for the other two tricks?

A trick is a high card (ace or king or queen) or a short card. Therefore, the other two tricks in south must be queens or shorts or one of each. If both are queens, they have a grand slam in no-trump.

Thus, a small slam is as certain as any player could expect. And there is good reason to believe that a grand slam is safe if it is bid in the agreed trump suit of clubs.

Having bid diamonds and assisted clubs, there is little to fear in the majors. He is either short or has the queens in them.

You can see plenty without looking.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop started to look at the financial page of the paper and quick changed his mind with a sad expression and terned to the sporting page, and ma said, Women make me laugh, William.

I occasionally indulge in a smile at their expense myself, pop said, and ma said, Practically every woman I know would endanger her sole to get the signed autograff of some famous movie star, but what have they got when they get it? Just a few casual ink marks, she said.

I agree with you, my dear, it's no great trick to be able to sign your name, pop said, and ma said, Nobody respects an actor's talent more than I do, but I must say I fail to get excited at the thought of a few careless scratches made by a pen on a piece of pape. It would be another story if autograffs were rare enough to come under the head of objects of art or anteeks but these movie stars hand them out right and left like hotcakes. In other werds, ask and you shall receeve I dont care who you are. But an autograff from Carmelita Kelly, that's such a rarity as to be practically non existent, she said.

Well I should think so, pop said. That kid isn't old enough to write yet, is he? he said, and ma said, That's just the point. She's making a personel appearance at the Narcississ, and I recognized her immeeditly this afternoon when I saw her in the Zipper Tea Room with her mother, eating cinnamin buns and ice creem. Well, I had a sort of an intuition, so I casually strolled by their table after they'd left, and sure enough, little Carmelita's paper napkin was still there, full of her little sticky finger prints, just as legible as the finest engraving. William, it's a real collector's item and I've got a good mind to frame it, ma said.

Yee gods, pop said.

Gun Salute to New Year

Simcoe, Jan. 3 — (CP)—Repercussion followed concussion Thursday when the loudest bang heard in Simcoe for many years greeted the New Year. The concussion came when eight rounds were fired from a 25-pounder artillery piece at the local armories. The repercussion came when members of the regiment found they had to pay for broken windows in the police-station, fire hall tower and apartments over the fire hall.

NEXT AT THE BELLE—James Craig and lovely Frances Gifford are the romantic twosome in M.G.M.'s action-packed romantic drama, "Little Mr. Jim," starring "Butch" Jenkins and wee Luana Patten, coming to the Belle this weekend.

Viscountess Served No Alcohol Drinks

London, (CP) — Viscountess Snowden, widow of the former chancellor of the exchequer, said when she lived at 11 Downing Street, she organized its entertainments for more than two years without offering any alcohol to guests.

"I never observed any reluctance of guests to come, or any absence of liveliness and good cheer when they did," she said. "No young man or woman staggered down those steps in semi-helpless condition as I have seen so many do at weddings where drink flowed freely."

Viscountess Snowden said most moderate drinkers were "entirely estimable people, good citizens and kind parents." Some were "delightful people of great charm."

"But," she asked "does the decent man who drinks moderately realize that those who have fallen by the way were all moderate drinkers at the start?"

B.C. Man Suggests Grasshopper Diet

Merrickville, Jan. 3 — (CP) — Human consumption of grasshoppers as a "great rejuvenator" has been recommended to Harry F. McLean, but so far the wealthy Merrickville contractor has not been advised whether the insects should be eaten raw or form part of the family stew.

Better known as Mr. "X" for his habit of handing out money to strangers and distributing turkeys at Christmas, Mr. McLean received the "tip" on adding grasshoppers to the human diet from a British Columbia resident whose interest was aroused by the contractor's successful experiment in raising turkeys on a grasshopper diet.

BOOM FOR FARLEY

New York, Jan. 3—(AP)—The New York Daily News said yesterday that a movement to boom James A. Farley, former Postmaster General, as President Truman's vice-presidential running mate in 1948 "will be openly launched . . . sometime in April."

AT THE CAPITOL — "Trigger," Roy Rogers and Dale Evans, as they appear in a scene from Republic's "My Pal Trigger," the heart-warming romance of a gentle mare and a strong-hearted stallion, now showing at the Capitol. The added first run hit, "The Missing Lady," with The Shadow.

CHAPTER 36.

"No, it wasn't like that," Jennifer said, smiling faintly in sympathy with the panic of the bride of so many years ago, but shaking her head. "It was something," she went on with suddenly scarlet cheeks, "that I felt I had to tell Captain Lippincott and that I couldn't tell him. It was something that took away all that feeling about being—first being a wife, something that made that all wrong—made the honeymoon all wrong. . . ."

"Felt he couldn't forgive you?" asked the old lady, clearing her throat after a silence during which she had studied Jennifer with thoughtful eyes.

"No, that he would. That I couldn't. I can tell you," Jennifer said. "I couldn't tell him. He's different—Jim's different. He's steady and simple and—trusting. I couldn't tell him."

"And that's what you think I might have saved you, eh?"

"No," the girl answered quickly. "No, Nothing saves girls when they—won't stop, won't think. Perhaps if I'd talked to Jim in the very beginning when I first knew how much I liked him—but I don't know. Anyway, I'm telling you in the very beginning."

The old woman shook this off with a dismissing gesture of her curled gray head. She sat silent a minute, thinking.

"If what I hear is true," she said then hesitatingly, "girls don't regard that sort of thing quite as seriously as they once did."

"I know they don't. I hear the girls at Vogelsang's talk," Jennifer agreed promptly, "and I hear the girls who come in to buy clothes too. Some of the college girls—especially girls who've come from the East who are far away from home—don't make any secret, at least among themselves, of what goes on on these weekend house parties and trips up into the Sierras."

"But you do? You've let it wreck your marriage?"

"I don't want to make it all so important," Jennifer said piteously. "I'd much rather just forget it—go on and live my life all the better for it. But it's there."

"Man living? Ever see him?"

"Yes, he's living. I see him — well, I think I've seen him twice. By accident."

"He was married, I suppose?"

"No. It was just—an episode, I suppose." Jennifer's tone was infinitely weary.

There was an interruption. A nice-looking middle-aged woman in the pearl moire and ruffled apron of a maid stood in the doorway.

"Excuse me, Mrs. Giddings, but will you and the Colonel be alone for dinner?"

"No, no," the old lady said, rousing herself from thought. "My granddaughter will be with us. Miss Richie will be staying with us now, Hilda."

Eddy street again on a chilly, windy gray summer afternoon. Every inch of it was familiar, every dreary smell, the rubbish piled in the areaways, the humble little signs: "Modes," "Piano," "Rooms." Jennifer's heart contracted as she walked past the corner grocery, past the flights of gray wooden steps going up from the gray street to the parlor floors. She had come along this block every night for many years; the movie theater on Filmore a few blocks away had been her dream of all delights; the grocer had called her "Jenny"; everybody in the neighborhood — the hunchback tailor, the black-clad women who were coming back from early church service when Jennifer started for the office, the noisy, dirty children swarming in the dingy street, the delicatessen woman whose big wet hands always smelled of vinegar and herrings—everybody had known the little "Richie girl." And Jennifer had known every inch of it and the prices of hot cross buns at the bakery, the dry odors of the candy and magazine stand where ice cream cones were procurable, the red flag of the auctioneer.

"I couldn't—I simply couldn't live here now," she thought. And then quickly: "But of course I could. If Jim and I were ringing that bell and asking to see what the sign meant by "Housekeeping Rooms"—no, but I couldn't bear that, I'd be too happy! Cleaning it all up and putting our things around and going to Meyer's with Jim to get bread and butter and coffee—oh, how do women bear it! We'd have our house the neatest and cleanest in the whole neighborhood, Jim," she said half aloud. "Blue checked curtains in the kitchen and everything painted and papered fresh. . . . and geraniums. . . and shutting out the whole world at night. . . . just we two. . . . always together!"

There was a half smile on her face and heaven in her eyes as she rang the street doorbell and listened for the unforgotten click that meant that somebody upstairs was working the lever that opened the door. Immediately she was running up the narrow stairs, hearing as she did so the exultant voice of Elna: "Oh, it's Jennifer, Mom! Faddy, it's Jen!"

"Did you fix it, Jen? Are we going?"

Jennifer sat down, panting and laughing, in the dark smelly dining room. Betty, close to the birth of a baby, stood beaming approval from the kitchen doorway.

"Let me breathe!" protested Jennifer. "Yes, of course you're going. Do you think I'd dare come in here at all if you weren't? The fifth of July, Betty," she added.

"My goodness, that's only ten days," Betty observed doubtfully.

"It's less than that," Jennifer told them. "You leave a week from Monday. But Granny and I want you to come over to me Saturday afternoon, and then you can check on all your equipment."

"Every last thing," Jennifer said, laughing in sympathy with the little girls' delight. "Red handkerchiefs, scout knives, sleeping bags, shorts, sweaters, everything. You wait until you see them—Cassie and Hilda laid them all out on one of the guest-room beds last night. They make me want to go too!"

"Jen, you're too good to them," Betty said. But her eyes were as bright as the children's eyes. "So you're going to have two months in the Sierras!" she marveled. "You'll come home as wild as Indians."

"Jen, the list said 'small cloth bag on drawstring for sundries,'" Faddy reminded her anxiously.

"That'll give me a chance to go house-hunting in Richmond with Clint," Betty observed with satisfaction. "I never did like the east bay," she added when Elna and Faddy had rushed off to catch a three-o'clock movie, "but with the new baby here and Clint making such good money, maybe I could find something nice."

"You could hardly fail to find something nicer than this place," Jennifer thought. Aloud she said: "You'll love it; you'll have a garden and maybe a view."

"I know, but you get so nervous at night without neighbors," Betty argued.

"You'll have neighbors! You ought to see how they're building over there."

"I've always liked this place," Betty went on wistfully, "and so does Clint. It's so handy if he wants a few of the boys in for a game of poker or if we want to walk downtown to a steak dinner. But I guess steak dinners are out for the duration," she added philosophically, "so we'll get along all right. Jennifer," she said curiously as Jennifer unwrapped a package that held microscopic shirts and sacques, "isn't there any end to that old lady's money?"

"Apparently not. She has a very friendly feeling for you too, Betty. She feels that you did something for me during the years when she more or less failed me."

"Your father left us a good big lump of insurance," Betty reminded her. "Most of it was for you, but I spent it. I had to."

"That isn't everything. My grandmother," Jennifer pursued it, "is delighted to have something—someone that belongs to her. She was being poisoned by resentment and hate against my father for all these years and it's a relief to get rid of it. Well, anyway, she says that if you'd really like to send the girls to a good school next fall and they want to go, she and I will be responsible."

"Yes, I have been," Jennifer said thoughtfully, her eyes on space.

"Aren't you having a perfectly swell time now?"

"Betty, don't ask any girl who has been poor and shabby all her life a question like that! It's all a dream of beauty and luxury and —and dignity. It seems we have a box for the opera season and a box for the symphonies, Granny and I."

"That'll remind you of your crazy friend—What's-his-name."

"Stan Lichtenstein? Poor Sam."

"Don't those days seem long ago? Monty Smith too. You don't ever see him now? He's not round here over the auctioneer's any more; I know that. The other night the girls went across the roof; they never said a word to me about it, and they said the studio wasn't a studio any more, that they'd stored a lot of furniture in there. Bernie—that's the little dark feller that helps the auctioneer—told me that Monty had moved down to Carmel; sold his bookstore, Bernie said. I didn't know he had one."

"Yes, out in the Mission. A sort of stationery store." How far back it went! Back to the dark night when she had first entered the studio and had found Monty in the throes of moving in. Jennifer shook off the memory of that shamed and puzzled time. What a blundering little fool of a girl she had been!

"Now I'll tell you," Betty was saying, "here's how it is, Jen. Clint's making good money now, and there's no question Faddy and Elna would be some help to me after this baby gets here. But there's another side to it. I raised you all right because you always were an awful good sort of little girl. You kind of kept yourself straight, see what I mean?"

Jennifer nodded without speaking, without moving her eyes from Betty's eyes.

"But with Fad and Elna it's different," Betty went on; "they're going to be too much for me. I can't give them the pleasures—the—having boys in here."

"I know," said Betty wisely, "but life isn't the way it was, Jen. There are an awful lot of rotten characters about. Girls learn things too young. They see girls just a few years older than they are going into Ricio's or Barney's in the afternoons, they want more money than you and I used to have for our whole housekeeping, for permanents and movies and candy and having their drugstore stuff. I want them to grow up nice, but with me taken up with the baby and Clint so tried all the time, it just seems as if they weren't getting any break at all. So if they could go to some good boarding school next year it'd make—well, I don't mean ladies of them, but it'd make them ladylike. They could learn to be teachers, maybe, or secretaries—something refined like that."

"How do they feel about it?"

"I don't know how much they know about it, but they're perfectly cracked to go. Marg'ret O'Connor and those little French girls have been going to San Rafael for a year, and they love it. I'd like the girls to talk and act like they do, and I think the girls would like it too. For instance, they were all going on a hike a few weeks ago with Mrs. O'Connor and I said I'd get the girls some shorts. 'Mother Raymond made us promise never to wear shorts at all, ever, no matter how old we get,' Marg'ret spoke up. That was enough for Fad and Elna. They said, 'No, Mama, slacks and sweaters will be all right, but no more shorts.'"

"Now, really," Jennifer mused, smiling.

"Well, you see. ." Betty argued, with an eloquent spreading of hands. "But I and Clint can pay part of that," she went on.

"You take care of them holidays and let me manage the schooling," Jennifer pleaded. "If you and Clint decide to move to Richmond and find the kind of a house you want you're going to be surrounded with defense workers, for the duration anyway. And Monty has gone to Carmel," she mused as Betty began to handle the tiny baby garments with experienced fingers, her eyes dreamy.

"It seems kind of crazy for Clint and me to have another baby now" she said. "Jen, where'd you get these? I never saw anything cuter."

"You've ordered a boy, I suppose?"

"Clint says he'll send another girl to the orphanage. But I don't care. I'd like to name a girl Sonia. I think that's a lovely name."

"Sonia Slade. That is pretty."

"Every man thinks he wants a boy," Betty said wisely, "but afterward he fights with the boy and spoils the girls. Yep, I guess Monty is painting beaches and those—what d'you call 'em—those blown-over trees?"

"The famous cypresses. We were down at Pebble Beach last Saturday, and they are beautiful."

"Cypresses, that's right. Oh, and did you see your other friend getting killed?"

"Who's that?" Jennifer's eyes widened with alarm.

"That Borrows boy."

"Sidney Borrows!"

"That's what the paper said. It was—let's see, Sunday. I felt kind of rotten and stayed in bed; I thought things were starting. Well, anyway the girls brought me i nmy breakfast—Clint was working—and I saw that in the paper. It said in trial flights down in Texas somewhere."

Dept. of Public Works Striving Valiantly With Equipment On Hand to Keep Streets Opened

With almost continuous snowfall for the past week, the local public works department is striving valiantly with equipment at hand to keep city streets open for vehicular traffic.

Plows and other equipment have been working continuously since the first heavy snowfall following Christmas, while with the added depth of snow as result of yesterday's snowfall the road grader owned by J. W. Hamilton, Mountain View, has been brought into service to put streets in shape.

Two mechanical loaders and a fleet of dump trucks have been removing snow from the downtown sections of the city and today officials pointed with pride to the fact that Front street was in comparatively good shape.

Public Works chairman Ald. Chas. Hyde spoke praise for the work being done by the new city truck with underneath blade, stating that this equipment was doing a splendid job. Main streets, including bus routes are being kept cleared with the equipment now working on the side streets.

Despite efforts of the department to weep roads passable the snow of Thursday afternoon and evening caused trouble on Murney Hill as transports were unable to negotiate the grade. At one time a tractor trailer loaded with automobiles was stranded across the travelled portion of the roadway with other vehicular traffic having to detour by way of Moira street.

With streets in "fairly" good shape, city officials admitted however that the heavy snowfall was taxing available equipment for sidewalk plowing. Two tractor plows and one jeep operated plow are working continuously in an effort to cope with the sidewalk plowing.

Cattle, Horses Removed From Blazing Barn

Tweed, Ont., (Special)—Fire, of undetermined origin completely destroyed the barn and the greater part of its contents, on the farm of Clayton Fisher, farmer residing approximately four miles south of this village late Thursday afternoon.

Cattle and horses were brought safely from the blazing building by members of the Fisher family, but a large quantity of hay, grain feed, and ten young pigs were lost in the fire. A nearby shed which housed other farming machinery was saved with its contents.

Mr. Fisher was away at the time, but about 5 o'clock members of the family noticed smoke and flames pouring out of the roof of the barn where it is believed the blaze started in a straw mow.

They rushed to the blazing building and brought out the livestock after sending in a general alarm. Neighbors responded quickly but the building was a blazing mass when they arrived and efforts were concentrated on saving the nearby buildings and the house.

The Fishers today were at a loss to understand how the blaze started. There was no hydro service in the barn and no one had been in the building for some time.

Three Families Protest Costs Are Excessive

Windsor, Jan. 3 —(CP)—Three families in suburban Roseland and Oliver Farm have vacated homes built under the Veterans Land Act in protest against what they termed excessive costs in connection with V.L.A. construction in those districts.

First to leave were Albert Underwood, R.C.A.F. veteran and his English bride. They went to live with Underwood's parents in nearby Riverside. Others who left their V.L.A. homes: Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Rigney and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Reid.

Veterans in Roseland and Oliver Farm recently complained of faulty connection of their V.L.A. homes. Some repairs were made and they asked reduction of the price of the one storey homes. They said V.L.A. officials in Ottawa refused to change the prices — ranging from $4,500 to $7,000.

Underwood said today: "Some one made a lot of money in this project and now they are trying to get it out of the veterans. I think there should be a thorough investigation into the cost of these homes and this could be accomplished through a royal commission which many of the veterans are seeking."

come one?"

Quick like a flash, the interviewer answers. She is Laura Gunall — Mrs. Gunall, she says, and despite despair at the thought of her being married, we write—and is dancing to help her husband.

He is a veteran taking advantage of the Government G. I. Bill of Rights and is studying. The government allowance, says Laura, isn't too liberal, so dancing helps pay expenses while hubby goes to college.

Svelte, eye-filling Jayne Westbrook, answers with a question. "Scanty costumes or scanty pay, which shall it be? she asks. "I graduated from Northwestern University. My friends who became school teachers are paid much less than I, and my work takes about four hours daily, giving me time to continue my studies for a stage career."

Dusty Reale also took to dancing to continue her career. She considers the chorus line as the "logical stepping stone to possible stardom on the stage and screen."

"Knowing that Joan Crawford, Barbara Stanwyck, Paulette Goddard and Jeanette MacDonald started their careers the same way, I feel proud to be a chorine, scanty costumes notwithstanding," she added.

Tall, blonde Virginia Durso, dressing for the next show put in her bit with: "I was primarily interested in dancing and didn't consider the costumes."

"However," she added with emphasis, "I have learned that costumes are made to beautify the body and not to show it off. They certainly don't reveal more, and sometimes not as much as most of the swim suits you see on the beaches."

We agreed heartily, backed out reluctantly since the girls said they had to dress, and discovered too late that we had forgotten to get phone numbers and addresses with the rest of the answers.

dig itself out from under 8½ inches of snow. Street cars and buses running in from the suburbs reached the downtown area up to half an hour late during the morning rush hour.

Street cars which run from St. Catharines to Port Dalhousie and Niagara Falls rolled to a halt when ice coated wires and tracks. Buses replaced them on the runs but company officials said they hoped to get the trolleys back in operation later today.

POLICE BLOTTER

Mrs. Leslie Lambly, 180 Moira Street, today reported to police that money had frequently been taken from her milk bottles. When the thefts continued she ceased placing money in the bottles and used tickets instead. However the thefts are continuing but the thief waits for the morning delivery and now takes the milk. The milk is taken during the morning while the householder is away at work.

Two minor motor accidents were reported to police with small damage to the vehicles involved. As result of one accident, however Walter Mondeville, St. Paul Street, employee of the Public Works Department, complained of an injured leg. Mr. Mondeville had been riding in the back of the P.U.C. truck, driven by Bert Wilkinson and following a reported accident with another vehicle, was found lying on the floor of the truck where he complained of a leg injury. Examination at the hospital revealed the injury was not serious.

County Constable Thomas Thorne reports having a black female cocker spaniel, the dog being picked up minus a collar and tag.

One Man is Burned To Death in Fire In Los Angeles Hotel

Los Angeles, Jan. 3. (AP)—An unidentified man was burned to death and four others were injured when fire swept through a small downtown hotel early today.

Police said one occupant of the hotel was being held for questioning because an empty gasoline can was found on the stairs.

Assistant Fire Chief F. E. Winkler said many of the hotel's residents were hanging from windows and getting ready to jump when firemen arrived. About 25 were taken down on ladders.

Louis Hulse, 60, was burned about the face and hands and at General Hospital his condition was reported as serious. Ernie Pentecost, 40, Sam Maxley, 53, and Gilbert Faxen, 53, were treated for burns.

JACKIE ROBINSON BATTING CHAMP OF INT. LOOP

First Negro to Play Modern Day Organized Ball

New York, Jan. 3 (AP)—Jackie Robinson, the first Negro to play modern day organized baseball, today was proclaimed the official batting champion of the International League on his .349 average for the pennant-winning Montreal Royals.

Hammering triple-A pitching for a total of 205 hits, including 25 doubles, eight triples and three home runs, the former University of California at Los Angeles football star made good with a bang on his first trial with the Brooklyn farm club.

Whether Robinson will graduate to the parent Dodgers during their spring training sessions at Havana has not been announced. President Branch Rickey of the Brooks has not moved him up yet. The best information is it will be up to Robinson himself to make a good showing during the Havana workouts.

All of the other top International hitters have been advanced to the majors, including Newark's Alfie Clark and Rochester's Vernal Jones who tied for second at .344. Clark joins New York Yankees and Jones continues as a St. Louis Cardinal, having been moved up in late season.

Others in Top Ten

Others in the top 10 of those with at least 250 times at bat were Tom Tatum of Montreal, .319, Ed Robinson of Baltimore, .318, Larry Berra of Newark, .314, Marv Rackley of Montreal, .306, and Frank Colman of Newark, .304.

Eddie Robinson of the Baltimore Orioles, tabbed a sure bet to play first base for Cleveland in 1947, won the runs-batted-in title with 123 and also topped the circuit in total bases, 305.

Rackley, the speedster who will try for a Dodger outfield job next spring, was another double champion, showing the way with 14 triples and 65 stolen bases.

Montreal's Robinson also was tied fith Baltimore's Clarence Campbell for scoring the most runs, 113. Campbell drew the most walks, 141.

Moss Home Run King

Howie Moss of Baltimore, who, like Ed Robinson, moved up the ladder to Cleveland, was the home run king with 38, Eddie Joost of Rochester was high with 35 doubles and Brown the Yankee rookie, tied with Murtagh for most hits, 174.

Ford Garrison of Newark owned the longest consecutive game hitting string, 25, Lew Riggs of Montreal and Bob Thomson of Jersey City each were hit by pitcher nine times, high for the circuit and Chuck Diering of Rochester, a 1947 Cardinal, struck out most often, 97 times.

Just as Montreal dominated the pennant race by winning 100 games to finish 18 1-2 games ahead of Syracuse, the Royals held a commanding lead in club batting with a team average of .288 as compared to Buffalo's second place .272.

Sports Roundup

By JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Jan. 3—(CP)—The most cruel grind in recent National Hockey League history is slowly cutting New York Rangers to pieces these days as witness the Ranger-Toronto Maple Leaf tussle here last night . . . The Rangers have played three games in three days — and have lost them all . . . But they have shown remarkable stamina in forcing the opposition to play desperate defensive hockey in the final minutes . . . Last night, for instance, Toronto had a 5-2 margin early in the last period . . . But the weary, battered Rangers pushed in two goals and almost got several more . . . It all goes to prove an old adage: Don't start paying off bets until the last whistle sounds.

A Matter of Judgment.

Sometimes, however, a little jumping the gun pays off . . . Somebody recalled the story of Lee Bible's attempt to break the world land speed record during the 20's . . . Those were the days when the late Sir Henry Segrave was driving his Golden Arrow to speed marks at Daytona Beach, Fla. . . .

High-speed design hadn't been mastered and one racing car—the Triplex—capsized twice in record attempts, killing two veteran drivers . . . Lee Bible, a young Florida automobile mechanic, begged for permission to drive the Triplex in a third attempt . . . As the huge car roared down the sands to make its opening run, one reporter started typing grimly: "Lee Bible was killed instantly today when he attempted to break the world's speed record in the ill-fated Triplex—" . . . 15 seconds later, the Triplex turned over, killing Bible. . . .

To Bet Or Not To Bet.

The New York Journal-American has just concluded a poll of its readers on the question of publishing betting odds and the write-in votes is nearly two-to-one in favor . . . Lewis Burton, Journal boxing writer, started the controversy when he came out in favor of such publication . . . Westbrook Pegler, syndicated columnist and former sports writer, allowed he was against the practice . . . The vote was 1,704 in favor, 942 against . . . Those are good odds in any pool room . . .

Pounding the Beat.

The Australian Lawn Tennis Association made a profit of $80,000 from the recent Davis Cup finals . . . The gross gate was $236,000 for three days . . . Billy Evans, new general manager of Detroit's baseball Tigers, became an American League umpire when he was just 22 . . . Scared and nervous in his Big League debut, he was cheered up by a Yankee infielder who told him: "Listen kid, watcha scared about? In this league the bases are 90 feet apart, the same as in that bush league you just left. The pitchers throw balls or strikes. A runner is safe or out. Buck up kid . . . There's nothing to worry about. Just call 'em as you see 'em." . . .

Toronto, Jan. 3—(CP) — The successful accent-on-youth campaign of the Toronto Maple Leafs seems to have bewildered Toronto hockey writers who about this time of year usually start beating the drums on behalf of their favorite Leaf rookie for the Calder Trophy award.

But while Montreal has been singing the praise of Leo Gravelle and Detroit has been plugging for youthful Gordon Howe, Toronto has been quiet although 5 capable members of this year's Leafs are eligible for the annual rookie honors.

There are defencemen Garth Boesch and Gus Mortson and forwards Howie Meeker, Vic Lynn and Joe Klukay. Oddly enough, the youngest member of the Toronto team — Jimmy Thomson from Winnipeg who won't be 20 until next February — isn't eligible because of a brief turn with the club a year ago before he was sent to Pittsburgh in the American Hockey League for seasoning.

On the face of the scoring records the 22-year-old Meeker would seem to be an obvious choice for Toronto — and even other — support. In his first 24 games he scored 11 goals and had six assists to lead all rookies in the league.

This native of Kitchener who came into the league via the Stratford Junior and Junior Ontario Hockey Association club has a remarkable hockey success story. Just two years ago he was in a military hospital in England, his legs gashed with wounds as the result of an explosion of a live grenade at his feet during military training.

He spent four months in hospital, took part in the invasion of Europe and then came home to get into hockey. A scrappy performer, he backs up from nothing.

The handsome Lynn, 21-year-old native of Saskatoon, now is on the injured list. He had 12 scoring points — three goals and nine assists — in 23 games. Klukay, 24 and a native of Sault Ste. Marie, has been used largely in a utility role, helping to kill penalties and replacing injured forwards. He had two goals and six assists for eight points in 28 games.

The tradition that a defenceman never wins the rookie award — it has always gone to a goaltender or a forward — reacts against chances of Mortson, 21-year-old native of New Liskeard, and Boesch, 26-year-old husky from Milestone, Sask., and the only N.H.L. player who sports a moustache.

But both rookie defencemen have made an outstanding debut and have helped put the Leafs out in front in the league race. The tough Mortson bagged two goals and seven assists for nine points in his first 28 games. Boesch scored four goals and had three assists for seven points in his first 28. Their defensive work has been of a high order.

STEVE IS BARBER'S YOUNGEST CUSTOMER

Only four months old; Stephen Agrigliano, of Brooklyn, N.Y., just about sets a youth record for joining the honored cult of barber shop customers. Terry, the barber, says Stephen is the youngest customer he has ever had, but as you can see the youngster shows a nice crop of hair for Terry's ministrations. Steve's mother keeps him occupied with a bottle of milk while the operation goes on.

(By The Canadian Press)

In a crisply worded declaration, City College of New York yesterday broke off relations with Wyoming University as long as Everett Shelton is coach of basketball there. Reason for the break was a remark allegedly by Shelton in an argument with Nat Holman, City College coach, during a basketball game at Madison Square Garden Dec. 28. Shelton was said to have used discriminatory language involving a racial background. He said later, "I did not intend to slander nationality or religion. When we play Indian teams, we call them Indians. When we play Jews, we call them Jews. All I said the other night was 'the Jews are getting away with murder'."

Brandon, Man., Elks defeated University of Minnesota 4-2 in an exhibition hockey game at Minneapolis last night.

Headed by three 10-rounders, another of those Mike Jacobs talent hunts is being staged tonight at New York's Madison Square Garden, with the idea of bringing up promising fighters, and, incidentally to fill the coffers with an expected $50,000 gate. Mike won't be there to hear the sales rung up, however, as he still is in hospital, convalescing from a recent illness.

Frank Crosetti, 36-year-old veteran of 15 big league seasons, has been named a player-coach under New York Yankees Manager Bucky Harris. Crosetti played only 28 games last season but will continue part-time playing duty.

A product of McGill University hockey, right winger Johnnie Pierson has been called up from Boston Olympics to fill in at right wing for the Bruins, and will make his debut at Montreal Saturday night against Canadiens.

Winnipeg's Frank Stack, Canadian speed skating champion, has turned down an invitation to compete in the world's skating championships in Norway this month because he wants to participate in the Canadian title meet at Sudbury next month, with an eye on the Olympics.

ST. CATHARINES MAN HELD FOR GIRL'S MURDER

Great Britain May Impose Martial Law in Palestine

Recommended as Only Way Of Dealing With Situation

London, Jan. 4 — (Reuters) — Informed quarters here said today that martial law may be imposed in Palestine if Lt.-Gen. Sir Alan G. Cunningham, Palestine High Commissioner, recommends it as the only method of dealing with the situation.

Gen. Cunningham arrived here last night to confer with Colonial Office officials which grew more tense in recent days with new terroristic attacks.

Whatever action is taken by the British cabinet next week will depend on the report Gen. Cunningham brought with him. It is thought that if he considers martial law the only possibility, this step will have the government's serious consideration. Political quarters think, however, that the government should make a final appeal to Jews to help restore order before taking drastic steps.

Gen. Cunningham meanwhile is spending the weekend in a secret retreat where he will study the special military and security plan for Palestine which it is believed he discussed last night with Colonial Secretary Jones and Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, Chief of the Imperial General Staff.

May Bring Crisis.

Today's Sabbath lull in Palestine may give way to yet more terrorism and the next 24 hours may bring a crisis in the country.

Sir Alan's whereabouts are known only to Jones, Foreign Secretary Bevin and a squad of senior dispatch riders who have been sworn to secrecy.

The latter are standing by at the Colonial Office to rush through to the High Commissioner news from Palestine. He is expected to report back with his observations on Monday morning.

Sir Alan is believed to have told Bevin frankly that the state of law and order in Palestine cannot be allowed to worsen at the present rate. The increasingly festive frame of mind of the British troops there since the latest floggings by terrorists is believed to have been one of the factors responsible for Sir Alan's visit to London.

On the other hand the cabinet would hesitate to prejudice the success of the next attempt at diplomatic settlemen — resumption of the Palestine Conference January 21—by the announcement of firm and repressive military measures in the next few days.

One possibility is that Britain may launch a military offensive in Palestine and at the same time refer the whole issue to the United Nations. But this, like every other possibility now being anxiously discussed, still lies in the balance.

Jerusalem, Jan. 4. (Reuters)—British military authorities today placed safes, bars and restaurants over wide areas of Palestine out-of-bounds to British troops as a precaution against more kidnappings by Jewish Terrorists, who flogged a British major and three sergeants Sunday.

The ban applied to all predominantly Jewish areas except in certain districts where discretion was allowed to the local divisional commanders. It was applied completely to Jerusalem and Haifa, while the all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv is already out-of-bounds.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Jan. 4 —(CP)—Synopsis: With the circulation changing from the north to the west today, temperatures will moderate somewhat, and the trend will continue through Sunday. At Earlton for example the temperature rose from a low of 23 below at 2:30 a.m. to above zero this morning. In Southern Ontario scattered snowflurries were reported in areas to the lee of the open lakes but elsewhere the weather is generally clear. In Northern Ontario a narrow band of snow is moving rapidly eastward across the Kirkland Lake and James Bay region in advance of warmer air. With a west or southwesterly circulation over Ontario on Sunday cloudy weather with little or no snow is anticipated.

British Officer Gets Reservations By Artful Dodge

London, Jan. 4. (AP)—The cat was out of the bag today—the whole story of how a 27-year-old British officer failed repeatedly to get New Year's Eve reservations at Claridge's and finally got them.

Tired of hearing the reservation clerk of the exclusive hotel reply "Sorry, all booked up," the officer telephoned again, identifying himself as the "secretary to the Maharajah of Feshawar," and asked for a table for four. He got it within five minutes.

The "Maharajah" wearing a gaudy bedspread turban, enjoyed himself hugely at the party, basking in the respect and admiration of the hotel's staff, who couldn't have been expected to know there was no such Maharajah.

'Monty' Wants Friendly Contract With Soviet Army

Lord Montgomery asked if he would see Prime Minister Stalin said, "I hope very much to see him, but it is a matter that lies in his hands."

The war office said Lord Montgomery would stop at British headquarters in Berlin for the weekend and arrive in Moscow "early next week" to spend about four days, the guest of the Russian Army but quartered in the British Embassy.

Stalin himself invited Lord Montgomery to visit Moscow "some time" at their last meeting at the Potsdam Conference in July, 1945.

Canadian Graves Well Kept in Italy

Ottawa, Jan. 4 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King yesterday made public letters received from officials at Ortona, advising him of the care being taken of graves of Canadian troops who died in the liberation of that little Italian town.

Ont letter from Signor d'Ambrosia Giovanni, prefect of Ortona, told of a procession organized by the local women's club All Souls' Day to the Moro River military cemetery, a short distance from the town, where flowers were laid on the graves.

Four Youths Rob C.N.R. Cafeteria At Toronto of $240 and Cigarettes

Toronto, Jan. 4 —(CP)— Four youths, one with a gun, another wielding a butcher knife, today held up and robbed the Canadian National Railways roundhouse cafeteria at Fleet Street and Spadina Avenue, fleeing with $240 and 15 cartons of cigarettes.

John Higgins, 55, counterman, said the four came into the cafeteria, ordered two rounds of coffee and waited until upwards of a dozen workmen had left.

"I was working at the sink when I felt the gun poked in my back," said Higgins. "'This is a stick-up', one of them told me. I thought they were joking. Almost every day one yardman will say to me, 'This is a holdup, let's have some coffee'."

The youths took $40 from two cash registers and grabbed a cash box containing $200. They fled in a car later found abandoned.

Higgins works for Henry Parkinson, partially blind First World War veteran, who with his wife operates the cafeteria, aided by The Canadian Institute for the Blind.

BRITAIN REDUCES TRAIN SERVICES TO SAVE FUEL

Six Main Line And 73 Local Trains Cut Off By Great Western Railway

London, Jan. 4 (CP)—The Great Western Railway today announced suspension of six main line and 73 local line services as the coal shortage continued to plague British industry.

The huge Suffolk Cement Works was shut down, the United Kingdom's largest producer of soda ash worked at far below normal and the world's biggest brick works was threatened with a complete stoppage.

London, Midland and Scottish Railway officials said local trains may be cut but main line services are not yet affected.

The GWR cancellations—effective, Monday—are partly to save coal and partly to provide extra freight locomotives for coal transport.

Transport Lacking

Lack of sufficient transport to move coal from pits to factories is the main cause of industrial stoppages. The situation is intensified by a "go-slow" movement among workers at the Stratford locomotive depot of the Liverpool and Northeastern Railway which today resulted in the cancellation of 35 short-distance trains during off-peak hours.

The situation at the Stewarthy, Bedfordshire, brickworks was reported "unchanged" with a company spokesman saying the giant kilns will go out unless substantial quantities of coal are received today or tomorrow.

It is estimated this would result in the loss of 1,500 houses weekly. Newspapermen were told by a company spokesman it might be 12 months before some kilns are operating again as 10,000 tons of hard coal are needed to relight them all although normal weekly consumption is less than 3,000 tons.

Fleets of trucks rushing coal to Midlands, factories in the north have eased the situation, at least for the time being.

The United Kingdom coal shortage has resulted in a sharp drop in shipments to Eire and a number of small gas works in that country already are near the bottom of their bins and there is a threat of curtailment to cement works and other industries.

Motorists Asked To Remove Cars From Streets

Co-operation of local motorists in keeping Front Street clear of automobiles over the weekend in order to facilitate clearing away of snow was asked by officials of the public works department today. Plans are to work throughout the weekend, including all day Sunday, to again clear away the snow which has piled up since the last snow storm.

According to the police department motorists have co-operated fairly well in leaving cars off the streets to permit the operation of city snowplows, but in isolated cases cars have had to be towed away in order that plows may work uninterrupted.

Royal Message Received by Stirling Couple on Their 71st Anniversary

Stirling —(Special)— In this snowbound Canadian village in the warmth and comfort of their modest home, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Eggleton, Canada's oldest married couple, celebrated New Year's Day and their 71st, wedding anniversary surrounded by messages of congratulation from all parts of the Dominion and from His Majesty King George VI.

The ninety-year-old "groom" and his "bride" of 87 glowed with pride as they read words of felicitation forwarded them from Buckingham Palace, London, England, by the King's Secretary.

STORM DAMAGE IN PROVINCE IS $5,000,000

Electric Power Restored at Hamilton and Roads Show Improvement

(By The Canadian Press)

Clear and colder weather was promised today for Ontario, digging from under a snow and sleet fall of eight to 10 inches that was estimated unofficially to have cost $5,000,000 in losses to transport and business, and property damaged in accidents since the big storm started last weekend.

Electric power was restored in Hamilton ,where most industries were shut down for hours Friday by failure of the 60-cycle current after a break at the DeCrew power station. Scattered hamlets were still without power in Kent and Chatham counties.

Toronto was getting around much better after a good start was made on clearing the snow and slush from main arteries Most provincial highways were open but dangerous in spots. Many rural roads were still blocked.

Accident toll was a minimum as motorbus and taxicab companies, commercial and private drivers remained off the road over wide areas.

Biggest Loss at Hamilton

The estimate of $5,000,000 loss was made by the Toronto Globe and Mail after compilation of the multifarious effects on trade and commerce, of cars and trucks damaged in accidents.

Part of this unofficial estimate was the revenue lost when both Ontario senior amateur hockey games scheduled for last night were postponed, Due to blocked highways officials postponed the game between Hamilton Tigers at Stratford Indians, and between Hamilton Pats at Owen Sound Mohawks.

Probably the chief business loss was that in Hamilton, where the 60-cycle current failed during the morning Friday and put thousands of workers into idleness as industries and hotels went into a blackout.

The 60-cycle current was restored during Friday evening. Residential areas weren't hurt because they are mostly 25-cycle current which continued to operate.

Reserve Gas Nearly Used Up

Restoration of 60-cycle power came in Hamilton just in time to prevents a complete stoppage through failure of gas, which is dependent there on electrical maintenance service. The United Gas and Fuel Company said the reserve gas supply had been just about exhausted when electric power was restored and the gas services resumed functioning.

One of Hamilton's chief industries, the Hamilton Works plant of the Steel Company of Canada continued operations throughtout with its own power plant, although smaller stelco plants were stopped by the power failure. Also halted for hours Friday were International Harvester, National Steel Car, Canadian Westinghouse, Hamilton Cottons and Firestone Rubber Factories.

SIXTEEN PERSONS INJURED

Bombay, Jan. 4 (AP).—Police reported 16 persons injured by acid throwers in Hindu-Moslem disorders today. They arrested 27 persons in connection with a stabbing in line with a program of mass roundups to catch culprits and induce people to drive away trouble-makers. Last night they fired twice at stone throwers.

CITIZENSHIP WEEK TOUCHED OFF BY NAT. CEREMONY

Ottawa, Jan. 4. (CP)—For Canadians today, their privileges and Allied responsibilities as citizens of the Dominion took on a deeper significance as the sequel to a tangible demonstration of the new national citizenship.

The enhanced status of Canadians as citizens under the newly-proclaimed Citizenship Act was crystallized for the nation generally last night from a focal point before the country's highest judicial tribunal, where a group of candidates including Prime Minister King became fully-fledged "Canadians" under the law.

Before six judges of the Supreme Court of Canada, robed in flowing scarlet and ermine, the Prime Minister and others received certificates entitling them to call themselves Canadians under 1946 legislation, that became effective at New Year's.

The ceremony in the high oak-panelled Supreme Court Chamber of the Justice Building, going out to the country in a nation-wide broadcast, touched off Citizenship Week and was the forerunner of a series of 16 such functions to be held across the country to emphasize the significance of the new legislation.

The Prime Minister became almost literally the first citizen of Canada, by receiving, from Chief Justice Rinfret, the first certificate of "proof of citizenship". About a dozen other "old Canadians" went through the same ritual.

Another dozen others—alien-born applicants for naturalization—took the oath of allegiance and received their citizenship papers from the hands of the Chief Justice.

It was the first naturalization ceremony of its kind in the history of the Dominion.

The new Canadians came from every province, and represented a variety of races and occupations. Those obtaining proof of citizenship were from the Ottawa district.

To Prime Minister King and the other "Old Canadians", the Chief Justice delivered their documents to the accompaniment of a handshake. To the others, the head of the High Court administered the oath, after which they were given their citizenship papers by State Secretary Colin Gibson.

Mr. King ,in a 10-minute speech winding up the ceremony, declared Canada was giving the world a great hope for the future in "making nationality the servant, and not the master, in world affairs".

"The unity of Canada," he said, "belongs not to Canada alone but to mankind. Only by extending throughout the world the ideals of mutual tolerance, of racial co-operation and of equality among men, which forms the basis of Canada's nationhood, can nationality come to serving humanity".

Meanwhile, the general military situation in Indonesia took a turn for the better with only minor brushes reported on other fronts.

LEADERS TACKLE BILBO STALEMATE IN THE SENATE

Republicans Threaten To Hold House In Continuous Session Until Filibuster Ends

By JACK BELL

Washington, Jan. 4. (AP) — Republican leaders tackled the Theodore G. Bilbo stalemate to hold the U.S. Senate in a marathon session until Southern Senators abandon their filibuster against ousting the Mississippian.

As an alternative, the Republican strategists saw a chance to drum up the two-thirds majority necessary to limit debate. They ordered a morning caucus to consider means of untying the parliamentary knot which kept not only Bilbo but also 35 others from taking the oath of office at the morning session.

The Senate was called to meet at noon, and Senator Robert Taft (Rep.-O.) said it "will probably be necessary to hold the Senate in continuous session" unless Bilbo's backers quit talking.

Senators Owen Brewster (Rep.-Me.) and Homer Ferguson (Rep:-Mich.) predicted an attempt to impose cloture—curtailment of debate—would be the final decision by the Republican strategists.

If the Republicans could count on 11 Democrats who voted with them on one point yesterday they would have exactly the two-thirds majority to invoke this seldom-used device. The Republicans have 29 members already seated against 31 Democrats. The 11 Democratic votes would give them a 40 to 20 majority for debate limitations.

But the 80th Congress went into its second day with Democrats still in the Senate saddle despite the 51-45 majority the opposition will hold when all are sworn in.

Republicans had already organized the House and adjourned it till Monday.

Adjourned Till Monday

President Truman may deliver his State of the Union message if the senate deadlock over Bilbo is broken or an agreement can be reached to take time out and march to the house for a joint session.

Taft said he believes that once Bilbo got in, he couldn't legally be removed without a two-thirds vote.

Bilbo, who marched up to the rostrum and right back again without being given the oath yesterday, remarked to a reporter that "like Tennyson's little book the thing runs on forever."

The Mississippian has been charged by the senate war investigating committee with using his office for his personal gain in dealing with war contracts, and by a Republican minority of the campaign investigating committee with violating federal laws in preventing negroes from voting in the primaries.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has been inquiring into Bilbo's activities but the Mississippian said he isn't worried.

"I have been investigated by five government departments in the last year and a half and they haven't found anything yet and won't," he said.

TO BORROW MINES

Tokyo, Jan. 4 — (AP) — The newspaper Asaki said today the Japanese government would "borrow" Japan's principal coal mines for the next three years in an attempt to boost production. Asaki reported the government would adopt a "state monopoly system." It made no mention of nationalization of the mines.

Feud of Naples Families Claims Two More Victims in Village Duel

Rome, Jan. 4—(AP)—A tale of a two-year-old feud between two hot-blooded Neapolitan families that culminated in a formal duel with pistols and hand grenades in the main square of the village of Scisciano was told today in dispatches from Naples.

When the duel ended, after 20 minutes, two men were dead—the third and fourth to die in the feud—and the ordinarily peaceful village was terror-stricken.

Back in January 1945, the story went, a brother of one Amilcare Danzica slew a son of one Salvatore Nucerino. In March, another son of Nucerino exacted vengeance, killing another brother of Danzica. The law punished both crimes, but passions were not allayed.

Yesterday, after months of muttered threats, Nucerino, a man 56 years old, and a third son, Luigi, 20, appeared in the Scisciano Square heavily armed with pistols.

The 21-year-old Danzica, to whom — as the Italian phrase has it — they had "given a date," was not long in appearing, his pockets bulging with hand grenades. The battle began at once.

When the noise quieted and the smoke blew away the frightened villagers emerged timidly into the square to find only the youthful Luigi still alive, the dispatches said.

Sidney Chambers May Have Burned Body in Furnace

Taken in Custody Tuesday When He Attempted Suicide

St. Catharines, Jan. 4—(CP)—Police today charged slender, nervous Sidney George Chambers, 34-year-old stationary engineer, with the Dec. 23 slaying of nine-year-old Marion Rusnak and indicated the child's body may have been burned in a canning plant furnace.

Police charged Chambers, married and the father of a small child, lured the girl to his dormitory room at the Canadian Canners Ltd., plant two nights before Christmas on the pretense of getting a gift for her 10-months-old brother.

When last seen alive the little girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Rusnak, was discussing a present for her brother with a stranger on a St. Catharines street corner near the Canners plant where Chambers worked and lived.

As yet, police said, no body has been found but they planned to sift ashes from the canning plant boilers.

The charge of murder—a complete surprise in a case that has been deep mystery for 12 days—was laid after questioning of the accused by Provincial Police Inspector Charles Wood, the man who broke the Dick murder case in Hamilton where the burned bones of the murdered man, recovered from his widow's furnace played a large part in convicting Mrs. Evelyn Dick of the crime.

Comes as Surprise

Announcement that Chambers had been charged with the child's slaying came as a surprise. It was not generally known that he was being held but police said today he had been in custody since last Tuesday charged with attempted suicide.

The charge culminated the greatest police and civilian hunt in the history of Ontario's Lincoln county, involving as it did a search through the snow about St. Catharines by thousands of organized civilians.

Only yesterday police said they planned to drain the old Welland Canal channel on the chance that the girl's body might be there. They gave no indication they had Chambers in custody and were working on such a hot lead.

Almost to the end the parents of the girl kept alive a faint hope that she was alive. But as the days went by, after the family spent a sorrowful, anxious Christmas and no word came, their hope was a dim, pitiful thing.

Last Seen Dec. 23

Marion last was seen on the evening of Monday, Dec. 23 in conversation with a man described as "tall and thin."

Chambers, a slim five foot, 11-inch nervous man, appeared before Magistrate H. D. Hallet and was remanded in custody until Jan. 10 on the murder charge at the request of Crown Attorney E. H. Lancaster, K. C.

Previously he had appeared in court on a charge of attempted suicide and was remanded on that count until Monday.

The family of the child, Mr. and Mrs. John Rusnak were apprised of developments by police.

After Chamber's police court appearance yesterday he was placed in a line-up at police headquarters and viewed by Mrs. Betty Smyth, the last person to see Marion.

Partially Overcome

Then came questioning by Detective James Anderson of the St. Catharines police and Inspector Charles Wood, the man who broke the Dick murder case in Hamilton.

Chambers had been charged with attempted suicide on New Year's Eve afternoon when discovered in a dormitory at the Canadian Canners plant with both wrists slashed and partially overcome by natural gas fumes. When led to the cell block shortly before midnight last night, the accused, married and father of a small child, seemed highly nervous. He wore a brown suit and grey top coat.

A former resident of Toronto, he had been in St. Catharines for the last seven months, living in a dormitory at the canning plant where, so police charged, he lured Marion on the pretense of buying a present for her "10-months-old brother, Johnny.

Find Wrapping Paper.

Mrs. Smyth, when she passed a child on the street on the night of Dec. 23 — a child she later identified as Marion — said she overheard the man ask, "What would your baby brother like for Christmas — a rattle perhaps?" When Marion agreed, the woman said, the pair left and she saw them last at Wellington Street and Welland Ave., one block from the canning plant quarters.

Police said their most important clue was the discovery of Christmas wrapping paper which covered gifts Marion was taking from the apartment of friends, Mrs. John Lepierre, when she disappeared.

This paper, rolled in a ball, was found in the yard of the canning plant near Chamber's room, by Const. William Watson, and Mrs. Lepierre identified it as the wrappings around Christmas gifts Marion was happily carrying homeward. The package contained a drum for Johnny, stockings for Marion and her six-year-old sister, Cecile.

Apparently Strangled

Police said they were considering the likelihood the child had been strangled, apparently after being enticed to Chamber's room.

When she disappeared Marion carried her Christmas parcel and a quart of milk purchased for her mother from a corner grocery.

During the intensive police search St. Catharines city council offered a $1,000 reward to spur the hunt which precipitated a flood of reports to police from all sections of southern Ontario and nearby New York State.

But, said one veteran police official, the probe always came back to the gift wrapping paper and its discovery in the yard of Canadian Canners Ltd.

Crown Attorney Lancaster said following Chamber's remand on the murder charge, that he would ask for an additional remand of one week, prior to the engineer's appearance at a preliminary hearing which is necessary before he can be committed for trial.

Secures Reservation As "Secretary" to Indian Potentate

London, Jan. 4—(AP)—The cat was out of the bag—the whole story of how a 27-year-old British officer failed repeatedly to get New Year's Eve reservations at Claridge's, and finally got them.

Tired of hearing the reservation clerk of the exclusive hotel reply "Sorry, all booked up," the officer telephoned again, identifying himself as the "Secretary to the Maharajah of Peshawar," and asked for a table for four. He got it within five minutes.

The "maharajah," wearing a gaudy bedspread turban, enjoyed himself hugely at the party, basking in the respect and admiration of the hotel's staff, who couldn't have been expected to know there was no such maharajah.

Mercury Drops To 16.3 Below Zero in Night

Although the majority of local residents may not have been aware of the fact, old Jack Frost slipped one in below the belt on Friday night as the mercury dropped to 16.3 degrees below, the coldest of the winter at Belleville. At nine o'clock Saturday morning the thermometer still registered six below.

However, with the absence of wind residents failed to realize the extent of the temperature drop during the night and the extreme zero weather was not fully noted until the warmth of dwellings had been left behind.

But motors were not to be fooled by the drop in temperature and this morning towing was the order of the day to coax baulky motors to life.

Faithful old Dobbin joined forces with his rival, the motor-car in a successful race with the Stork on January 2, and the result is a husky 1947 youngster born to Mr. and Mrs. John Craig, R.R. 6, Belleville.

Mr. Craig started for the Belleville hospital some nine miles away from their home in Thurlow in a blinding snowstorm early in the day but drifting snow and heavy banks finally stalled the family automobile.

Securing a team of horses, Mr. Craig had his car hauled almost to the city limits in a slow race against time and the Stork, but managed to reach the hospital in time for the blessed event to take place. At the present time both mother and baby are doing well, with Father taking care of the other four young members of the Craig family.

MASTER MAY RETIRE

New York, Jan. 4 (AP). — The British liner Queen Elizabeth with more than 2,000 passengers, sailed for Southampton early today after being fog-bound at its pier for more than 12 hours.

Before the sailing, Commodore Sir James Bisset, master of the ship, said he expected to be retired at the end of the voyage.

"I would prefer to continue on for a while," he said, "but I passed the 63-year-old age limit for skippers last July. It's in the wind that a new master will command the Elizabeth when she returns here this month."

Chinese Reds Use Skip-About Tactics

Peiping, Jan. 4 (AP).—The Chinese Communists, employing skip about tactics in their harrassment of government troops, struck today along the strategic Linfen-Taning highway in Southern Shansi Province.

Government sources said the Communists were trying to cut off a national threat against the Shansi-Shensi border. Government troops recently captured the 55-mile highway between Linfen and Taning.

The Communists already have recaptured several villages on the highway.

Kiwanis Club Officers Installed By District and Lieutenant Governors at Albert College

Ladies Night Thoroughly Enjoyed and Principal Address Delivered by Canon Northcote-Burke of Ottawa

In the delightful surroundings of Ackerman Hall at Albert College on Friday evening, District Governor Walter Stewart of Kiwanis International installed the new officers of the Belleville Kiwanis Club before 225 members, wives and invited guests. Among those of the invited guests were the Lieutenant Governor Elmer Cogswell of Kingston, and the presidents and their wives of the Rotary, Kinsmen, Y's Men and Optimist Clubs of the city. It was a gala evening with the installation ceremony being broadcast over Station CJBQ through the courtesy of the Houston Lumber Company. To Rev. Bert Howard, his assistants and the staff of Albert College the Kiwanis Club is indeed grateful for the many kindnesses shown in the many kindnesses shown in allowing the club to use the delightful quarters for the Ladies' Night. At the conclusion of the ceremony the guests enjoyed a delightful hour of dancing and good fellowship to the strains of popular airs supplied by Mr. and Mrs. William Warham. It was one of the most successful and enjoyable evenings ever staged in the history of the local club during their 24 years of service in this community.

Canon Burke Speaker

Besides the ceremony of installation, that was carried out in a most capable manner by the District Governor, the guests heard one of the most instructive and interesting addresses, that has been their privilege to hear in some time when Canon Northcote-Burke of St. John's Church, Ottawa, delivered the principal address the subject being a New Year's message. He asked his listeners to look back on the year past and forward into the year ahead and see what could be done to correct the faults and mishaps of the previous year. The staff of Albert College with the assistance of a cheerful number of volunteers served a most delicious repast of fruit cup, celery, radishes, carrot curls, roast lamb with mint sauce mashed potatoes, corn niblets and cherry pie a la mode with coffee.

Before the meal was concluded two members of the club presented each lady present with a beautiful handkerchief wrapped in the distinctive colors of the club.

Presented With Roses.

To Mrs. Ethel Stiver, the retiring president of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Kiwanis Club, was presented a bouquet of roses by Dick Kuntze and Taylor Franklin made a presentation of the same to Mrs. Grace Vanner, wife of the retiring president of the club. A past president's plaque was presented to Mark Vanner by Past President Jack Trudeau with the District Governor presenting the past president's pin to Mr. Vanner. The toast to the ladies was proposed by Past President Lorne McDougall and a most suitable reply was given by Mrs. Stiver. The guests at the head table were introduced by Harold Seldon and the sing song was conducted by Harold Carruthers and Vic White.

At the conclusion of the installation of the officers the Lieutenant-Governor, Elmer Cogswell, installed the directors, Reg. Anderson, Taylor Franklin, Len Dandeno, Ross Stiver, Harry Trepanier, Norman Edwards and Albert Jones, after which the newly-installed president, Jack White, had the various chairmen of the committees of the club take a bow.

One of the most delightful features of the evening was the three solos given by Rotarian Jack Deacon and the two piano solos by Stanley Hagerman, Jr. These artists simply carried their audience by storm and they were loath to have them depart. Mr. Deacon was never in better voice, while young Stanley displayed an artistry that was compelling and forceful. Leo. B. Riggs, an artist in his own right, accompanied Mr. Deacon and assisted with the community singing.

Guests Introduced.

The District Governor was introduced by Past Lieutenant-Governor Cliff Baragar and the speaker was introduced by Rev. Arthur Smith with Kiwanis appreciation being expressed by Vice President Ted Schwab. Archie Harris introduced the Lieutenant-Governor to the assembly. In his last message to the club before retiring as president Mark Vanner gave a review of the year's work and in part stated:

Review of the Year 1946.

"The time has now arrived for me, as your president, for the year 1946, to review as briefly as possible, our clubs' activities during my term of office.

"First of all, let me say that any measure of success that has been ours during the past 12 months, is attributable, not to me, but to your splendid cooperation and loyalty in furthering the work and welfare of our organization. As we look back over the year just ended what do we find on the record. We find that we increased our active membership by 32—28 new members and four affiliated members. We lost 11 members—one by death in the person of Arthur Kinghorn who passed away on Feb. 23 last. Our net increase was 21 making our present active membership of 111 and for this achievement we received our lieutenant governor's award.

Fresh Air Camp.

"For the second successful season our Fresh Air Camp was operated during the months of July and August under the expert supervision of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stevens.

"Our camp facilities were enjoyed by 250 less fortunate boys and girls and 183 Cubs and Girl Guides, making a total of 433 in all. We served 11,000 meals exclusive of the staff. In addition to our regular program of activities at the camp we operated classes for handicrafts and motion pictures were shown twice weekly. First and fourth Belleville Scout Groups were sponsored by us for the greater part of the year. However, it was found necessary to discontinue our work with the first Belleville group since this was only a temporary arrangement to carry through the war years.

"We again assisted the Y.M.C.A. in furnishing supervision and equipment for juvenile hockey and softball and gave our support to the improvement of play grounds and recreation facilities for the youth of Belleville. We sponsored the Kiwanis junior baseball team which was successful in reaching the final playoff games.

Provide Accommodation.

"At Kiwanis Centre alterations were made to provide accommodation for Mr. and Mrs. Stevens in order that they might carry on the continuity of their work with the less fortunate boys and girls in the city. Additional space was allocated for the Victorian Order of Nurses so that this organization is now completely housed at the centre.

"Our members raised $1,056.00 for the War Amps Fund and assisted in the community service and Salvation Army campaigns, organized and supervised the second clothing drive for the destitute peoples of Europe.

"We attended inter-club meetings at Kingston, Cobourg and Peterborough, also our International Convention at Atlantic City and our District Convention at St. Andrews by the Sea. Under the heading of ways and means we again operated our "Pack Up Your Troubles" show and street carnival, in addition to which we sponsored a rodeo show and motor cycle races. The building of two houses was also undertaken and these should be completed early in the new year.

All Kiwanis Orchestra.

"Our club is unique in the fact that we have an all Kiwanis orchestra and the musical talent of our members has provided the finest entertainment on many occasions.

"One other achievement stands out in my mind as being worthy of mention and that is the forming of our Inter-Service Club Council. This council is made up of the president and one other member from each service club in the city. Briefly, the purpose of the council is as follows:

"To co-ordinate the various activities of the clubs concerned and to promote a spirit of fellowship and cooperation among them. To study matters concerning any overlapping of club activities.

"To study carefully all the social needs of the city and to find a way to efficiently meet their needs.

"To survey dates for money raising activities of the clubs and to avoid, if at all possible, conflicts or encroachments of dates already set aside for the clubs.

Praises Ladies' Auxiliary.

"My report would not be complete, however, without due recognition and praise for the fine accomplishments of our Ladies' Auxiliary, under the capable leadership and direction of their president, Mrs. Ethel Stiver and her executive officers. The results as outlined here tell the story far more eloquently than I could hope to do. Here is the record: For the Canadian Red Cross Society they made 123 articles. For the Children's Aid Society they made the following: Cut out 141 pairs of pyjamas and completed 107 pairs, 65 dresses, 12 aprons, eight complete layettes, comprising 142 articles, making a grand total of 449 articles in all.

In addition to this they prepared and distributed 20,000 ration books for the citizens of Belleville and district. They assisted in the collection of funds for Community Service and Salvation Army campaigns, raised $811.75 by sale of tickets on the Hope Chest and $554.40 on our tag day. Their meetings were attended by 376 members and the friendship and fellowship created thereby has been a real tangible asset to our club.

I feel quite confident that your President Elect, Mrs. Flossie Smith, will make an excellent leader and will, I am sure, encourage that spirit of endeavour which has always characterized your fine organization.

Raised $7,860

The total amount raised during the year for our welfare work amounted to $7,860.00 and our expenditures totalled $6,003.00. We operated in all 24 committees and our committee chairmen with the combined efforts of all members, are to be commended for their achievements. Your Board of Directors have discharged their duties faithfully and well and the clubs' business, under their direction, was most capably managed.

Our luncheon programs were planned well in advance and were always of the highest order and the editing of our club bulletin was well executed.

May I inject here a word or two to express our sincere thanks and appreciation of the work accomplished by our Secretary-Treasurer who has served our club so faithfully in that capacity for the past four years.

We are grateful indeed for the splendid co-operation of the Press, the Radio and other service organizations and to the merchants, manufacturers and the general public for their most generous support throughout the year.

Incoming President Praised

In the selection of your President for 1947 let me say you have chosen a man whose heart and soul is in Kiwanis and I want to bespeak for him your whole hearted support. Jack White will be our 26th President and his year will be our 24th year. Give him your friendly co-operation and encouragement and our clubs' success for 1947 is assured.

Remember, ladies and gentlemen, we have a club to be proud of and a reputation, built up through the years, which requires the very utmost we can give.

Let us all resolve to maintain that high standard we have achieved and keep our banner flying high at all times. In closing, I wish to say how much I have enjoyed the privilege of serving as your President for 1946. It has been an experience that I shall treasure as long as I live, for it has proved to me beyond doubt, that Kiwanis does provide the means of forming those enduring friendships and makes possible the increase of righteousness, justice, patriotism and goodwill.

President Jack White in accepting the presidency of the club for the ensuing year said:

Mingled Feelings

"Proud that you have seen fit to elect me as your president and chairman of your board of directors for 1947. It is a distinct honor for me and I feel it very keenly and please accept my sincere thanks and I assure you that as has been the case in the past years, the business of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville will be conducted honestly, fairly and no decisions will be made until your board of directors shall have carefully considered the business at hand from all angles.

"My second thought is that I fear I will not be capable of guiding your club as successfully as your previous presidents, but I feel that with such a fine capable board of directors and with the assistance of each and every member of our club I will not get too far away from the straight and narrow path that spells with large letters Success."

"And my third thought is happiness. Happy that I may be of some service in furthering the wonderful work and aims of our club.

Theme For 1947.

Kiwanis Theme for 1947 is—(We build for peace, Patriotism and Opportunity.)

We in this club must, and are only too anxious to build for peace, we must strengthen our own local contracts that we may have peace within our own Governments, peace within our own business vocations and it naturally follows, peace within our own homes. And we must have patriotism. We must be loyal to our country, our governments, our communities and our homes. And this Kiwanians is our opportunity our challenge for 1947, it matters little how we accomplish it, each in his own way.

"We in our own club specialize in the child who has little chance in this world, whose future is not so bright, may we this year find ways and means of taking several hundreds more kiddies to the camp at Roblin Lake and also have them at the Kiwanis Centre building so that they may be taught and guided and they themselves see a different way to build their lives, that they may have peace, be loyal to their communities and homes and may we as a club be able to give each and every child this opportunity.

BEQUESTS FOR ROTARY AND BROCKVILLE HOSPITAL

Brockville, Jan. 4 (CP).—Ellen Archer of neighboring Morristown, N.Y., left a bequest of $8,000 to the Brockville Rotary Club to be used to assist crippled children and other children in need, it was announced today. A $6,000 bequest went to the Brockville General Hospital for the purchase of surgical instruments and $8,000 to the Victorian Order of Nurses in Alberta.

Paintings Are Reproduced In Sylva Magazine

Paintings of the well-known Canadian artist Manly MacDonald, A.R.C.A., O.S.A., are reproduced in color in the recent issue of Sylva, published by and for the members of the Department of Lands and Forests of Ontario. These are works of art which have been reproduced on postcards in recent years for the holiday trade. Many people are therefore familiar with these paintings.

Mr. MacDonald who spent his early life in Tyendinaga receiving the inspiration and foundation for his lifework in art which is intimately associated with the life of rural Ontario and Ontario landscape, is now a resident of Toronto and is a member of the staff of the Ontario School of Art.

Sylva contains a photograph of the artist himself and reproductions of four of his paintings. On the cover is a woodland scene, "Loading Logs" in all the appeal of winter coloring and within are the reproductions of "Autumn Woods", a scene from Lonsdale, Tyendinaga, in a winter landscape and a familiar picture of old days, a blacksmith shop, when this was so prominent a link in transportation.

Of the artist, the publication says: "Mr. MacDonald is an artist widely known as an interpreter of Old Ontario which he portrays with a charm of color that has made his paintings the treasured possessions of many Ontario homes.

"Point Anne, Ont., was the place of his birth in 1889. His art education began in 1910 at the Albright Art School at Buffalo, from which he went to the Boston Museum School of Fine Arts and finally studied under J. W. Beatty, R.C.A., of the Ontario College of Art.

"In 1918 he was commissioned by the government to do a series of canvases for Canadian War Memorials of women working on the land.

"He was awarded the travelling scholarship of the Royal Canadian Academy and spent the year 1921 abroad where he studied the great works of art in all the important galleries of Europe.

During the past summer Mr. MacDonald with Mrs. MacDonald was in this section for a considerable time at work in his chosen field of art.

DR. R. BURR APPOINTED ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR

Dr. Ronald Burr, native of Bloomfield and son of Mr. Clayton Burr of this city, has been elevated to the position of associate professor at Queen's University, the appointment to be retroactive to October 1, 1946, it was learned here today. DEPENDABILITY:—
Lack of familiarity with funeral merchandise naturally imposes a burden upon men and women when the need arises for such purchase. The established reputation of the funeral establishment for fair dealing is consequently an important factor. Our organization has been serving the people of this community for many years and has earned an unblemished reputation for giving honest value at all times. The family can feel safe in this knowledge.

Contrasts in Spain

Having visited an 'incomparably lovely country,' and seen with horror the violent contrasts that exist there, it is Mrs. Belinda Davies' hope that one day she will return to a 'different Spain,' with its people being given the chance to live 'in freedom from fear, and famine and disease' Her articles follows in London Calling.

I feel almost as if I have to give my credentials for doing a tour of Spain at a time when the Spanish question is so hotly debated. My explanation is merely this: I had always wanted to go to Spain more than any other country in Europe, and I have never been there before. As a child, Spain meant to me Philip II and the Spanish Armada and the 'riches of the Indies,' and, also, Washington Irving's Tales of the Alhambra. As an adolescent, Spain meant El Greco and Goya and Velasquez. And as an adult, it meant the civil war and General Franco. I can truthfully say that visiting it now meant all of those, and all of them mixed up together.

I went expecting nothing more definite than a beautiful country and I found the most indescribably beautiful country that I have ever seen. No one will ever convince me that there can be anything lovelier on earth than Spain.

Madrid airport was like any other airport, except that it was somewhat more inefficient, since it took an hour-and-a-half to clear the passengers on my 'plane. But I did not worry when there was every sort of sherry I have ever thought of and I was warmer than I had been for years, and I could sip my sherry and gaze across just a tiny portion of that perfection of austerity, the Castilian plain.

I walked round Madrid until two in the morning, and I found that many Spaniards did, too. It was wonderful—though I did get a little tired of the sight of two armed policemen on every corner They tell me that Madrid used to be the gayest capital in Europe and I can well believe it because no city lends itself to gaiety so well. It was not in the least gay when I was there, but then it was out of season. But there were hundreds of attractive girls in charming frocks and the best shoes I have ever seen; and there were hundreds of delightful, sunburnt children.

I thought that if this were Spain it was wonderful; here, at any rate, I was not going to be horrified and perpetually hurt, as I had been in Central Europe, by the sight of children undernourished as a result of the late war. I did, however, notice that the price of food in the shops and in the restaurants was fantastic.

Then, one day, I wandered into the poorer quarters of Madrid, and visited a few cafes. The second day I was in the city, I was told that there was freedom of speech under the regime. This certainly surprised me, because I had been led to believe otherwise, so I asked whether this involved holding meetings or speaking in public, or any of the things which mean freedom of speech in England and America. It did not; it meant that the regime had decided that since the Spaniard will talk, you might just as well let him talk in his own cafes and his home.

And they certainly do talk. I found this everywhere I went, but I also found that in the cafes they watch the door to see if a stranger comes in. And there is always someone trying to protect the person who is talking from saying to much. Time after time, I have seen someone try to stop the man who was talking to us, and, every time, the talker pointed out that we were amigos, friends.

Both in Madrid and elsewhere, I was amazed by the people who talked against the regime, because they came from every class, and were sometimes people from whom you least expected it. I wish I could tell you innumerable stories I heard, but this is impossible, because it would put people I admired in danger of arrest. The very fact that is so should show how free Spain is.

We spent one day in Toledo. In Madrid, I had found my El Grecos and Goyas and so on, and it is worth going to Madrid just to see them. I had also found my civil war. In Toledo, I found Phillip II, and began to find Spain.

When I sat in the main square and, for the first time in Spain saw hungry people and starving dogs and begging children, I wondered whether I was really going to like this country, which was certainly not the showpiece I had seen in Modurn Madrid. I felt somewhat depressed, in any case, because the road from Madrid to Toledo is scarred so bitterly with civil war.

The most ironical sight in Toledo is the row of chains hanging on the cathedral wall, chains which were taken from christian captives when the Moors were driven out of Spain. The Moors never came back to Toledo until they were brought back by General Franco, to fight the Spaniards.

In Toledo, there are even more beautiful El Grecos than there are in the Prado in Madrid, and also, there is one room in the Cathedral where the riches of the Indies really come to light. Gold figures with emerald crowns and bracelets, unbelieveable wealth, which made me understand why Spain, when the richest country in the world, slowly decayed and was so easily defeated by an upstart Britain. The wealth of Spain is in the churches.

In a first-class sleeper from Madrid to Granada, I caught my first flea in Spain, but alas not my last. I presume if you travel by car and can avoid being bitten in the south of Spain, but I travelled by train and 'bus. The assortment of flying and crawling things which bit me in Spain is no reflection on the cleanliness of the Spanish people, who remain absolutely amazingly spruce against impossible odds. I have seen far more dirty shirts in England than in Spain. The fact remains that I got bitten by everything; and, from Madrid southwards, I saw children with the most awful sores I have ever seen, many of which I believe, must be due to infected bites that could have been prevented by any nurse.

Also in the south, I realized that my belief that I had left starving children behind in Central Europe was entirely wrong In the south of Spain, the children of the poor are in a worse condition than any children I have seen. They have rickets, head sores, face sores, beriberi, and they are verminous and in rags. And they are so hungry that they will chew melon rind.

So I found the Alhambra; and even the dreams of a child had never led me to imagine anything as lovely. How very rightly Washington Irving described that perpetual music of running water. Apart from a plaque to Washington Irving, the honor and glory of Granada are for Ferdinand and Isabella, who rescued the city from the Moors, and who also sent Columbus to discover America. They are evidently especially to be venerated because they managed in one reign to persecute and expel both the Moors and the Jews.

Fortunately, the Moors left behind them their wonderful aqueduct from the Sierras which still after 500 years, brings the water down to Granada. The fact that before the water runs—without filtering—into the pipes made by the Spaniards, a large number of people wash their clothes and household utensils in it, may account in part for a peculiarity unpleasant form of colic which everyone gets periodically. The sun and mountain air of Granada must induce one of the most healthy climates imaginable because if conditions existed in any English town as they do in Granada half the population would die of fever.

When I think of the breathtaking loveliness of Granada with its old town beneath, and the orange-brown walls of the Alhambra above, and the snow-capped Sierra Nevadas all around, I wish I did not have to remember sickness, and starvation, and slums in which people live like animals.

And I also wish, when I think of my bedroom in Granada, with its wrought-iron barred window with pale blue plumbago scrambling up it, I need only remember looking out in the morning at another unmatchable Spanish sky; but I remember only too well waking up one morning to a volley of shots, as two more political prisoners were killed against the cemetery wall.

I would suggest to that extremely Spanish tourist agency, Tourismu, that, as long as the Spanish Government persists in the shooting of political prisoners, it would be advisable not to open hotels so near the cemeteries.

Although I was fascinated and in love with the old Spanish city of Granada, I was glad to go to the sea, partly because I knew that seaside places, though dull, were clean. Little did I know my Spain.

Between Malaga and Torremolinos, which is certainly the loveliest seaside spot I have ever visited, there are shacks on the beach in which no rich Spaniard would keep his animals. He only keeps his workmen there.

Certainly, as long as you stay in the hotel grounds or on the beach or in your villa, Torremolinos is beautifully clean and healthy; but do not venture out, or you will again find disease and starvation. I could never forget those beach slums, particularly when I watched new expensive villas being built.

I began to understand the civil war very well by this time, because it was obvious to me that if you believe there are those who must have everything and there are the others—an alien race—then, if a government is prepared to do anything for that lower race, you might fight the government in every way, even, if everything else fails, with arms. This is not theorizing; it is what I learned through being in the country. And I also understood that if this other race found that the only government for hundreds of years which had been prepared to do something for them was attacked, then you fight in any way, and, very often dirtily. I met people who had most of their families murdered after the start of the civil war, and I found considerably more whose families were practically wiped out, before, during, and after the civil war, by the supporters of General Franco.

We ended our trip by going to Ronda, and then down to Jerez de la Frontera, through the hot, rich plains of Andalusia. There is a square in Ronda, which crystallized for me what I had seen of Spain. I need not say that it is beautiful.

It contains a college for the rich. Next to that is a barracks. Opposite the barracks is a cathedral, partially destroyed by the Republican forces but now practically completely destroyed restored next to the cathedral is the prison.

I did not see inside that, I only saw the small grill windows which made it quite certain that those inside will have no view of the incomparable lovely sky of Andalusia. And opposite the prison is a hospital, for which the only word is fantastic.

I ate my last enormous Spanish lunch at Ronda, and the view from the restaurant window was of a church, burnt out by the Republicans, and being rebuilt at the cost, so I was told, of 1,000,000 pesetas subscribed by the rich. And I mused as I ate my way through six black-market courses. I thought of suppression in Madrid; poverty in Toledo; disease and slums and a volley of shots in Granada; slums and starvation in Malaga; slums nd starvation and disease in Torremolinos; diseased and starving children on the railway from Malaga to Ronda.

And I dreamed that, one day, I would return to a different Spain, where at least some attempt was being made to allow its people to live in their incomparably lovely country in freedom from fear, and famine, and disease.

Churches Will Mark Canadian Citizenship Week Starting Jan. 5

Toronto, Jan. 4. (CP)—Toronto churches plan to emphasize "Canadian Citizenship Week" which starts next Sunday and pastoral letters have been sent out from heads of all leading denominations asking clergy to stress the duties of good citizens in their sermons.

Archbishop Derwyn T. Owen, primate of the Church of England in Canada, has urged that a hearty welcome be accorded to all Canadians. Baptist and Presbyterian clergy also plan to stess the importance of Canadian citizenship in Sunday services. Lengthy reference to the citizship act was made in Montreal by Rt. Rev. T. W. Jones, moderator off the United Church of Canada.

James Cardinal McGuigan, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Toronto issued a pastoral letter to his clergy yesterday, which stressed that a warm welcome should be accorded all new Canadians of the faith.

NARROWLY ESCAPES DEATH

Christchurch, N.Z., Jan. 4.—(CP) — Ordinary Seaman G.A.J. Balfour, otherwise Viscount Traprain, son of the Earl of Balfour, who now is a member of the crew of the New Zealand four-masted barque Pamir, escaped death while walking back to his ship at Lyttelton.

With a companion he was walking through the tunnel which connects Christchurch with Lyttelton when they saw the light of an approaching train. There is no room to pass in the tunnel so they lay on the ground pressed up against the wall of the tunnel, and the train passed without harming them.

Eisenhower Rules Self Out Of Political Career

Miami, Fla., Jan. 4. (AP)—Gen. Eisenhower in an interview said today that the mention of his name as a presidential candidate "is not good for the great organization with which I am associated."

Eisenhower, the army's chief of staff, made it plain that he was thinking as a soldier of the country's future security to prevent the United States from falling victim to some possible future "super-blitz."

"From the beginning of the war, when my name has been mentioned in connection with a possible future political career for me, I have instantly refused to consider such a contingency," he said during an inspection of the Army's Pratt General Hospital in suburban Coral Gables.

"I have not changed my mind.

"The army is definitely nonpartisan and national in character, and any talk that tends to cloud the soundness of that feature is not to the best interests of the United States."

Asked about his possible retirement, the chief of staff said: "I have a job to do and I'm going to do it as long as I am needed."

He looked forward to a future day when the United States might find herself alone against a hostile world, as Britain was after the fall of France.

"I am convinced that the world has got to find a way to settle differences peacefully," said Eisenhower. "Wars are emergencies. They come an unexpectedly. In the past we've had Allies and factors which gave us ample time to prepare. This holds true today, but perhaps it will not in future years.

"In recognition of this we have one staff in Washington whose job it is to deal with scientists for the future super-blitz age. These men's only job is to contact these scientists and learn what may be heard."

Conscience Money Sent by Young Man About to Marry

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 4 (AP)—A $40 theft committed in a Clarksburg restaurant last September netted the restaurant manager, the cashier and the owner of the "borrowed" get-away car a total of $100 today in conscience money from an anonymous former soldier who said he was the thief.

In nearly identical pencilled notes the writer sent $60 to manager Frank H. Johnson (the extra $20 was "interest"); $20 to cashier W. C. Robertson to "pay your doctor bill"; and another $20 to Robert F. Hickman, city editor of the Clarksburg Exponent, "to pay for borrowing your car".

"A returned soldier became restless," he explained, "awful restless, and needed excitement. He needed excitement, to hear bullets and shells whistle. . . .

"He realized his mistake and he settled down. But his conscience bothered him.

A Record

Belleville set a record in 1946 which no doubt has come as a surprise to a great many of residents. That was the issue of more than one million dollars in building permits last year. Industrial construction permits issued in the year exceeded six hundred thousand dollars, the Corbin Lock Company's expansion undertaking alone being estimated to cost three hundred thousand dollars while residential construction permits authorized reached four hundred and fifteen thousand dollars in value.

This is evidence of the general feeling of the expansion of Canada and hence expansion in the various parts of the Dominion. Here is the concrete fact in the issuance by the City Engineer's Department of 295 permits for building.

This news must have significance for the people of Belleville, it shows that this community is keeping step with the development of the entire country, that not only lifelong residents and others who have come to Belleville to make their homes here in the past but also recent newcomers forsee a bright future for this city.

That this optimism or faith is well founded is shown in the great volume of business which annually is carried on in Belleville through her plants and businesses and also through the city's position as the centre of one of the finest areas in the Dominion with a strong agricultural population on all sides, and a steadily growing centre of population and industry in Belleville.

French Claims in Antarctica

At a time when the expedition of Admiral Byrd to the south polar regions has set off a veritable "rush" of nations toward the Antarctic, promised land of the uranium explorers, it should be recalled that France has established unquestionable rights in that region since more than a century, says French Information Service.

In 1840 the French explorer Dumont d'Urville visited the Antarctic, explored about 400,000 square kilometres of the continent, named it Terre Adelie and took formal possession in the name of the King of France. Of course this possession was not followed by effective occupation due to the climatic conditions, and little use was made of the territory except for hunting and fishing.

But in 1924, the Information Service continues, the French government reserved and confirmed her rights in a series of decrees, making special reference to the question of hunting and fishing in that region. At the same time it was announced by the French government that Terre Adelie was formally attached to the colony, Madagascar, and its territorial waters were added to the navigation range of the French fleet in the Pacific.

This was followed by an exchange of letters beginning in 1930 and completed in 1934 by a formal accord between the French and British governments in which the British government agreed to the precise boundary limits of Terre Adelie, which neighbors the areas over which Britain has established her rights.

A decree definitely fixed this boundary of Terre Adelie in April 1938. In October of the same year an Anglo-French accord regulated naval aviation in these areas. A reciprocal agreement was made by which the planes of Britain, Australia and New Zealand might fly over French Antarctic possessions and similarly French planes might fly over the possessions of the other three countries.

Thus French rights to a considerable portion of the antarctic continent have been formally established by international accord and the French government intends to maintain them integrally, the service states.

School Building

New schools costing $4,000,000,000 are to go up all over Britain as a result of the 1944 Education Act. This is the estimate of a committee of experts, formed to simplify and expedite the school building program, whose report was published this month as a White Paper. The figure includes the building work needed for all reforms covered by the Act including construction, reform and development of primary and secondary education, new schools on new housing estates, new county colleges, and other wide developments in further education, and the expansion of facilities for the training of teachers.

Look Out For The Horse

In England a momentous decision has been handed down by the House of Lords, the nation's last court of appeal. The tribunal has ruled that farm animals, particularly horses and cows, have the right of way on English roads, provided they stay in their own neighborhood, says Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The case arose when a cyclist claimed damages as the result of a collision with a stray horse. The House of Lords dismissed the suit with an opinion by Viscount Maugham holding that roads were laid out largely for the benefit of the owners of adjacent lands, including farmers, and that road users cannot expect to have them kept clear of farm animals.

In this country we often think of roads as being laid out primarily for the benefit of people who want to get from one place to another in a hurry. Perhaps the viscount has a point. Now that the rights of horses and cows have been established, who knows but what in another 100 years or so pedestrians will get a break.

Atomic Research Aid

One of the few definite and important advances in medical science that have resulted thus far from atomic research is the successful treatment of enlarged thyroid glands with radioactive iodine, reported by Dr. Earle M. Chapman of the Massachusetts general hospital in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Among 46 patients treated with the iodine, a colorless, ordorless fluid produced by the cyclotron at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 35 were apparently cured after taking a single dose; three had to be given two doses and five patients received three doses. Mild symptoms of the disease persisted in only three cases. Good results with radioactive iodine were also observed by Drs. Saul Hertz of Boston and Arthur Roberts of Cambridge, Mass., in treating 29 goitre patients. In the past, hyperthyroidism or Graves disease could be cured only by surgery, says Dr. Martin Gumpert in Redbook.

Columbus a Slav, Say Reds

Most of the Latin American Communist newspapers, following the Moscow line, are now attacking Italian "imperialism" for refusing to cede Trieste to Yugoslavia.

This attitude naturally antagonizes most Latin Americans, and particularly those of Italian descent, of whom there are millions in South America.

Perhaps to counteract this, the Communists in Latin America have invented a new theory. They "prove" now that Columbus was not an Italian, as historians relate, but that he was a Yugoslav from one of the Adriatic islands, and that therefore the discovery of America is to be credited not to an Italian but to a Yugoslav, Stephen Naft in New Leader.

The Standard of Power

When James Watt developed his steam engine he found they had to be sold to do the work of horses, so he had to rate his engines in terms of work performed. To make practical comparison he found that a good dray horse could raise a quarter of an English ton of 550 pounds, about 60 feet in a minute or one foot a second. So he called this rate of doing work, that is, lifting a weight of 550 pounds one foot in a second, "the power of a horse" or "one horsepower". This has long been the standard for measuring and comparing power, says C. F. Kettering in Christian Science Monitor.

About 70% of London's children have been immunized against diphtheria. 10 years ago the death-rate was seven times as heavy as it is now. The improved health of London's children is partly due to school meals and the provision of milk daily—151,346 benefitted from the latter in 1945.

CHILDHOOD'S PACE

Never at the pace I tread.
Always running off ahead.
Eight and six and almost two,
Racing every minute through;
Tussling, mauling, full of glee,
Which is how they ought to be.

Never once at footstep slow,
Always in high gear they go;
Full of speed up and down the stairs,
Bumping tables, toppling chairs:
Pepper . . . nothing glass or clay
Holds one-tenth as much as they!

Seldom find them sitting still;
Childhood holds a constant thrill.
"Sh-sh!" the smiling mother tries.
"Cut it out!" their daddy cries.
But I hope that long 'twill be
Ere they settle down like me.

Sask. Store Keeper Turned Coyote Hunting into Profitable Sideline

Herschel, Sask., Dec. 31—(CP)—Saskatchewan's slinking coyotes, only recently plagued by flying marksmen, still consider Robert Cruickshank, 59-year-old general store merchant and his greyhound hunting dogs who have bagged 3,500 of the fur-bearing animals in the last 44 years, as among their arch enemies.

Cruickshank looks with disfavor on the newcomers with their small two-seater aircraft and shotguns and those who use poison-baited traps. He points with pride to his six specially-trained greyhounds.

The dogs hunt in two teams with two "catchers" and one "killer" to each team. They are loaded into special compartments on the back of a truck when Cruickshank starts across the prairies near this west-central Saskatchewan district about 60 miles southwest of Saskatoon.

Nowadays he drives across the stubble and as soon as at least two of the tawny animals are spotted, the dogs are loosed and each team picks a victim. The catchers corner the coyote, about 40 inches long compared to about 60 inches of dog, and the killer effects the coup de grace and brings the dead animal back to the truck compartment.

This type of coyote hunting which Cruickshank believes more "sporting" also pays off — to the tune of $50,000 since 1904, he estimates.

The most lucrative season was 1941 when he bagged 168 animals in 60 days to earn $1,966. Pelts brought him $15 to $20 apiece then plus a bounty of $2 each.

But he nabbed only 20 animals this year. There are still many coyotes, also known as prairie wolves, roaming the district but pelts bring only $2-$3 now and there is no longer any bounty.

"But before you know it, the coyote situation will get out of hand and the government will be glad to pay us from $5 to $10 an animal to bring them under control again," Cruickshank says.

Although the coyote has been described as cowardly, Cruickshank holds no brief for that view. He believes they are courageous fighters when cornered.

His most thrilling coyote hunt occurred when four of his greyhounds cornered a female coyote and engaged in a sharp skirmish until two male coyotes dashed to the rescue. The three ganged up on the four dogs and chased them back to the truck.

Then there was the least profitable hunt when his dogs chased only one of the animals into an automobile parked in a barn. The seats of the car were soon torn to ribbons and the owner had to be paid damages.

CLEAR SUNKEN SHIPS FROM BELFASH LOUGH

Belfast, Northern Ireland (CP). —Belfast Lough, busiest of Irish waterways, now is being cleared of ships sunk during the war that are considered dangerous to navigation.

Finns Must Pay Russia Arrears In Reparations

Helsinki, Jan. 4 — (Reuters) — Finland must pay Russia fines of $300,000 worth of goods a month until she has made up the $3,000,000 deficit she incurred in her reparations deliveries in 1946.

Lauri Kivinen, chief of the reparations industries board, estimates that the deficit cannot be wiped out until next September — which means that Finland's annual reparations of $35,500,000 will be increased by fines of $1,600,000 to $37,100,000 in 1947.

The deficit has been incurred by the metal industries which had to supply about one-third of the value of all reparations deliveries in 1946. As Finland is primarily a wood pulp and timber exporting country, the metal industries had been hard put to supply the factory plant, steel cables, dynamos and ships stipulated under the 1944 Russo-Finnish Armistice.

Industrialists ascribe the arrears to three causes: Finland's shortages of foreign currency which makes the purchase abroad of essential raw materials difficult; delays by British and American and other manufacturers in supply instruments and equipment needed to step up production; and the harsh application of fines.

Two examples of how late deliveries from Britain and the United States have held back reparations given in the Finnish press were:

A 2,000-ton merchant ship was completed except for one small navigational instrument on order from the United States. The Soviet authorities would not accept delivery of the ship without the instrument and charged fines on the whole vessel.

Plant for manufacturing prefabricated wooden houses was complete except for some tubing on order from Britain. This arrived late and fines were charged on the entire plant.

Although many Finns complain that this fining system is harsh, it is provided for in the 1944 Armistice.

Five U.S. Airmen Parachute Safely Over Scotland

Lerwick, Scotland, Jan. 4 (AP) —Five American airmen parachuted safely from a flying fortress which was lost last night while trying to reach Scotland in a gale. Today, the men were sent to hospital in Lerwick, largest city in the Shetland Islands.

The last to be found was the pilot, Lieut. William E. Dee of West Palm Beach, Fla., whose windblown parachute let him down in a small lake near Lerwick.

He had no difficulty scrambling ashore, but it took police, coast guardsmen and townspeople, aroused by many radio signals and flares, about four hours to find him.

Dee was scratched a little and one of his eyes blackened in the fall.

His companions, who had leaped before him, were rounded one after another and were taken to the isolation hospital, where all were reported well. They are: Lieut. Melton Harry Craven, co-pilot, Big Spring, Tex., Lieut. William L. Pilcher, navigator, Burlington, Kans.; S. Sgt. Howard F. Shields, Randolph, N.Y.; Cpl. Reuben Gessert, Marshfield, Iowa.

Premier Drew Is Presented Cross Of Lorraine

Toronto, Jan. 4 — (CP)—Capt. M. P. Tuteur, Honorary Consul for France in Toronto, Friday presented the Cross of Lorraine to Premier Drew of Ontario.

He said the decoration, given by the Federation of Free French Associations, gave recognition to Premier Drew's assistance to the Free French movement during the war. With it went a diploma from the French government for wartime aid to France.

Capt. Tuteur said Premier Drew was one of the original members of the Free French Association of Canada. He said the diploma had been given to few people in any country and was limited to those who gave rare and exceptional welfare service to France.

Jacques Grellet, newly-appointed French Consul who recently arrived from Puerto Rico, expressed appreciation on behalf of the French government for the premier's efforts.

It was recalled that Premier Drew arrived in Paris a few days after the liberation and almost at the same hour as Maj.-Gen. Georges Vanier, Canadian Ambassador to France. With Gen. Vanier, he placed a wreath on the Arc De Triomphe on behalf of Canada.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

THE DANGER OF CHUCKLING

Have read your column forthem. some time with much interest and a good many chuckles. My doctor says I must live with my high blood pressure, since nothing he has given me will bring it down. . . (L. D.)

In the first place, as nearly as the quack who conducts this wretched column can learn, high blood pressure is not a disease or a condition that is amenable to any particular remedy, diet or treatment. To my crude quackish way of thinking—believe it or not I do most of my thinking on the bowling green where there is little to distract your attention except maybe the girls galumphing about the tennis courts just over the hedge—and as Barnacle Bill used to say, if the hedges were a little higher the bowling would be much better—I'm not at all certain that chuckling is good for you, but of course it would depend on what ails you.

Belly breathing now, that's good for everybody, and especially for poor geeks with high blood pressure Belly breathing is natural breathing—in fact the word belly is derived from the Anglo-Saxon belg, meaning bellows or bag.

Theoretically a free and unrestrained laugh, in which you throw back your head, throw open your face and guffaw-haw-haw even if no one else sees anything to laugh about and maybe when the spasm passes you yourself will wish you could crawl through a crack in the floor, tends to lower blood pressure, but chuckling tends to raise it I say theoretically because I haven't tried it out in the physiological laboratory—I hope some medical student or young doctor will do so and tell me whether it is so.

People wiht high blood pressure had better do no dieting and take no medicine unless or until they have had a general medical examination to find out what ails them.

The correspondent implies that his doctor has tried this and that medicine to "bring down" high blood pressure. In some instances, regardless of what ails the patient, such reduction of pressure may be advisable. But I know of no specific agent that will reduce high blood pressure safely if the patient is not under the care of his physician. I hope this statement will not bring the usual queries about garlic or some nostrum purporting to be derived from it—to save time and postage let me reassure you here that there is no foundation for the claim that such a nostrum is of any remedial value against high blood pressure.

Regular practice of Belly Breathing is particularly beneficial in other conditions besides high blood pressure It helps persons of any age who suffer with cold feet nights It has a calming soothing influence and helps restless folk to relax and go to sleep. It relieves and sometimes cures menstrual difficulties in young women. It is a natural massage for the liver and gall or bile apparatus and tends to prevent congestion and inactivity of the liver. It gives appreciable relief in many cases of chronic bronchitis, emphysema, bronchiectasis and asthma.

A copy of the pamphlet "Belly Breathing" is available only to readers who comply with these terms:

Ask for it in writing (do not send a clipping)

Inclose a three-cent-stamped envelope bearing your correct address.

Please do not bury your request for the pamphlet in a recital of symptoms or history.

If I seem peevish about this, remember there are several other corrspondnts waiting to be served, not to mention a bowling green as smooth as a billiard table three dozen cocky old geezers waiting for me to get over there and mow 'em down.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Do bats migrate?

Some species of tree-dwelling bats in the north temperate zone are known to migrate, as birds do, going south in the winter when insects are unavailable and returning north in the spring.

Other species hibernate; that is they hang heads downward (sometimes in great clusters) in a semi-torpid state in caves, crevices, hollow trees, buildings and other retreats during the cold season when they cannot obtain food. Occasionally hibernating bats become active and emerge from their retreats during warm spells.

In "Animals of the Canadian Rockies" Dan McCowan wrote: "At the approach of winter all bats become very fat, some in preparation for a migratory flight to a warmer clime, others to go into hibernation during the period of food scarcity. I have heard it stated that Hoary bats, spending the summer at Banff or Waterton Lakes, may be in the West Indies at Christmas time." Tropical bats remain active the year around.

What is a sepoy?

"Sepoy," pronounced "SEE-poy," is the Anglicized form of the name given to a Hindu or Indian soldier disciplined in the European manner and especially one actually in the service of a European power. The term is derived from Persian and Hindu "sipah," army, or "sipahi," soldier.

The sepoys or native soldiers in the British service in India are for the most part Brahms and Mohammedans. One of the causes of the Indian Mutiny of 1851 was owing to the sepoys having to use cartridges supposed to be greased with tallow and lard and that they had to bite these cartridges with their teeth in the operation of loading their Enfield rifles. The Brahman considers the cow—the source of tallow—sacred, while the religion of the Moslem forbids the eating of the meat of the hog—the source of lard.

Widespread discontent was fanned into flame May 10, 1857, when some sepoys at Meerut mutined and forcefully liberated a number of their fellows who had been imprisoned for refusing to touch the cartridges greased with tallow and lard. In "With Lawrence in Arabia" (1924) Lowell Thomas wrote: "Like the sepoys of India in the days of Clive, the Bedouins refused to clean their rifles with grease made from pork, simply because the Mohammedan religion teaches them that pork is unclean."

WINDSOR BUSINESS MAN DIES OF HEART ATTACK

Windsor, Jan. 4 — (CP)—Elihu Wigle, 76, a Windsor business man for more than 50 years, died suddenly Thursday night as he drove home. Doctors said death was caused by a heart attack.

Mr. Wigle stopped his automobile but was dead when passersby got him to hospital.

He was a native of Leamington where as a young man he operated the old Deming House. In 1895 he came to Windsor and was co-owner of the International Hotel. Later he operated the Wigle Finance Company.

38,940 FORD UNITS BUILT

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 4 — (CP)—The Ford Motor Company of Canada Limited announced Friday that its 1946 vehicle production—80,267 truck and passenger units—was the greatest peace time production since 1926.

A Ford statement said 38,940 units were built last year for Canadian markets, 34,361 for export markets, 3,827 for UNRRA and 239 for military use.

Net parts sales were 70 per cent greater than sales in 1945 and three times as great as in any previous peace-time year since 1926.

MILITARY SERVICE CITIZENSHIP KEY

"I Remember" is Interesting Biography by Late Maj.-Gen. Griesbach

By E. S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Universal compulsory military service under any scheme of immigration is advocated as the key to rapid assimilation of newcomers seeking to make Canada their home, in an autobiography by the late Maj.-Gen. William A. Griesbach, noted soldier and legislator of Edmonton. It was he, who a few days after outbreak of war in 1939 urged immediate conscription in Canada and the despatch of an expeditionary force as soon as it could be trained and properly equipped.

The book, "I Remember," (Ryerson Press), is a graphic, witty narrative by a Westerner who lived through the frontier skirmishes of the North-West and served with distinction through three wars.

Variously, mayor of Edmonton, member of the House of Commons, the Senate and commander of the 1st Canadian Brigade in the First World War, General Griesbach was recalled from retirement in 1940 to become inspector-general of active force units in Western Canada, a post he held until ill health forced him out in 1943. The reminiscences he embarked upon in his book were cut short by death in January, 1945, before he had set down recollections of an eventual career during the last two wars.

Canada's' best immigrants, he says, are Norwegians, Dutch and Danes, who come from small countries, learn English easily and are fully prepared for constitutional, democratic government. The German probably has it in him to be the best settler of all, but it is not until the third generation that he acquires loyalty and can be fully trusted.

"It begins to appear as though we shall have difficulty in getting any substantial British immigration in the future," he writes. "This, of course, is the ideal class. But I say, in handling immigration of any kind universal compulsory military service is the key to a rapid assimilation of newcomers."

The expeditions undertaken by the mounted police in 1885 against Louis Riel and his rebel followers, he says, was largely based on bluff but bolstered by courage, physical strength and determination.

"Had the mounted police been, instead of 500 strong, more like 1,500, the rebellion might never have got under way at all," he wrote.

Although a lawyer by profession, "Bill" Griesbach was primarily a soldier, and most of his humor-laden anecdotes deal with men in the scarlet of the R.C.M.P. or the khaki of the armed forces.

Would Raise Level Of Ennerdale Lake

Whitehaven, Cumberland, England (CP)—Raising the level of Ennerdale Lake to increase the supply of water for industrial purposes will bring a "new era" for West Cumberland, says Alderman J. J. Adams, secretary of the county's development council.

Approval of the scheme by the health ministry, despite strong opposition from groups which claim the project will damage one of England's famous beauty-spots, will mean the establishment of many light industries, Alderman Adams said.

"The days when a district relied on coal and iron alone are past. We will have a diversity of industries which will give work to all our people for years to come and will bring back to West Cumberland many of those whom unemployment drove away."

Former Strong Man Lives On Goat Milk

Romance, Sask. (CP)—Sixteen goats and a stack of law books provide work and nourishment for 70-year-old Grant East — known as "Harry Muldoon" at the turn of the century when he was a champion wrestler and boxer.

Today he lives in a one-room house at the edge of this town 80 miles north of Regina and thrives on his goats' milk while doing odd jobs and studying law.

A former middleweight wrestling champion of Wisconsin, "Muldoon" as residents here know him, was born at Harrisville, West Virginia, and after a boyhood on a Texas farm came to know the fighting celebrities of the early 1900s including John L. Sullivan, Bob Fitzsimmons, Jake Kilrain and Yussuf The Terrible-Turk.

Muldoon, still hale, boasts that in his athletic prime his body was said to be proportionately as perfect as that of the famous Eugene Sandow, bobby-soxers' and other ladies' hero of the day, and model for painters and sculptors.

Leaving home at 16 years of age, Muldoon "bummed" to all parts of the United States as an itinerant painter, steeplejack, boxer and wrestler.

When he staged his own road show the act audiences applauded most, he recalls, was his feat of balancing a plow on the tip of his chin.

He came to Canada in 1906 and put on exhibition matches in Regina, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw, Lethbridge, Prince Albert and other western centres. But a dislocated knee in 1912 forced him out of the ring and he then settled on his farm near here. However, he is still in demand as a referee whenever there is a boxing match in the district.

SUGGEST HARNESSING UPPER SEVERN RIVER

London (CP)—A delegation from Montgomeryshire county council, led by Clement Davies, Welsh M. P. and leader of the Parliamentary Liberal Party, met three cabinet ministers to urge an inquiry to determine whether harnessing the water in the upper reaches of the Severn might help solve local problems.

Fuel Minister Shinwell, Health Minister Bevan and Agriculture Minister Tom Williams said they would consider the plan. They were told that Montgomery thinks river control measures would have these results:

Provision of sufficient water to supply Montgomeryshire, Radnorshire, Shropshire and part of the Midlands; Increased hydro-electric power, particularly for rural electrification; Elimination of flooding which now handicaps agriculture.

Bombed Cathedral Undergoes Rapid Restoration Work

By NORMAN CRIBBENS . . .
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Exeter, England (CP)—Restoration of Exeter's civic pride — a sprawling grey stone cathedral built in the 12th century and damaged by a German bomb in 1942 —is proceeding rapidly under guidance of experts, financed by donations from local churchfolk and people outside the church.

To those who have spent their lives among the wooded hills and valleys of Devonshire's capital city, bombing of the cathedral was a major crime. Said a young Exeter soldier writing him from a training camp; "We'll get even with them for that!"

Now the city aims to raise £75,000 ($300,000) from donations and benefit concerts and each week Exeter's daily newspaper publishes a full column of new subscribers.

Striking St. James's Chapel on the south side of the cathedral, the bomb not only destroyed two flying buttresses and the chapel but blasted into fragments a great deal of medieval oak carving.

As the stability of the building was threatened, the dean and chapter were granted a special licence for immediate repair work. Even so it was some time before one of the buttresses could be reconnected to the main wall. The other will be back in position soon.

Ingenious Restoration

Some ingenuity is being used in restoring woodwork which, to an untrained eye, seems beyond repair. From tons of shattered stone and broken wood which fell into the choir, Herbert Read, benevolent grey-haired sculptor, is picking out wooden fragments, however minute, discarding broken chairlegs and other valueless modern debris and classifying what is ancient and of artistic value.

So far about 12,000 pieces have been collected and stored in wooden cases in readiness for the day when they can be restored. Mr. Read's assistants are three trained carvers who, like himself, are specialists not concerned with ordinary house building.

Restoration of the 17th-century organ case now is completed. So is that of the choir stalls, comparatively modern work designed by Gilbert Scott in the 19th century. The organ itself and some early 14th century misericord seats had, like the bishop's throne been removed before the bombing.

Most difficult task is reconstructing some 15th-century oak screens. Four were destroyed and of one of them—in the entrance to St. James's Chapel— not a single splinter has been found.

Seaplane Overdue On Exploration In Antarctica

Washington, Jan. 3—(AP) — A PBM Mariner seaplane with eight persons aboard is overdue on an exploratory flight from the navy's Antarctic expedition, the navy reported today.

The plane took off from the seaplane tender U.S.S. Pine Island at 6:45 a.m. (EST) Dec. 30.

It was scheduled to return at 3:45 p.m. the same day, but had sufficient fuel for 11 additional hours of flight.

The last report from the plane was received at 7:25 a.m. (EST) on Dec. 30 at which time it was about 250 miles south of the Pine Island.

Previous reconnaissance flights had reported open water in that area and the navy expressed hope the plane had made a safe landing. Search and rescue operations have been hampered by bad weather.

WOLVES ATTACK CARIBOU

The Pas, Man., Jan. 4 (CP)—Packs of black wolves have been attacking herds of caribou in Northern Manitoba, killing many of the animals, it was learned here today from A. P. P. Pulchenski, a northern trapper.

Pulchenski said he had witnessed one attack by wolves on a herd in which 57 caribou had been left dead and many others torn by the wolves' fangs.

Other trappers reported that the wolf population in Northern Manitoba has increased greatly during the last year.

A Toronto mother during the Christmas season had the unique experience of exchanging greetings with her seaman son in Capetown, South Africa. The exchange was not by way of Christmas card, telegraph or even telephone.

She sat before a "home-made" radio transmitting and receiving set in a house on a quiet, residential street and talked for more than half an hour to her son thousands of miles away. They used facilities provided by friends amateur radio operators, in Toronto and in Capetown.

Radio as the amateur's hobby—apart and distinct from the act of settling down comfortably to tune in on a commercial radio station for a carefully prepared and rehearsed program—is one of the most interesting aspects of the general field, yet relatively unknown to the uninitiate.

How many common or garden type radio fans know that there are about 4,000 Canadians who can conduct lengthy conversations with any of almost 100,000 friends in almost any part of the world at almost any time of day or night? Again, how many realize that these special types of radio fans formed the nucleus of the radio staffs both in the armed forces and in the radar and radio manufacturing war plants during the Second World War?

Aided by Government

It is a hobby, too, that receives benevolent assistance, protection and encouragement from governments and is regulated by international agreements. The radio "hams"—as they are known to each other—have proved of inestimable value in emergency conditions. The recent rescue of airmen who crashed at Mont Joli, Que., was directed by radio amateurs in the vicinity.

Extreme weather conditions that cause breakdowns in regular communication systems find the "ham" on the job of maintaining contact between isolated centres and the rest of the world.

From "hams" in Canada, the Dominion department of transport calls for British citizenship, a code test and fair knowledge of the technical side of radio. Once satisfied, the department issues an amateur license which enables the holder to operate a transmitting and receiving set on certain frequency bands, set aside by international agreement for use by amateurs.

Amateur radio operators like commercial radio stations have their call letters, and Canada's "hams" are all under the VE initials. For security reasons all amateurs were taken off the air during the war and their sets were dismantled. Back in operation since Nov. 8, 1945, they have increased until today an estimated 4,000 to 4,500 are licensed in Canada.

The amateur radio operator, according to a survey made recently in the United States, is the corner grocer, the doctor, high school student or professional radio technician.

Since the "ham" in time becomes highly skilled technician — quite often he will turn to full-time radio activity and thus many of the personnel of large commercial radio stations can chart their paths into the profession along the route of the amateur radio hobbyist.

Jail Term Given For Beating Bride

Toronto, Jan. 4 —(CP)— When Walter Michalski, 23, yesterday pleaded not guilty to assaulting and beating Mrs. Mary McLean, a bride of two weeks, in her hotel room Dec. 15, he said: "She opened up the door. I went inside and started to beat her up for no reason at all."

Mrs. McLean said she and her husband had taken a room in a hotel on Jarvis Street in Central Toronto after they failed to find a house. The next morning her husband stepped out to buy cigarettes.

"There came a rap on the door," she said. "I said, 'Is that you, Harry?', and a voice said, "yes."

"I opened the door and the prisoner beat my face in completely. I screamed and I screamed. He landed one right on my jaw," Mrs. McLean said. "The blood was flying and it ruined my wedding suit."

He was a "perfect stranger" she told the court.

"SNOOKS" RETRIEVES BURGLARS, TOO!

Mining a Thrill to Aussie Women

By JACK HOLDSWORTH
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Kalgoorlie, Australia, Jan. 2—(CP)—Three Australian women, who have decided to take up gold-mining as a career, have enrolled for a prospectors' course at the West Australian government's school of mines at Kalgoorlie, centre of the principal Australian goldfield, 400 miles east of the state capital of Perth.

The course, which is the first to be conducted by the school of mines, will teach prospectors where to look for gold. Prospectors usually find gold the hard way—by trial and error—but the course will put their work on a scientific basis by teaching them to avoid prospecting in places which geologists say are likely to contain gold.

The three women who have enrolled for the course are Mrs. Mary Walshaw, a dressmaker by trade but prospector by choice, Mrs. Joyce Oliver, a former nurse whose husband is a prospector, and Miss Nell Brown, a policewoman who says that gold mining has an "irresistable fascination" for her.

Mrs. Walshaw has a gold-mining lease called The Coonega, at Comet Vale, 60 miles from Kalgoorlie, where she gets gold ore at a depth of 60 feet. She has a man to help her, but raises her own stone in a bucket by means of a windlass, and pans off her own gold samples.

Mrs. Oliver's husband has a mine at Mungari, 12 miles from Kalgoorlie, and she says she wants to learn as much about mining as she can to help him.

She adds: "There's nothing like prospecting for gold to give you a thrill, and I'll never go back to nursing as a career while there is gold mining to be done."

Mrs. Brown has not prospected but says she intends to try her luck at it.

CELTICS BEAT HUSKIES

New York, Jan. 4 (AP)— The new year may hold better things in store for Boston Celtics, currently at the bottom of the Basketball Association of America standings.

Playing their first game of 1947 at Toronto last night, the Celtics nipped the Huskies 58-53 for their sixth triumph in 26 starts. They displayed an improved brand of basketball in turning back the Huskies, likewise a better-looking club in recent games.

FOXBORO W.M.S. MEETING

Foxboro.—The W.M.S. held their January meeting on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Murney Reynolds with an attendance of thirteen. Mrs. George Priest had charge of the meeting which opened by the singing of the hymn "Standing at the Portals" and the reading in unison of Psalm 103 after which the leader offered a prayer of consecration.

The February meeting will be held at the home of Miss Amelia Clarke with Mrs W. Scott and Mrs. Rombough in charge of the program and it was decided to again use the Birthday Box. A most interesting and instructive description of Chapter Five of the Study Book was given by Mrs. A. Shorten on "The Youth of India" citing the story of one boy among many who became converted through the reading of the Bible. Fraternity Clubs were formed and a Sunday School started in India.

Mrs. G. Priest reported $40 already raised by the Mission Band. Mrs. M. Reynolds gave some valuable thoughts on Temperance, "What a Price Ontario Pays". Mrs. J. G. Sills reported 23 members taking the Missionary Monthly. A most impressive Installation Service was then conducted by Rev. L. Shorten and the meeting was dismissed by the pastor.

A social half hour was enjoyed with Mrs. M. Reynolds serving delicious refreshments.

WEDDINGS

MALLORY—BOWLER

Wooler. (Special.)— A pretty New Year's wedding took place on Wednesday at 2 p.m., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Vardy, when their grand-daughter, Glenalda Bowler, was united in marriage to Mr. Bruce Mallory, Rev. W. Delve being the officiating clergyman.

The youthful bride was gowned in a floor-length frock of pale blue crepe, the shirred bodice having a yoke of silver beads. She wore a fingertip veil of pale blue net and carried a bouquet of yellow and white 'mums.

A buffet luncheon was served to a number of guests.

In the evening the neighbors gathered at the home of the bride and groom, the former David Teal farm, and presented them with gifts. At the close of the evening refreshments were served, including a beautifully decorated wedding cake which

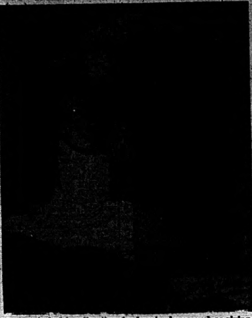
Doing Nothing for Beauty



The day in bed is a fine time for beauty chores, such as giving your hair a quick and easy shampoo with cotton pads dipped in good quality witch hazel

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO you know, my paper friend, that it is a good idea, now and then, to do nothing for beauty's sake? The average woman has many interests these days. She's everlastingly on the go. There comes a time when she feels that it is too much to be forever up and doing. Her nerves sizzle. She's tired. She looks into the mirror and a strange woman stares back at her, a woman with shadows under her eyes, lips tense. She doesn't want to go on looking like that.

Art of Relaxing

Let her drop everything, give herself a day of rest. Let the Daddy and the kids eat out of cans; won't hurt them. Nervous exhaustion may be on the way, and that's no pastime. Get the breakfast, send the children to school, then go back to bed.

Let your arms lie at your sides, be relaxed all over. Tie a black scarf over your eyes to keep out the daylight. Make your body feel heavy.

Don't spoil it all by thinking of the tasks that are ahead of you. Let your thoughts go back to pleasant yore-times. Doze, if you can. Have at hand a book that is not too exciting. Read and nap. It is wonderful what a day in bed will do for a woman who is weary of the grind, be it housework or business or the life of a movie star.

Back in Condition

Along about four or five o'clock in the afternoon you'll feel as if you had had a week's vacation. Cream your face, get into a warm bath. Lie there, soak, relax. Have a rousing scrubbing with a heavy brush to stir up the blood circulation. Finish with an alternating hot and cold shower.

You won't mind hustling up a sketchy meal. Having rested, you'll be in condition for a refreshing night's sleep. Many individuals do not sleep restfully because they are over-fatigued when they go to bed and can't settle down. Try this beauty treatment once in a while. It costs nothing, brings rich returns.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Nutrition Necessary For Colorful Skin

Correct eating habits are an important part of the business of living. Dining should be a pleasure, if food is to be properly assimilated. The home woman usually has time to stoke up in peace and leisure. But the career girl is sadly lacking in the matter of stoking up so she can get all her engines running smoothly.

Breakfast is a gesture. With one eye on the clock, she gobbles a piece of toast, washes it down with coffee. For fourteen hours her digestive motors have been waiting for fuel and that is what they get. To keep well and healthy she should have fruit or fruit juices, a cereal, a beverage, toast, and an egg or a serving of bacon As she is not in the habit of consuming that much, the mere thought of a man-sized breakfast puts her teeth on edge. That is what habit does for one.

Luncheon time arrives. She feels tired and fussy, has no interest in food. She trails through the shops to do a little necessary buying, at the last minute drops in at a soda fountain for a sandwich. Along about four o'clock in the afternoon she is all in, longs for the moment of release from her duties. She has been working all day on practically nothing at all. She's played out, exhausted, gets a grouch on the job, is mad at herself and every body else just because she will not feed herself properly.

Everyone needs a variety of foods, supplying the necessary vitamins and mineral salts. Seven special, important elements are included in food eaten by human creatures—protein, starch, sugar, salts, cellulose, fat and water. They should be properly proportioned and balanced. The balance of the three main elements are four parts of carbohydrates, one part of protein, one part of fat.

We need cereals, meat, sea food, vegetables, fruit, dairy products. We are actually made by what we eat. The body must be properly nourished to create heat and energy and to combat disease and infections.

Good Eating Habits Have a Beneficial Effect on The Hair

Digestion begins in the mouth, with the mastication and insalivation of food. That is why one should not hurry through a meal. There are three salivary glands and they are influenced by emotion. If food does not look appetizing, if the odor is unpleasant, the glands go on strike, and digestion is slowed up.

Fear and worry affect these delicate glands, causing dryness of the tongue and throat. They do not function well when one is tired. If Miss Career comes home all fagged out, she should rest for half an hour before eating dinner.

If young women would realize that good eating habits have a beneficial effect upon hair, complexion and figure, perhaps they would give the subject more thought.

COLLIDED WITH PLANE

St. Thomas, Jan. 4 — (CP) — Sergeant Patrick Vyvian, who recently rejoined his family here after eight years service with the Imperial Army, believes he is the only soldier who collided with an airplane in flight while riding a bicycle. The accident happened on an English highway being used as a landing strip when sentries whose job it was to warn cyclists off the road had slipped off for a spot of tea.

TELLS OF PART PLAYED

Hamilton, Jan. 4 — (CP)—Dr. Thode, of McMaster University, in an address Friday evening, told of the part McMaster scientists played in the development of atomic energy. He said eight of the 160 fusion products of uranium were discovered here. One of these products was radio-active, and credit was given to McMaster scientists for determining its activity. Dr. Thode was head of a local group working under direction of the National Research Council on atomic research during war years.

The Experts Say

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Jan. 4 (CP)—The post-holiday doldrums are upon us. Heavy entertaining during the Christmas season probably has left many a housewife worrying along with few rationed goods in the pantry. She now is wondering just how to see her family through the next few days with interesting couponless meals.

Did she spend her all in meat coupons? Then undoubtedly she's looking for meat substitutes. And what could be better than a hot vegetable plate. Not only is it a good substitute, but probably will be welcomed by a family satiated with too much rich food.

Three or more vegetables, at least, should be used and arranged on individual plates. Then as the main course, the lack of meat may be made up in the use of eggs and milk in the dessert.

At least one leafy vegetable, but only one strongly flavored vegetable, should be included. Arrangement should be made so that any color contrast is emphasized. Variety may be obtained by cutting in different sizes and shapes. Sauce should be served with only one of the vegetables.

Apples, peaches, plums, berries or other kinds of fruit may be used. Make a batter of one tablespoon of butter, 1-2 cup sugar, one egg, one cup flour sifted with two teaspoons baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup milk, 1-2 teaspoon almond, lemon, or vanilla flavoring. Put the fruit in a greased pudding dish and cover with the batter. Bake in a moderate over about 25 minutes. Serve with cream or a hot sauce.

Having trouble with your pastry these days? Well don't fall back on that adage "Good Pie-Bakers are Born, not Made. . ." 'Tisn't true. If you follow the rules you'll soon be able to turn out flaky, tender pie crust as good as that made by any expert.

Pastry enough for two pie shells requires 1 1-2 cups flour, 1-3 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup fat, and enough cold water to form a stiff dough.

All dry ingredients should be sifted and fat cut in with a knife. Add water gradually. Roll dough out on lightly floured board. The pie is baked only until the crust is a light brown.

Make sure all ingredients are cold, and chill the dough before rolling out. Do not handle it too much. Bake pastry in a hot oven thus allowing air to expand suddenly making pastry light.

Ingredients: one cup white sugar, two tablespoons butter, two egg yolks, two tablespoons flour, one cup sweet milk, the juice and grated rind of one lemon. Cream butter and sugar egg yolks and flour, milk, lemon juice and grated rind, then fold in egg whites well beaten. Bake in shell like custard pie.

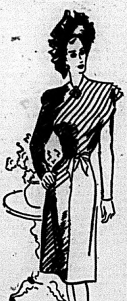
Cutting A Neat Figure



For The Small Woman
By VERA WINSTON

DESIGNERS are paying more and more attention to clothes scaled to the petite figure, which tends to eliminate costly alterations and makes for a small figure flattery. This dress for instance, goes in for tucking with a slanting line, extending from one shoulder to the opposite hip — a most flattering line. The sleeves are trim and slim, the neckline is just right for a favorite pin or necklace. The skirt is four gored.

The Glow in the Dark

By PRUNELLA WOOD

NOTHING is looking up more cheerily in the fashion scene than the new raincoat designs calculated to beguile the weather while defeating its wet. It's a long cry from the old shapeless, dirty-colored cotton wrapper, dipped in water repellent, to the rainbow hued gamut of well cut modern raincoats.

Here is a real newcomer, new in cut and color....a golden arrow shade of waterproofed satin, made to snug the figure with swank, provided with a hood that flatters, and a pouch pocket to hold a large amount of necessary impediments.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:

This Teen Ager's Suitor is 56

I am a teen-age girl. My mother allows me to go auto riding and take favors from a 56-year-old bachelor. He says he loves me. He has money and runs his own auto place.

Do you think we could be happy despite the difference in our ages? Please advise me.

"H. M."

You certainly need someone to advise you, "H. M." if you have a mother so criminally foolish as to permit this kind of thing. Evidently, you have more sense than she does, since you apparently have some doubt as to whether you are acting wisely.

Any emotional relationship between a teen-age girl and a 56-year-old man is an unnatural, unhealthy thing, and I strongly advise you to stop seeing him altogether. Of course it is pleasant to be taken about and have money spent on you. But I am very much afraid if you keep on letting him do it, you may find some day that he expects to be repaid in something other than cash.

Why not be smart enough to give the whole thing up before you come to the point where you wish you'd never got into it?

And Now We Have "Grandmother Trouble"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a boy of 23. My girl is 18, and we seem to have a little trouble over her grandmother. Her mother likes me all right. So does her father. Only her grandmother dislikes me.

Although my girl says she loves me a lot, at times she cannot see me because her grandmother is at her house. She is a very nice girl, but sometimes she gets me mad about it.

Her grandmother says that if we ever get married she will never let us be happy, so we really don't know what to do. The trouble is, her grandmother wants her to marry somebody who has money. I am a veteran, and work, and don't have much, but I am sure I could support her and make her happy. But she does not want to marry me without her grandmother's consent.

What's the matter here, anyhow? Has this grandmother a lot of money to leave, and this girl is afraid she'll be cut out of the will if she marries against the grandmother's wishes? That's the only possible reason I can think of for such silly behavior.

As for the old lady saying she would never let you be happy, that's nonsense. Relatives can make much trouble for a young couple, it's true, but not usually if the girl's parents are on their side—unless they're under Granny's thumb themselves.

If your girl doesn't love you enough to have the gumption to tell Grandma in plain words to lay off her love affair, then I'd advise you to think things over carefully before trying to persuade her to marry you. If she's more influenced by this relative than she is by you at this point, she's not likely to stand by you and back you up after you're married. I'd suggest that you tell this young lady she's got to choose right now between you and her domineering grandmother, but that she definitely can't have both. If she refuses to choose, then you'd better get going and look around for another girl, for this one is a poor bet.

Should She Leave Her Husband For Another Man?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a married woman, but in love with another man of whom my husband knows nothing. I have been seeing this man, who is unmarried for about six months, and he would like to marry me if I were free. My feeling for my husband had changed even before I met this man?

We are very much in love, and want to be together, but don't know what is right. Please advise us.

"Unhappy"

How could I advise you in this matter on such scant information as you give me? For all I know, your husband is kind to you, provides adequately for you, and does his best to make you happy, and you may be the restless type of woman who doesn't know a good thing when she sees it. On the other hand, he may be inconsiderate and selfish; he may get drunk and beat you; he may run around with other women, in which case it would hardly be surprising if you wanted to leave him for some man you thought would treat you as a husband should. Or it may be that there is some minor difficulty between you which could be adjusted so that you would be happy together once more.

If you care to write me again, giving me further details about your situation, I will be glad to send you a personal letter telling you what I think. But nobody could advise you without knowing more about you, your husband and this other man.

Her Parents Object Because Her Boy Friend Has a Different Nationality

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl, 17, who would like to know what you think of this situation: There is a boy, 19, with whom I have gone out, and I have grown to like him a lot, but, since we are of different nationalities my parents object to my going out with him.

I have four years of nurse's training ahead of me before I begin to think of anything serious, but I would like to know if you think it is right for my parents to object to my seeing this boy just because of the differences in our nationalities. I would not like to see this boy against my parents' wishes, but none of the other boys I go out with seem to me to compare with him.

"Worried."

No, "Worried," I personally think it is very foolish for parents to object to their daughters having boy friends—or their sons having girl friends—who are of different nationalities from themselves. How are we ever going to have "One World" if people are going to insist on making their lives up of only those with the same background as their own?

At the same time, I realize that is hard for a girl to decide whether she shall yield to her parents when it seems quite unreasonable, or to take a definite stand of her own. If you are training to be a nurse, you are probably not living at home, and so if you went out with this boy, you would not be going against your parents' wishes while living in their home. It seems to me that when you are on your own you have a perfect right to choose your friends as you wish, provided, of course, that they are proper companions for you.

If you find it necessary to discuss the matter at all with your parents, try to tell them that the new generation of young people often take a different view of these matters from that of their elders and that you feel if a person is worthwhile, it doesn't make any difference what nationality he is. If you try not to quarrel with them about it, but are always patient and understanding, it is possible that, in time, they may come around to your point of view.

STRIKES HOLD UP BUSINESS GROWTH DURING YEAR

Despite Interruptions and Scarcity of Materials Some Industries Set New Records; Newsprints Boom

By ALEX PRINGLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Dec. 31 (CP)— The road back from the mushroom growth of wartime under government subsidies to a sound footing under free markets , was made difficult in the first full year of peace by labor strikes, involving long interruptions to production programs. Nevertheless good progress was made.

A few lines even set new records despite the manpower shortage and scarcity of materials. Newsprint plants operated close to capacity and produced and exported in figures greater by 28 to 30 per cent in 1945.

Building operations, although hampered by a shortage of practically every item used in construction, left previous totals far behind. Contracts awarded in 1946 to the end of November reached a total of $626,821,000, a gain over the total for the comparable period of 1945 of 64 per cent and building permits issued to the end of October added up to a total greater by 103 per cent than for the same months of 1945. Production of cement expanded 40 per cent and asbestos shipments were up more than five per cent.

Flour milling in recent months topped the comparable 1945 totals and record output was attained in October. Production in the first quarter of the current crop year, starting August 1, totalled 6,819,250 barrels against 6,292,879 in the corresponding quarter of the previous year. In the first 10 months of 1946 flour production totalled 33,256,000 barrels compared with 30,970,000 barrels in the same months of 1945, a gain of seven per cent. Exports were up 9.7 per cent.

Close To Record

Canadian farmers again produced in figures close to the all-time record. The gross value of the principal field crops is estimated at $1,238,645,000 compared with $1,135,264,000 in 1945, a gain of nine per cent. Western Canada accounted for the bulk of the increase, Alberta adding 49 per cent to the value of its 1945 production.

Some other branches of the farm industry fell behind previous figures. Sales of hogs declined 25 per cent in the face of firm to strong prices throughout the year and cattle sales recorded a drop of five per cent. Butter production was down eight per cent.

Recessions in several departments of manufacturing accounted chiefly for the 15 per cent decline in the physical volume of business, as clocked by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, for the first nine months of 1946. Steel production received a severe set-back as a result of labor strikes. Pig iron production is down 27 per cent, production of steel ignots and castings declined 30 per cent. Output by the shoe manufacturing plants increased 12 per cent to the end of September. In the late summer and fall motor car production moved ahead sharply. Output for the first 10 months of 1945 totalled 135,797 units compared with 125,224 in the same months of 1945.

The mining industry was under the strain of a severe labor shortage, of rising costs and the wiping out of the premium on gold through the move of the Canadian dollar to parity with the U. S. dollar. Nevertheless production was up about eight per cent in the first nine months of the year. Production of non-ferrous metals also expanded and production of coal gained nine per cent.

Railway Operations

The railways have been called upon to absorb heavy increases in operating costs and net revenues show sharp declines although total carloadings for the year (to December 7) increased about 1.5 per cent over the previous year. C.P.R. net revenue is down 55 per cent and the C.N.R. net is down close to 50 per cent.

Canada's external trade was maintained at a high level althought there was a steady decline of exports throughout 1946 and a slow increase of imports, cutting down the favorable balance. The first 10 months recorded total exports of $1,868,100,000 against $2,744,900,000, a drop of 32 per cent. Shipments of war materials had a part in lifting the 1945 total. Imports in the first 10 months increased 17 per cent.

Financial factors continue favorable. The banks report heavy expansion of commercial loans, deposits and debits. The flow of money through mercantile channels continues to grow in volume although many needed articles are still in short supply.

Commercial failures in the first nine months of the year fell to the lowest point since the record was started in 1922.

$500,000 Damage To Calgary Plant

Calgary, Jan. 3 (CP).—A two-alarm fire razed the Western Gypsum Limited plant here early this morning causing damage estimated at more than $500,000.

D. J. McLaughlin, superintendent of the mill, said damage was well above $500,000, only partly covered by insurance.

Starting in a 600-pound roll of paper, the fire was first discovered by men cleaning machinery in the plant, who attempted to put it out with fire extinguishers.

However, several other rolls quickly caught fire and the flames shot ceiling-ward.

The fire was believed to have been started by a short circuit in a motor beside the rolls of paper.

Firemen fought a losing battle against flames that raced through the building like a match box. An hour after the blaze was discovered all that remained of the main structure was a glowing frame like the background of a dying display of fireworks.

The plant was built only a year ago last May. All new equipment had been installed since that time. About 45 men are employed at the plant.

It is estimated operations will not be resumed for at least 18 months. This will put a crimp in Calgary's already critical building situation which has relied greatly on the Western Gypsum products for plaster board since production got under way.

'JACK THE SNIPPER' GETS EIGHTH LOCK

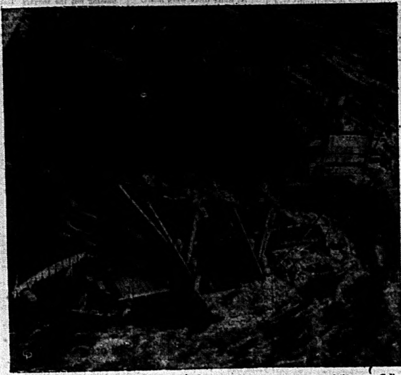
Bernice Dyer, 17, reported she lost a lock of her brunette hair apparently to a stranger who bowed and apologized for bumping her on a trolley loading platform.

Mrs. Margaret Dyer, the girl's mother, said her daughter didn't discover her loss until she arrived home.

SOVIET DELEGATE DEFENDS VETO BEFORE U. N. ATOMIC COMMISSION

Soviet delegate Andrei Gromyko, whose promotion to deputy foreign commissar of the Soviet Union was announced a few hours earlier, is shown as he spoke at Lake Success, N.Y., in defence of the veto in the atomic control commission. Gromyko charged that the United States vetoless atomic control proposal is a violation of the United Nations charter. He again stressed the Soviet demand for speedy disarmament and correlation of the outlawing of atomic weapons of all kinds. Gromyko is at left, with Britain's Alexander Cadogan and the United States' Bernard Baruch (hand to face) listening attentively.

FOOD-LADEN FREIGHTER BREAKS UP ON GOODWIN SANDS



Loaded with food for hungry Europe, this 7,600 ton American freighter the Northeastern Victory ran aground on the Goodwin Sands off southern England during a heavy fog and broke her back. A Deal motor tug found her two hours after she grounded and rescued the crew. Collapse of her wireless mast had left her captain powerless to call for help. The wrecked vessel is shown held fast in the treacherous sands while the waves gradually pound her to pieces. The ship was bound for Antwerp.

Flin Flon Origin Now Lost In Maze of Many Legends

By NORMAN ALTSTEDTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Flin Flon, Manitoba., —(CP)— Some say the name was Professor Flin Flon, others that it was Flintabatty Flonatin, but they agree that the name of the novel in which he was the hero was "The Sunless City" and that it was appropriate for this rugged mining town perched on the rock and muskeg of the Precambrian Shield.

The hazy history of this town of some 9,000 miners, fishermen, trappers and lumbermen, 250 miles northwest of Regina, is traced by one group of historians to a lonely prospector who found a novel on a Churchill River portage in 1914, in which a professor Flin Flon was the hero. He liked the name and gave it to the present site of the town, the story goes. But no one today has ever come across a copy of the novel.

Partisans of the other explanation say the character in the novel was named Flintabatty Flonatin and that he descended in a submarine to the Sunless City where gold was used for all construction.

A group of prospectors are said to have remembered the story when they were doing early work on a claim which centred on a conical hole. They named it Flin Flon.

There are more than 2,000 "Flintabatty Flonatins" descending into the mine of the Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Company here every day now to delve not only for gold, but for copper, silver, aluminum, cadium and the purest zinc in the world.

Although when anyone refers to "The Company" it is taken for granted that the H.B.M.S. company is the one referred to, the town is also a big fishing centre. More than 51,000,000 worth of fish from teeming northern lakes were marketed through Flin Flon last year.

The fish find their way to markets across Canada and in the United States by air or along the Canadian National Railways the only methods of getting to the "outside."

Highway Outlet

But there is talk now of "The Road"—the 100-foot right-of-way being sliced through rock and muskeg between Flin Flon and Nipawin, Sask., 140 miles southwest of here. The highway will provide a new outlet for fish and a new route for the products of the agriculturally rich Carrot River valley around Nipawin. The $1,000,000 road which it is expected will be completed in 1948, will open new lumber areas, also important to Flin Flon's economy.

Flin Flon is an infant which first began to grow in the late 1920's when the Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Company made an initial outlay of $27,000,000 for the mine, mill concentrators, smelter and power development, before a single ton of ore was treated.

Power comes from the unique wilderness community of Island Falls, 70 miles northwest of Flin Flon where a huge dam on the Churchill River produces the hydro-electric power serving the plant at Flin Flon as well as cheap power to the town. Street lights are left burning the year round as the city believes bulbs last longer when not turned off and on.

Only 379 people live on the Saskatchewan side of Flin Flon but the ore body lies astride the border with most of it mined in Saskatchewan. When mining operations began in the early 1930's the Manitoba government signed a 20 year agreement releasing the company from tax obligations. The agreement expires next year.

RAM GETS RECORD PRICE

Wellington, N.Z. —(CP)— A champion Corriedale woolly ram hogget from the flock of the late H. T. Little of Woodgrove, North Canterbury, has been sold to Senor Mario Pascual of Montevideo, Uruguay, at what is claimed to be the world record price of $4,032.

Washington — (CP) — Airline hostess Elaine Kjos complained no one could pronounce her name and said "I wish it was Smith." A naval officer overheard and said "My name is Smith." Now they are Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Smith.

Secret Weapons to Spark Army in 1947 Season

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, —(CP)—Canadian football fans whose knowledge of the "Monster and his Playmate" was dervied from the Monday fooball summaries and fleeting glimpses in the newsreels probably feel like most grid fans in the United States that without Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis, the Army team is just about washed up for the 1947 season.

Not only has the Blanchard-Davis backfield duo completed its college playing career, but so have all but a scattered few of that mighty cadet team that just completed three undefeated seasons. Some folks have you believe that the poor Army squad will just be laid out with "welcome" written on it for its rivals next year.

A lot of the folks were happy that the Black Knights were able to complete their three-year streak—so that their would be fond memories when the going gets tough.

However all the waving of the crying towel just goes to show how the U.S. Army's camouflage ability has improved. Coach Earl Blaik says that when he rolls out the 1947 edition of the Army team, it is going to be about as puny and peaked as a pack of lions on a raw meat diet.

Just Talk

All that business about the cadets being a soft touch for their age-old rivals, the navy, and the powerhouse Notre Dame squad, probably would make a nice picnic lunch if sliced thin.

Blaik admits that there'll be no Blanchard and Davis to knock opponent's brains out week after week. Expecting another pair like Messrs. B. and D. is like expecting to pick up an April Fool walet stuffed with $10 bills.

But with what's left of, this year's team plus what Blaik has trotted out off and on this season the cadet coach says any club taking on the Army next year will find it loaded like a rifle at both barrels.

"Suffice it," he said, "that when I say we have a couple of "secret weapons," we have."

Saarlanders Doubt Plebiscite Is Answer to Area's Future

By RICHARD O'REGAN

Saarbrucken, Germany, Dec. 31 —(AP) — Neither the conquering French nor the conquered Germans in this coal-rich, politically divided borderland appeared today to feel that a plebiscite like the one in 1935 would solve the controversial future of the coveted Saar.

French military officials and most German political leaders expressed identical views on the subject, asserting Saarlanders had "no political experience" and that a popular referendum would be "brutal and unscientific."

The question of the Saar's future, recently brought to a head by France's newly instituted "economic frontier" separating the disputed region from the remainder of Germany, is scheduled for discussion by the Big Four Foreign Ministers in Moscow next March.

Meanwhile, there apparently is a deep-rooted conviction here among both French and Germans that the issue cannot be solved by any four power plan for a referendum.

French authorities, who want to use the soaring coal production of the Saar's great fields with the iron of Lorraine, and the Germans alike declare the issue can be solved only by a decisive four power declaration.

Position Seems Clear

The French position seems clear, at least in Saarbrucken. France desires an economic union with the Saar. Speaking unofficially, French military authorities said France's week-old customs cordon around the Saar would "stay in effect until the issue is settled."

As for political union, French officials said they did "not care when that would come."

Both French officials and the big party leaders claimed that the 1935 plebiscite, in which Saarlanders voted overwhelminly to reunite with Germany after 15 years of French administration following the First Great War, was "falsified" by a "Nazi terror" prior to the neutrally supervised vote.

"A people who are hungry will vote for whoever feeds them," said a restaurant proprietor in comment typical of the Saar's man-in-the-street. "That means they'll vote for France, although were the Americans here they'd vote for America, regardless of the fact that they wish to stay German."

George Schulte, German Minister of Interior in the French appointed Saar administrative commission and vice-president of the Social Democrats, declared that a plebiscite "would be bad."

"The masses of the population say that 'Hitler was good — we had white bread and our wives had fur coats, while today we have democracy and nothing to eat,' " Schulte said.

HARNESS RACING MUCH ENJOYED BY RURAL FANS

Trots at Dufferin Attract Many From the Outside Areas

By JIM KNACK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Jan. 4 (CP)—Canada's oldest and coldest winter racetrack was at the height of its season this week—the annual mid-Winter harness racing program was in full swing at Dufferin Park.

The half-mile track in Toronto's northwest section has running races every Summer, but it's only when the wind howls and snow and sleet beats down that it really comes into its own as the mecca of harness enthusiasts.

Farmers come in each morning of the races, with their families, and don't budge until the end of the day's trots.

Their enthusiasm stems from the fact that many of the horses running represent rural communities and a personal interest is taken in their equine heroes.

The harness racer is a "standard bred" or all-purpose horse. Baldwin, a 17-year-old horse from Port Perry, was in the winning money this season.

Many of Toronto's retired businessmen are seen at the track. One of these, Thomas Locke, takes his sport seriously. He may be seen any of these mornings exercising his animals. Sam Colton and C. Chapman combine close to three-quarters of a century as trainers and drivers on this track.

Betting at the trots is light in comparison to that done on the runners. The old-fashioned "books" are used. Thomas Anderson, track manager, said he estimated only half of those attending the trots laid bets.

"It is an impossibility to make a killing on the trots," he said. "It is real gambling to gamble on these harness racers."

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

Disputes centring around migration of Canadian amateur hockey players to the United States without transfers from the CAHA were aired at a meeting in New York yesterday between representatives of the Canadian hockey body and the A.H.A. of the United States, and it was decided to leave the players with their present clubs until a final decision can be made. Dr. W. G. Hardy, president of the International Ice Hockey Association said the Canadian clubs involved had appealed to the I.I.H.A. for action in the matter.

The players involved are: James Fitzpatrick of Pembroke, now with San Francisco in the Pacific Coast League; Jack Gordon, former Winnipeg Ranger star, now with New York Rovers; Hubert Anslow, from Pembroke to Oakland, and Bill Swaney from Vancouver to Kimberley, B.C.

At Salt Lake City, John Cobb yesterday fixed 400 miles an hour as his goal for a new assault on the world's land speed record and said he'd try again in the same car he used to set the present mark of 369.74 miles an hour.

British boxing promoter Jack Solomons said yesterday in London the projected world featherweight world title fight between champion Willie Pep and Nel Tarleton had been postponed indefinitely. The fight was to have been held in London Jan. 28. An injury to Pep's ankle was given as the cause for postponement.

Oddities Dot N.H.L. Race Which Reaches Half-Way Mark During the Weekend

Leafs Meet Rangers and Second - Place Canadiens Play Boston Bruins

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Enough oddities dot the current National Hockey League campaign, which passes the half-way mark of its 180-game schedule this weekend, to give proceedings a topsy-turvy twist.

Two unusual records go on the line tonight in the pair of games in which Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens resume their struggle for the top on separate fronts.

The fourth-place New York Rangers, visitors at Toronto, have yet to gain so much as a tie in five previous meetings with the leading Leafs. In Montreal, the third-place Bruins will be seeking their first victory in six starts against Canadiens, with whom they have managed only one draw.

The Rangers are the only club in he six-team circuit who hold an edge over Montreal in season's meetings. The Blueshirts have beaten Canadiens four times, against one loss and a tie.

Bruins are even-Stephen in six meetings with Toronto, each having won two while playing deadlocks in the other pair.

The Maple Leafs, who turned this season upside-down right at the outset by sprinting into the lead after finishing fifth in the last campaign, will be seeking against Rangers to extend their five-point margin over the second-place Canadiens.

Two Left Winger Out

The Leafs will be without two left wingers, Vic Lynn and Harry Watson. Both were injured in successive games with Detroit.

The Rangers still will probably be missing the injured Alfie Pike and Phil Watson, Joe Levandowski, a right winger up from New Haven, is the latest to join the team in a rebuilding program that has seen such youngsters as Bill Moe, Melvin Read and Joe Bell brought up.

The Bruins plan to introduce a rookie at Montreal in Johnnie Pierson, a product of McGill University who has been playing with Boston Olympics in the Eastern United States League. He replaces Bill Shill.

One Boston veteran, centre Bill Cowley will be seeking an all-time record in the Bruins' two weekend games. N.H.L. President Clarence Campbell advised the Bruins yesterday that Cowley, playing his 13th season, is within four assists of Syd Howe's record scoring mark of 569 points in season and playoff competition.

Following the Montreal game, Boston goes on to Detroit to meet the fifth-place Red Wings. The other Sunday night game matches the cellar-dwelling Chicago Black Hawks against the Rangers at New York.

Sports Roundup

By JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer).

New York, Jan. 4—(CP)—The open war between Wyoming University's basketball coach and college of the City of New York may have much wider repercussions than was at first expected . . . The issue started a couple of weeks ago when Ev Shelton, the Wyoming coach, gave forth with some ill-chosen remarks about the racial and religious backgroud of the C.C.N.Y. cagers during an inter-collegiate cake tilt at Madison Square Garden . . . Nat Holman, coach of the Beavers protested strongly and within the last couple of days C.C.N.Y. authorities have severed intercollegiate relations with Wyoming . . . There's also a good chance that Wyoming will be barred from the fat Garden games treasured by every American college with a good basketball team . . .

But the issue goes much deeper than Shelton's fiery remarks about Jews . . . At a meeting of basketball writers in New York this week, Shelton said in explanation that he had not intended "to slander nationality or religion." He added: "When we play Indian teams, we call them Indians. When we play Jews, we call them Jews . . . All I said the other night was 'The Jews are getting away with murder.'"

Several weeks ago colleague Al Colletti reported in this space that the Tennessee basketball squad had refused to play against Duquesne. With racial issues growing hotter in the United States, colleges participating in sports may be forced to draw up a clear-cut set of rules on the subject . . .

Jim Crow in Baseball.

The issue also is reaching a boiling peak in baseball . . . Until last year, the unwritten code said that no Negro should play in organized ball . . . Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers broke the taboo last spring when he hired the brilliant Negro infielder, Jackie Robinson, to play for Montreal Royals of the International league . . . Robinson, accepted wholeheartedly by the Montreal fans, reciprocated by winning the I. L. batting championship . . . Now the question arises as to whether he will step up to the parent Dodgers . . . Rickey has sidestepped the issue by saying that Robinson at spring training camp, will get the same chance that any other rookie gets . . . But this is not the usual policy of a Major League team bringing up a star player from the AA class ball . . . particularly a batting champ . . . In such cases, the star usually tries out in regularly-scheduled Major League games without too much attention being paid to spring training . . . Then, if in early season he does not make good, he drops back to the minors . . . But the only thing possible now is to see what happens next spring . . .

MAY FIGHT WOODCOCK

Philadelphia, Jan. 4 —(AP)— Joey Maxim, the youthful heavyweight title aspirant from Cleveland, may get a crack at Bruce Woodcock, British champion, if he whips Jersey Joe Walcott in their 10-round bout at Convention Hall here Monday night.

Tom Walsh of Chicago says he has been authorized to sign Maxim for a fight with Woodcock in London if the Clevelander — leading "white hope" for the world championship crown now held by Joe Louis — is victorious. Maxim defeated Walcott last year.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Apparently the Trenton officials of the junior hockey squad got their troubles ironed out more or less satisfactorily as they notified the Belleville Bee management yesterday that they would be able to ice a team for the inaugural tilt on Monday night and the game would go on as scheduled.

• • •

Coach Don Whillans has had his platoon of hockey hopefuls practising faithfully for some time and come Monday there will have been an extensive weeding program gone through. The Bees' practices attracted a large crowd of youthful puckists, some veterans of the junior wars and others fighting to make the squad.

• • •

At times there were nearly thirty battling young aspirants out there chasing pucks and each other, and the axe must fall on more than half of this number according to O.H.A. regulations. Needless to say, a lot of the young fellows are going to be disappointed, for failure to make the squad means that they will be out of hockey unless they play with some hastily-organized "Owl" squad, or off-game practice with the team.

• • •

This definitely should not be. Watching the beardless ones practise on several occasions it was painfully evident that a lack of organized hockey for the boys of juvenile age has been and is apparent in this city. A number of the lads out there striving with all they had to make an impression, knew little or nothing of the rules, and raced and slashed with abandon despite the consistent efforts of Coach Whillans. There was too much blood and thunder stuff, but neither the coach nor the kids themselves are to be blamed.

• • •

For the past ten years, or at least as long as this writer has sojourned along the banks of the Moira there has been little activity along juvenile and midget hockey lines. I think that one or two seasons some one did take enough interest to sponsor a juve. team, but the effort died out and for some years now nothing has been done to foster the sport among the boys along organized lines.

• • •

Belleville teams for the past few years at least, have had "two strikes" on them from the start. One is lack of artificial ice and the other, the more important of the two, a definite lack of a "feed-box" for intermediate and junior squads. Ripe apples do not follow the blossoms on trees, and, to use an ancient bromide "one must crawl before he walks."

• • •

Each winter as it rolls around brings the inevitable criticism of a number of fans, rinkside referees and coaches the most of them who deride the efforts of those who have bucked serious handicaps in order to bring some sort of hockey here. They little think or do not want to think that hockey, of all sports, needs new and young blood periodically—and that this new blood should have the benefit of organized experience. And the only way to get these youthful players is through the media of juvenile and midget teams and leagues.

• • •

There is much talk of an artificial ice plant being installed in the local arena next winter. In fact it is almost a definite possibility now, if the grapevine can be believed. That fact reduces the handicap of local hockey managements, players and future players to one strike. The other can be easily overcome if sports-minded men of the city, in fact the community itself, have an eye to youth.

• • •

In fact artificial ice next winter opens a new vista of possibilities insofar as the young boys are concerned. Juvenile and midget teams could be formed and organized into leagues. It only needs a few sports and youth-minded citizens to take the matter in hand and by doing this hockey players of the future would be assured.

• • •

As a matter of fact this city should bow its head slightly in shame as far as juvenile and midget hockey teams are concerned. Other communities with half the rink and other winter facilities have made a success of the venture and flourishing youth loops are one of the main winter attractions. And the holier-than-thous howl about juvenile delinquency. 'Twas ever thus. 'Tis better, far better, for the boys of the city to be dodging bodychecks than policemen.

• • •

The Bees had a strenuous workout last night at the Arena and Coach Whillans selected his squad with Prexy Bill Dennis and members of the executive backing up his selection for that first all important game Monday night. Here's how they'll stack up Goal, Plumley or Rollins; defence, Milligan, Utman, Hurst and M. Green; Forwards, Day, Reeves, Wardhaugh, Lyle, Johnny Semark; Haggis, Green and D. Semark.

• • •

Doug Day, Huck Reeves and Wardhaugh will likely be the starting line with Utman and Green opening hostilities on the defence. The goal selection is not quite clear as yet but that will be announced just before game time if not some time today. The kids are rarin' to go and fans should see some thrilling hockey on Monday when the Bees tangle with their traditional enemies from Trenton.

• • •

That Jivin' Jehu of the Rawson bus lines who transported the Belleville Redmen over many a weary mile last winter, Jack McNab, was passing out the seegars last night. For Johnny-Come-Lately is the proud poppa of what is expected to be the first New Year's baby born in the city and district. It's a seven pound Johnny-Joe who like his old man is "so round, so firm, so fully packed" with life, that is. In any event, congratulations and the best wishes for the Lil' Joe go to you, Jack, from the Redmen and officials of the team, and you are fully forgiven for mistaking the six o'clock whistle of a Cobourg factory for that of a locomotive. Best of luck to you, the little woman and Johnny-Joe.

CONVINCES FATHER

Philadelphia, Jan. 4 —(AP)— Dick Koecher, 20-year-old newly-signed pitcher for the Philadelphia Phillies, has finally convinced his father that sports are "okay."

Koecher says his father gave him one spanking after another for sneaking off after school to play baseball, basketball or football.

GIANTS SIGN PAIR

New York, Jan. 4—(AP)—The New York baseball Giants today announced the signing of a pair of infield buddies — Buddy Kerr and Buddy Blattner — to bring the total of players whose names are on the dotted line for 1947 to six.

New York, Jan. 4 — (AP) — Heavyweight champion Joe Louis, as most everyone would expect, was the champion crowd-puller in boxing during 1946.

Appearing in two title defences at the Yankee Stadium against Billy Conn and Tami Mauriello, the Brown Bomber drew gross receipts of $2,260,627 contributed by 83,760 persons. The receipts of the Conn match, that brought $100 for ringside seats back in June, put Pittsburgh Billy in second place with $1,925,564.

Montreal's welterweight Johnny Greco, who appeared in three Garden indoor shows only, lured $270,635 to rank seventh in the figures. Some 42,741 fans paid their way to see Greco fight in the main events.

Middleweight Rocky Graziano, who topped the list in 1945 with $401,462 when no outdoor shows were held, ranked third with aggregate gross gates of $624,634 on the strength of his three main bouts, one a title bout with Tony Zale and two indoor appearances at Madison Square Garden.

Mauriello and Zale pulled $433,653 and $342,497, respectively, for fourth and fifth places. Beau Jack, former lightweight champion, who appeared only on Garden indoor shows, lured $288,354 to rank sixth ahead of Greco.

Completing the list of those with $200,000 totals were Marty Servo, Jersey Joe Walcott, Tony Pellone and Willie Joyce, runner-up to Graziano in 1945.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Bridge should never get monotonous. Never during your lifetime are you likely to get the same cards twice. There is a new show with every shuffle of the pack.

Among all these hands, you must sometimes employ the unblocking principle. This group includes entries, holdups, ducks, overtakes uppercuts, and such.

A holdup refers to a play where you refuse to take a trick when you can. A familiar holdup frequently comes up in no-trump contracts. Like when south was in three no-trump and west led diamond deuce in this deal:

NORTH
♠9 3 2
♥Q 5
♦10 4
♣A Q J 8 4 2

WEST
♠8 5
♥J 9 7 3
♦K 8 7 2
♣9 7 6

EAST
♠K Q J 10
♥10 8 6
♣K 5

SOUTH
♠A 7 6 4
♥A K 4 2
♣10 3

As a rule, declarer holds up the ace when it is his only stopper in that suit. The idea is to wait until one foe is out of that suit. If that opponent gets in, he will be unable to lead that suit.

When this holdup was tried here, east held the first trick with diamond nine. But after studying the situation, east did not return a diamond. Instead, he came back with a spade.

Sooner or later, spade ace was forced and declarer went to work on the clubs. But the club finesse lost to the east king. This trick, the first diamond, and three spades sunk the contract.

Here was a case where declarer should have avoided the holdup. The deuce lead shows it is a fourth best. Each opponent must have exactly four diamonds. A holdup will exhaust neither.

South should grab diamond ace in a hurry and go fast for a club finesse. When it loses, opponents have that trick and get three diamonds. The contract is safe after that.

When should you lay off a holdup? When it will not exhaust a foe. Also, when they are likely to switch to another bad suit.

Seems as if there is always something to worry about.

The Movie Column

By IRIS WILSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

British producers came to the forefront in moviedom this last year by winning five places in what the New York Film Critics called the ten best of 1946. Three of the ten were American made, while France and Italy each took one place among the laurel winners.

The list, in alphabetical order since no comparative rating could be made:

"A Walk in the Sun" (American); "Brief Encounter" (British); "Dead of Night" (British); "Henry V" (British); "My Darling Clementine" (American); "Open City" (Italian); "Stairway to Heaven" (British); "The Best Years of Our Lives" (American); "The Raider" (British) and "The Well-Digger's Daughter" (French).

Commenting on the overwhelming majority of British films, Archer Winsten, New York Post movie columnist, said:

"There is no good purpose in denying that American films have hit a new low in quality while enjoying one of their most prosperous years."

Winsten said that out of hundreds of other Hollywood products mentioned only three others were seriously considerd: "The Spiral Staircase", "The Killers", and "Smokey".

"If Hollywood producers cannot realize how badly they have failed this year in matching the best from other countries, then the future of American films is pretty dark indeed".

Britain has contributed many new names to the Hollywood sky: The Rex Harrisons (she's Lilli Palmer), Deborah Kerr, Phyllis Calvert, James Mason, Ann Todd, Patricia Roc, Peggy Cummings, Michael Redgrave and Johnny Mills, as well as the outstanding Oliviers—Laurence and wife, Vivien Leigh.

Spotlighting The Stars

Ella Raines is taking French lessons so she probably will be flying to Paris for an early Spring vacation . . . Winnipeg-born Deanne Durbin flew to San Diego from Universal with her parents the day after she finished "I'll Be Yours". . .Her father was the pilot, who has just received his licence. . .Loraine Day will co-star with John Wayne in R.K.O.'s "Tycoon", as a rebellious South American beauy who defies her aristocratic family to follow the man she loves. The cast also will include Anthony Quinn, Sir Cedric Hardwicke and James Gleason.

AT THE CAPITOL — Adele Mara and Lenore Aubert, two very frightened young ladies, as the menacing shadow of the claw of the Catman creeps closer and closer amid the startling developments in the suspenseful melodrama, "The Catman of Paris," starting Monday at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program another chiller diller, "Valley of the Zombies," with Robert Livingston, Adrian Booth and Ian Keith. Both pictures new hits, and Adult Entertainment.

In Manhattan

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Jan. 4. (CP)—Another year in the theatre ended this week, and it ended with six openings in three days. The quantity, however, was not matched by quality. Not one of the half-dozen new vehicles even comes near resembling a "hit".

Closest to a satisfactory evening comes from a revival of "Burlesque", starring Bert Lahr. Lahr's performance gives the play a lift by shifting the emphasis onto his redoubtable shoulders rather than on the literary content of the venerable gamus of show business sentimentality.

Of the two musicals which blossomed forth, one— "Beggar's Holiday"—is different and almost satisfying, while the other —"Toplitzky of Norte Dame"—is terribly ordinary.

It's not easy to say why "Beggar's Holiday" is not more satisfying. There is a lot of color and plenty of excitement, but it seems to stumble when it takes itself seriously. The music by Duke Ellington generally is good, in few instances fine. John Latouche's lyrics are amusing.

What was meant to be a bright and bitter satire of the New York City underworld—not unlike the London underworld originally satirized in "The Beggar's Opera" by John Gay from which "Holiday" is supposedly adapted —starts out well-intention but ends by being something altogether different.

"Toplitzky" has an original idea: A Jewish restaurant owner who is such a Notre Dame football fan that he wants a son on the team gets help from an angel (male) on furlough from Heaven. When complications set in, they become pedestrian and the book bogs down to commonplaceness.

On the serious side there is a well-intentioned drama about the problems faced by American forces occupying post-war Germany. "Temper the Wind" shatters badly in a welter of badly-constructed heroics and interminable anti-climaxes after starting out in a fairly exciting fashion.

"Wonderful Journey," the stage version of the good film "Here Comes Mr. Jordan", should better have been left as a film. After the fine Hollywood job, "Journey" just remains weak throughout with a few bright comedy spots.

"Lovely Me" was best described by one critic as a "catalogue of worn jokes, depressing situations and minor obscenities". The chief difficulty with the piece is that it does not quite make up its mind whether it should be a comedy, farce or senimental escapade.

Six Remanded On Charge Of Attempted Theft

Windsor, Jan. 4 —(CP)— Six young men were remanded yesterday until Jan. 8 on charges of shop breaking and attempted theft — 10 hours after they were arrested at Eric MacArthur's grocery store on west-end Prince Road. They did not plead.

The six: Adalard Garant, 28; Frederick Ruby, 21; Earl Nantais, 21, and Raymond Burlasky, 22, all of Windsor, and Israel Garant, 23, and Real Dequire, 21, both of nearby Tecumseh.

Police said 107 pounds of butter and quantities of meat and tobacco were found at the front of the grocery when the six were taken into custody early yesterday.

Constables Albert Curtis and Lewis Jacobs said they were making a routine check of Prince Road stores when they noticed the front door of the grocery had been opened.

CHAPTER 37.

"Not Sid Borrows?" Jennifer whispered.

"I'd forgotten you were always crazy about him," Betty said on an apologetic note. "I didn't mean to snock you."

"No." Jennifer swallowed with a dry throat. The room moved in slower circles. "It wasn't that."

"Your being engaged to Dr. Lippincott made me think that you'r forgotten the Borrows boy," Betty went on.

"I care more for Jim Lippincott's little finger than for twenty Sid Borrows," Jennifer said almost absently, on a brief shred of laughter. She stared with dazed wide eyes into space.

"But then why did you let him down that way, Jen? I was dressing to go to your wedding when they called up trying to find you."

"I don't know. I was a fool, I guess."

"And where is he now?"

"South Sea somewhere, with the fleet."

"You're still engaged?"

"I am. Whether or not he thinks he is, is the question," Jennifer said ruefully.

"Was he mad?"

"I never saw him, Betty. No, I don't think he was mad. I went to see Mollie and her adorable babies the other day, and she said he seemed very quiet; he went away a few days later, you know ....Sid Borrows dead!" Jennifer whispered. "He told me that they'd deferred him."

"They may have, but anyway, he got into aviation and was training in Kelly Field. It was your Sid Borrows, all right, for the article mentioned his mother and his prominent Burlingame family—all that stuff."

"Doesn't life take funny twists and turns?"

Jennifer reached across to gather in a handful of the peas Betty was shelling; her fingers threaded the green shells expertly. For a long while she did not speak. Just so, shelling peas or doing homework, reading library books or idling over solitaire, she sat on a hundred such summer afternoons with the trade winds whining around the windows and little whirlpools of rubbish rising and subsiding in the neighboring back yards. It had not been wholly dreary at all, there had always been the thought of strawberries for dinner or a movie tomorrow or her best gingham home from the laundry to keep her thoughts in a contented groove; there had always been funnies and cones, Jack Armstrong and Orphan Annie, Chocolate candy bars and good school marks.

Now she saw the depressing dark reds, the smeared browns, and cheap materials of the dining room with changed eyes. She compared them to the furnishings of a big airy house on a hilltop with a panorama of towns and bay, islands and bridges, Tamalpais and the Golden Gate laid out below it. She saw the wide clean hallways where Hilda and Cassie moved to and fro so quietly, the dining room with its impressive Fortuny curtains and subdued lights, its polished walnut and heavy chased silver. At her grandmother's house there, were crystal bowls of flowers everywhere, great burts of pure pink and blue color, delphinium and roses, low, glowing arrangements of begonias in melting yellow and hot scarlet, blue jars of snowy Shasta daisies and masses of old-fashioned stock, thick, creamy pink and lavender. At her grandmother's house there were deep closets filled with fragrant folded linen, other closets where the handsome solid dinner plates were ranged in their orderly dozens, dark blue plates, gold plates, plates all flowers against snowy circles of porcelain. At her grandmother's house there were books, books in every room, and a library lined solidly with books, enough to satisfy a book-hungry girl for days and months and years.

And Jennifer was queen of her grandmother's house. The old lady had capitulated to her immediately; Jennifer had had to make no effort. Old Julia Giddings laughed at her, listened to her, followed her about with adoring eyes, wiped tears from her own eyes when Jennifer gave her some little proof of affection.

"She's a darling isn't she, Archie?" she would demand of the old colonel she generously called her "brother-in-law." Jennifer had learned now that his was only a remote cousinship with her late husband. But he was a kind courteous old man whose modest income his hostess had long ago assured to him. "Archie's all fixed; don't ever worry about him," she told Jennifer.

"I wasn't" Jennifer said mildly.

"He thinks you're a wonderful girl," her grandmother told her and over the cribbage board or the domino table the colonel would look up amiable agreement.

"Jennifer," he would say judicially, "has come as a ray of youth, beauty, and light into our darkened years. You and I once had them, all three, Julia, but by some unfair trick of fate we seem to have mislaid them somewhere."

"We have mislaid nothing," the old lady might counter with spirit. "They're all here, just ready to be waked up again, and Jennifer has come along to awaken them."

Jennifer loved it all. She loved to be spoiled and admired and indulged. She took her place as the grandaughter of the house with an ease that astonished even herself. Her grandmother introduced her to the two or three friends who were intimate there as "Mary's daughter; she's from the south." Everyone else seemed to take her for granted.

"You were living on San Jose Avenue, and that's south of the tracks according to old San Francisco ruling," she would say.

"Granny, you're—you're actually crooked!" Jennifer might delight her by protesting in reply.

"Mrs. Mortimer Giddings," said the always socially agreeable press, " has with her as her house guest this spring her granddaughter, Miss Jennifer Richie. They will be the guests this week of Mr. and Mrs. Elkton Fairchild at Fairwaters, the Fairchild's Santa Barbara estate." "Mrs. Mortimer Giddings and her granddaughter, Miss Jennifer Richie, whose mother will be remembered as the lovely Mary Giddings of a generation ago, will spend the weekend at Pebble Beach."

"Look here," said one particularly sharp San Mateo matron whose own early years of social insecurity had made her more than ordinarily autocratic and fastidious, "I've seen you—where? I know. In Vogesang's. Haven't I?"

"I was there," Jennifer admitted unruffled. "I modeled frocks there for years."

"Claudia is breaking her heart to get into Vogelsang's; it's the thing to do," an even more aristocratic mother contributed. "You know Penny Sallsbury is running their college department now, and Marian says the twins are simply dying to get in!"

"But tell me," one of the pretty girls of the debutante group asked Jennifer winningly, "why weren't you living with your grandmother all this time? Did you have a fight?"

"No." Jennifer's affectionate eyes went to her grandmother, furiously playing bridge in another part of the room. "Granny and I never had a fight. But she didnt approve of my mother's marriage; my father was a good deal older, an instructor and an inventor, and that didn't appeal to her. So for years we didn't see each other."

"And she's forgiven you're mother now?"

Then Jennifer very seriously had only to say, "No my mother and father are both dead," and the subject was dropped.

It was like the little capsules of culture that Monty had given her so long ago; usually a few words sufficed. Sometimes she had followed a subject along into a real study of it and could maintain a prolonged talk about it. More often she said only the few words he had given her.

"What do you know about Kinkinjunga?" a scientist demanded of her at a dinner party. "Who told you famous violins were sometimes made of the wood of old church choirs?" somebody else asked curiously. "You're the girl who spoke about the Chatterton hoax, aren't you?" a college professor said, singling her out of a group after dinner. "I was amazed you knew about it. I want to tell you of another literary cheat that I think just as remarkable."

"You're an amazingly well-informed young person," said her grandmother, who never missed any iota of admiration that came Jennifer's way.

"I'm a consummate bluffer, Granny. Talk about literary cheats. I'm the worst of the lot!"

"Well, it's something," the old lady would say, chuckling, "to be a good bluffer!"

"Monty."

The single word fell into absolute silence. The man who was painting at an easel did not move and Jennifer spoke again.

"Monty."

"Mrs. Findley?" the painter said then over his shoulder. "Telephone?"

"Oh, Monty, turn around!" Jennifer was half laughing, half crying. Now Monty did turn and stood staring at her through his glasses, his head dropped a little forward, his palette in his hand, just as she remembered seeing him a hundred times.

The door through which she had abruptly entered the studio faced the west where the sun was sinking into a blazing sea. So silhouetted, she was but a slender bright blue against the light, her tumbled hair aureoled, her old white sweater, pleated short skirt, socks and low canvas shoes making her look like a little girl.

"I thought it was Mrs. Findley," Monty began hestitatingly. "I have no telephone. She comes over—my good Lord, it's Jennifer!"

"It's Jennifer!" she confirmed it, laughing joyously. He had flung his palette down now and seized both her hands; for a moment both he and she were speechless, breathing hard and laughing into each other's eyes.

Then she sat down, and Monty took a chair opposite her and close to her and they were both talking at once.

"I'm staying over at Pebble Beach; I walked over! Look at my shoes, and I'm blown to pieces. But it suddenly occurred to me that you had a studio here, and I asked everyone and found you with no trouble at all!"

"Oh, say—oh, say—oh, say—it's good to see you!"

"Isn't it good to see each other! I've missed you so. I walked across the roofs; it was too awful to see the dear old studio full of auctioneer's stuff."

"I know but Sam French left me this place—he was killed, you know. Midway. He went off right after Pearl Harbor. I tried to get in anywhere—everywhere. Too old and no experience; they didn't want me.. So I got work at the Monterey Presidio—"

"What doing?"

"Warehouse work. This is the first afternoon I've had off for weeks. I usually don't get home until after eight."

"Oh, Monty," the girl said her eyes glowing, "I do respect you for that! You got into war work?"

"Had to. I like it. We'll work over there for—oh, say eight or ten days running, sixteen hours at a stretch. Then we have a lull and I clean up this place and sleep late and get caught up."

"And isn't this a darling place! It's yours?"

"Yep. Sam and I were together when he bought it; we used to come down weekends. It's only three rooms; I bunk in there, and that door's the kitchen. But I'm right on the cliff; I've got the Pacific in my front yard. It's all I'll ever want."

"And the lovely big fireplace and your table on the porch," she murmured, walking about and inspecting everything with great satisfaction. "I should think the painting would go well here. Monty, if it did anywhere!"

"It will someday. Meanwhile every nail I hammer into a crate I hammer in for Sam. We'll win if only so that those fellows who went down into the Pacific will know that their lives weren't thrown away. But say, listen, what about you?"

He was so exactly his old comfortable self that her heart warmed more and more every second; the sunset-flooded big seaside room was enchantingly informal, just the sort of place in which Monty had always belonged and which it had taken him so many years to find. His house was at garden level; marigolds and mallow and other hardy flowers crowded against the windows. There was a bowl of apples on the porch table. The level stretch of the cliff was studded with strange, silky little blossoms of all colors half buried in coarse grass.

Beyond the cliff brimmed the sea, glittering now like a path into Golconda; the little waves were tipped with metallic light; the tide was coming in lazily, creaming into wide interlocking circles on the sand.

"I went into Vogelsang's, I actually did, to ask for you. They said you'd taken a job in Davenbury. What happened?" asked Monty. "One of the girls said you were going to be married but she didn't seem to be very sure about it."

"I told them when I left that I was going to get married and then—I wasn't," Jennifer confessed. "So then I did take a job in Davenbury over beyond Berkeley as a companion. But that only lasted ten days."

"Then what? Lord, you're lovely to look at," Monty said simply.

"In this outfit? I wanted to come by the rocks, so I put on the worst things I had."

THIRD PLACE AT STAKE

(By The Canadian Press)

Third place in both divisions will be at stake tonight when all of the American Hockey League teams clash.

Springfield can take third place in the east away from the visiting Pittsburgh Hornets in the west.

At the end of Philadelphia-Cleveland encounter at Cleveland, Philadelphia may be deeper in the eastern division cellar or Cleveland may be still further ahead as western division leaders — in either case it won't matter much as far as league standing is concerned.

Similarly, second place New Haven has no chance of taking first place in the east from Hershey — now over-all league leader with a 20-point lead on the rival New Haven team. Indianapolis at St. Louis also will be out for the ride.

Police Nip Operations of International Smuggling Ring

Montreal (CP)—Crime stepped up on the Montreal waterfront during the recently closed shipping season with harbor police making more than the usual number of arrests.

Capt. James Cowley, chief of harbor police, said the reason for the crime increase was the return of imported cargos, goods of which brought a lucrative return on the outside. Better part of the goods was recovered and most of the would-be thieves caught in the act.

Capt. Cowley, 32 years on the force, revealed that his staff nipped in the bud what might possibly have been an international smuggling ring. Discovery of the smuggling in Montreal came to light unexpectedly one night as a British vessel docked.

One crew member left the ship with a large bag and made for two automobiles, one a taxi, parked near the ship. Guards followed and the seaman, apparently puzzled as to which automobile he was looking for, was straightened out by a whisper of "not that one, buddy, put it in the one behind" which came from someone aboard the vessel.

Jittery and noticing the guards, the seaman started to run and before he was caught, the bag had been thrown into the harbor. It was recovered, and when opened it contained a valuable large bolt of cloth. A search revealed several other bolts hidden in various sections of the ship.

The last slaying on the waterfront was in 1918 when a Lascar seaman was killed in a scuffle with a companion.

Decisions Change On Second Meeting

New York, Jan. 4 —(AP)— A sextette of swatters who had previously traded blows in the Twentieth Century Sporting Club's "minor league farm" were brought into Madison Square Garden last night, and all three of the rematches wound up differently than the last time these boys got together.

Julio Jiminez, 138-pound Mexican, outpointed Roman Alvarez, 140½, Brooklyn, in the feature of the three 10-rounders. The last time they met, at St. Nicholas Arena, Alvarez finished in front.

Southpaw Joe Curcio, 131¾, Newark, N.H., took a split decision over Bee Bee Washington, 161, Washington, D.C., in a slugging brawl as a return go to the draw they fought in November. Curcio was down for a one-count in the 10th.

Johnny Colan, 174, New York, decisioned his old rival, Johnny Thomas, 192¾, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., for his first victory in three meetings with the Southerner. Colan hit the deck for a nine-count in the first but outboxed Thomas down the stretch.

PARTICULAR SEAMAN

Liverpool, England —(CP)— James Blundell, 40-year-old trawler fireman, recently began a 28-day jail sentence for refusing to put to sea. His reason: "The cook could not bake properly."

Arguments Head Pro and Con On Freight Rates

Ottawa, Jan. 4 (CP)—Arguments for and against a full realignment of Canada's freight rate system on a basis of regional means was before the Board of Transport Commissioners today as it continued with preliminary hearings on the railways' application for general rate increases.

Views of a group of the provinces favoring a general examination of the rate structure with a view to territorial necessities were opposed by those of the railways, seeking immediate disposition of their equest for flat increases of 30 per cent all along the line, except in the case of bulk hauls such as coal and coke.

In presenting their stand to the Board yesterday, spokesmen for provinces in the west and east argued that horizontal rate boosts such as sought by the railways were "unfair" to the outlying areas with the longer hauls to central Canadian markets.

These spokesmen—for all provinces except Quebec and Ontario—claimed economic factors in each area of the Dominion should be taken into account in setting new rates.

Claim Prima Facie Case

On the other hand, the Canadian Pacific Railway—only road to be heard yesterday—asserted briefs already filed by the association of Canadian railways had made out prima facie case in favor of flat percentage increases as sought.

Later, the C.P.R. held, any region feeling itself dissatisfied with new rates could bring its case before the Board.

Today, the Board continued hearings into an application by the seven provinces for additional particulars covering a wide range of financial matters in the railways' original submissions to the Board. This sitting is preliminary to the main hearings on the increase itself, which are scheduled to start Feb. 11.

Counsel for the provinces called yesterday for breakdowns on figures of revenue and expenditure provided by the railroads, both for past year and on 1947 projections, while railway representatives claimed much of this data was unavailable or could be obtained from public records or through examination of witnesses.

Lt. Gen. Murchie Chief of Staff Sails for Home

London, Jan. 4—(CP)—A modern stone building alongside Canada House on London's Cockspur Street today is virtually back to its pre-war prosaic existence as business offices—its wartime life as the nerve-centre of Canadian overseas military operations like a forgotten dream.

Another phase in its quiet transformation back to civil pursuits came yesterday when Lt. Gen. John Murchie, Chief of Staff of the Canadian Army overseas sailed for home aboard the freighter Beaverford. He is headed for Edmunston, N.B., via Saint John, N.B.

The Canadian soldiers who once thronged through its walls are gone—except for a small wind-up staff remaining to handle the return to the Dominion of the last major draft of men, set for Jan. 14.

But Canadians who lived in London during the war years still had vivid memories of its regime as Canadian Military headquarters.

They had only to pace the 300-odd yards of Cockspur Street from Pall Mall at one end to Trafalgar Square at the other—to conjure up recollections like these:

The bomb crater on Pall Mall immediately behind the building one morning in 1941 following a night blitz;

The tense pre-invasion days of 1943 and 1944 when army and R.A.F. staff officers came and went, their minds filled with details of the Allied invasions of Italy and later of France;

The waning months of the war in Europe when London lay under fire of German V-1 Robot Bombs—the kind you heard for few seconds before they exploded, and V2 rockets—the kind you never heard until they landed.

Here, they remembered too, the R.C.A.F. established its headquarters before it was expanded during the "build-up" phase of the war.

But today it is different.

The business men are coming back to their peace-time offices. Men with rolled umbrellas step into the building to pore over ledgers and transact the commerce that still is London's lifeblood.

Two Escapees Recaptured By Brooklyn Police

New York, Jan. 4—(AP)—Two of the nine men who fled Brooklyn's Raymond Street jail were back in police custody today but the others, including a confessed killer, still eluded an intensive nine-state hunt.

First to be caught up in the police dragnet was scarfaced Alfred Minutolo, 34-year-old former Alcatraz prisoner, who police say was the "brains" behind the mass daylight escape from the antiquated jail Thursday afternoon.

Minutolo, who was awaiting trial on 10-year-old charges of attempted robbery when he broke out, was captured last night in Montvale, N.J., by a police officer and an unarmed citizen as he loitered near the pulpit of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. He offered no resistance.

Minutolo was unarmed and a search showed he had only $6.25 on his person.

Several hours later, Salvatore D'Aula, 31, another of the escapees, walked up to two patrolmen as they stepped out of a Brooklyn station house, and surrendered in these words:

"I'm Salvatore D'Aula. I'm one of the fellows who got out of Raymond Street jail. You might as well take me. I've been riding the subways for two days. I'm hungry and I might just as well quit."

Missing Ohio State U. Co-ed Returns Home

Columbus, O., Jan. 4 (AP).—The pretty 20-year-old daughter of an Ohio State university professor rested unharmed at her home today, and the 42-year-old former convict with whom she disappeared Wednesday was in custody at Cleveland. Their versions of the holiday trip that started a country-wide hunt differed vastly.

"Oh dad, it was awful!" Mary Virginia Kimberly was quoted by her father, Prof. Emerson E. Kimberly. "The old fool wanted to marry me."

Kimberly, an electrical engineering professor, said his red-haired daughter "escaped" at Cleveland yesterday morning and then was taken to a train for Columbus by the former convict, Robert H. Hemming.

"She did not leave home of her own volition," Mrs. Kimberly said her daughter had told her, but neither parent would explain the circumstances of the girl's departure with Hemming in an automobile New Year's afternoon. They said previously that Hemming lured the Commerce College senior by telling her he was having a surprise party for Miss Kimberly and his daughter, Sara Hemming.

Other Charges To Follow.

When told of Hemming's arrest last night, Mary was quoted by her father as saying: "I'll never have to see him again, will I?"

Hemming was held on a "suspicious person" warrant filed by Prof. Kimberly yesterday morning, and the professor said last night that other charges would be filed after a conference with his lawyer.

The Kimberlys said Mary told them she jumped out of Hemming's car in Cleveland and tried to flag another automobile, but he forced her back into the car, told her to shut up, then took her to the train.

Hemming's story, Cleveland police said, was that he and Mary spent Thursday night in Lorain, then hitchhiked to Cleveland intending to get married, but decided to defer the marriage after learning that the state law required a five-day residence.

"We were walking through the lobby of the Cleveland hotel," Hemming told the officers, "when I glanced at a news stand and saw our pictures all over the front page. We talked things over and I decided that Mary Virginia should go home."

Marshal Petain Ill At Home in Exile

Paris, Jan. 4—(AP)—Marshal Petain, 86-year-old Vichy leader of France, is seriously ill at his home in exile on a small island off the coast of Brittany, his lawyer, Jacques Isorny, said today.

Isorny said the aged marshal was suffering from a lung infection and admitted there was cause to worry over his condition.

Petain is exiled on the Ile D'Yeu. He was convicted of collaboration with Germany in an historic and stormy trial in Paris during the summer of 1945.

DIME NOVEL THRILLER COMES TO LIFE

The photo-diagram (top) depicts the climax of what New York police say is one of the weirdest murder plots they ever encountered. Mrs. Olga Rocco (lower right) stepped from a subway train in Times Square to be met by 19-year-old Pearl Lusk (lower left) who had left the train before her. Lusk carried a Christmas box holding what she believed to be a specially built camera, which she says was given her by a man who hired her to do detective work and ordered her to get a picture of Mrs. Rocco. She snapped the concealed "camera" and a shotgun blast tore through Mrs. Rocco's body wounding her seriously. The woman was slightly wounded some months ago by a rifle bullet fired through the window of her Brooklyn home and police have since been searching for her husband.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By STEVE ROBERTSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Jan. 4—(CP)—Make way for Johnny Metras, coach of the undefeated University of Western Ontario Mustangs in the Intercollegiate Rugby Football Union, for a word or two on Canadian football rules.

The man who ranks as one of the Dominion's best coaches speaks his mind particularly on the proposal from some quarters that backs be given the full freedom of the 10-yard interference zone allowed for lineman last fall. They are presently limited to making interference within one yard of the line of scrimmage.

"What do they want more interference for?" says Metras as reported by Beejay in the London Free Press. "Most blocks are thrown within the first five or seven yards anyway — why sure, at least 90 per cent of them are.

"With the backs in motion what more do they want, automatic self-starters?" continued Metras, himself an original product of the United States game where interference is unlimited but backs may not be in motion when the ball is snapped.

The thing to do is to digest the present rules before asking for more, he said, concluding: "The Canadian game is a pretty good game as it is. Better think twice before they begin to spoil it." He would even be happy with the old five-yard interference zone for linemen.

Memories: Few sports writers have had as long and as active a connection with hockey as Michael J. (Kingston Whig-Standard) Rodden. The white-thatched veteran recently wrote of that 1928 Stanley Cup series in which New York Rangers came up with a surprise conquest of Montreal Maroons after Lester Patrick took over the goaltending job in the second game after the late Lorne Chabot was injured.

Rodden, who with the late Lou E. Marsh refereed the series, wrote that he "will always be convinced that the greatest five-man combination of all time"—Bill and Bun Cook, Frank Boucher, Ching Johnson and Taffy Abel—"turned the tide in favor of the New Yorkers." But he recognized that "Patrick's entry into the battle, the unquestioned power of the Maroons and the fact that all the games were staged in the Montreal Forum made Rangers' conquest top line news."

He recalled, too, that the referees called back a goal by Russ Oatman of Maroons, charging Bill Phillips with interference.

Wrote Rodden: "It need hardly be said that the fans exhibited great displeasure when the ruling was rendered and that a fine time was had by all before the referees escaped from the roaring mob."

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Jan. 4 (CP)—Sportsmen have a grouse against, of all things, the grouse.

The huntin', shooting' and fishin' fellows are moaning about the shortage of the birds. Nobody knows why, although the sportsmen discuss many theories.

One is mass-suicide—airmen have reported seeing grouse flying out to sea. Another is that coccidiosis (a parasite disease) is rife among the young birds.

It can't be wartime bombing—or the Labor government—because the same shortage is reported from New York State, but whatever the reason it is held to be pretty poor behaviour on the part of the birds.

J. W. Fitzwilliam, secretary of the British Field Sports Society, says grouse now are so rare that many of the moors are practically "unlettable."

Is a footballer in order playing one boot on and the other off? It's a question before the Football Association, and the ruling body's decision is eagerly awaited.

The puzzler occurred in a game between Red Ditch and Moor Green when the Red Ditch centre-forward complained that one of his boots hurt him. With four minutes of the first half remaining, the referee allowed him to remove the offending boot but the opposing captain complained and the poor fellow had to put it back on and finish out the game well shod.

Worcestershire Football Association members went into a huddle about the incident and agreed to pass the poser to the ruling body.

Laws of the game cover football throughout the world. Teams in some countries play without—often against opponents who wear them—and conform with the rules.

Unless the food situation improves before 1948, Britain's Olympic athletes probably will be a scrawny bunch compared to the well-fed competitors from Canada and the United States.

The question of assisting the athletes, via honest-to-goodness steaks and fresh eggs, cropped up in the House of Commons but Dr. Edith Summerskill, parliamentary secretary to the food minister, said she "regretted" the ministry is not prepared to increase the rations of people competing in sporting events.

Now there's a rumor that the country's standard-bearers for the games will train in Eire, a land of plenty, especially in the food line.

WORLD WAR II OFFICIALLY ENDED IN UNITED STATES

Four Perish in Harlem Tenement Fire

Seven of Those Injured Said to Be Seriously Burned

Flash Fire Originates In Dumb Waiter Shaft

New York, Jan. 6 —(AP)—A flash fire originating in a dumbwaiter shaft of a Harlem tenement caused the death of four persons and injured eight others early today.

The dead and injured all were Negroes. Seven of those injured were said to be in serious condition.

The fire, which broke out shortly before 2 A.M. E.S.T., spread through the upper floors of the five-storey house in a few minutes and raged for more than an hour before firemen responding to three alarms, managed to extinguish it.

Firemen effected many spectacular rescues as members of three hook and ladder companies raised extension ladders to windows and fire escapes and aided more than 50 persons to safety.

The dead, all residents of the fifth floor of the building, were listed by police as Ellen Daniels 40, who died in a plunge from her apartment to the street; Ernest Cummings, 14, and two brothers, Richard McKenzie, 13, and William McKenzie, 15.

The blaze gutted the fifth floor, most of the fourth floor and sections of other floors near the dumb waiter shaft. More than 20 pieces of fire apparatus, five ambulances, a hospital disaster unit and a police emergency squad responded to the alarms.

Two Children Lose Their Lives During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Two children lost their lives during the weekend in Ontario, one by electrocution and one under the wheels of a bus, a Canadian Press survey of Eastern Canada fatalities showed.

On her way to Sunday School in Kitchener, seven-year-old Carol M. Schmitt waited with a group of her friends to board one of the city's new trolley busses. All the children climbed on but her. Unseen by the driver, she had slipped on the icy street, falling beneath the vehicle's wheels.

The bus started off and continued on its way, the driver unaware that he had ran over the child.

An attendant at a nearby service station, hearing Carol's screams, picked her up. She was rushed to the nearest doctor's office, but died before arrival.

In Toronto the same day, while playing in the back room of her home with some of her little playmates, three-year-old Caroline Hungerford touched a bare spot in the defective wiring of an electric lamp and was electrocuted. First warning of the tragedy came when one of her playmates called to the child's mother, "Caroline is lying on the radiator and won't talk."

Unaware that the child was dead, her British war-bride mother ran through snow-filled streets with Caroline in her arms, seeking medical aid. A physician found the child beyond help.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, January 6 (CP) — Synopsis: Along the north shore of Lake Ontario and Lake Erie it is overcast with intermittent light snow. A centre of low pressure, presently in Southern Manitoba is moving rapidly east-southeastward causing increasing cloudiness over the White River and James Bay regions. As the centre moves eastward snow will spread into these regions today to be followed on Tuesday with clearing and colder weather. Temperatures in Southern Ontario will moderate Monday night and Tuesday as the flow of air shifts to the southwest.

AIR FATALITIES TAKE 50 LIVES DURING WEEKEND

Commercial Air Services in China Almost Completely Suspended

(By The Canadian Press)

A black weekend in air transport was marked up today with crashes in both hemispheres leaving a toll of almost 50 dead and causing complete suspension of commercial air services in China.

Worst crash of the period involved a Chinese National Aviation Corporation transport which cost 42 lives. In the United States, three died when a Nationwide Air Transport Service passenger plane plunged into a wood and the crash of a small private aircraft brought death to two.

Another weekend mishap saw a successful landing of an American Airlines DC-3 which came down on a Long Island beach near New York after the gasoline supply was near exhaustion in four weather.

The Chinese Ministry of Communications ordered the grounding of all planes there for one week following a crash near Tsingtao. It followed by less than two weeks the disastrous Christmas Eve crashes in which 71 were killed near Shanghai.

But there was still no clue as to the cause of China's latest air disaster. The transport had been reported within 40 minutes of a landing at Tsingtao when it crashed.

Snowstorm Blamed

A freak snowstorm, accompanied by rain and sleet, was blamed for the crashes in the eastern United States. Sweeping down suddenly after dark last night, it covered an area estimated by the weather bureau at New York to extend as far as 250 miles from there.

During the storm, the Natimwiee air transport plane, carrying 25 persons, plunged into a wooded area, skimmed over a farm house, and then came to rest among the trees.

Passengers extinguished a fire after the left wing had been torn off and the nose crumpled. Dead were the co-pilot and two passengers.

In the other fatal crash, a young couple, en route to the Miami air show in their private plane, were killed in Scott County, Virginia.

The crash landing at Jones Beach on Long Island came when the plane had almost run out of fuel. The pilot dropped flares and managed to sight the beach during the heavy storm, making a successful "wheels-up" landing. He and his co-pilot were slightly injured but the stewardess and 13 passengers were unhurt.

TWO-THIRDS CUT IN POWER URGED AT HAMILTON

150 Steel Towers Are Down, Industry Is Slowly Recovering From Effects Storm

Hamilton, Jan. 6 — (CP)—Partial industrial paralysis still gripped Hamilton today but as linemen repaired a major break in the 60-cycle power transmission lines from the Decew Falls generating plant near St. Catharines, Ont., some plants resumed operation.

Two lines from Decew Falls were operating this forenoon but two others lay in a broken, twisted tangle. The hydro-electric system of Hamilton broadcast an appeal to reduce power consumption by two-thirds. It asked all stores and business places to put out signs, window lights and display lights.

T. Pinckard, general manager of the United Gas and Fuel Company, announced at noon that the fuel supply of manufactured gas to industrial and commercial users had been resumed.

Twenty-five cycle power from Niagara Falls, which serves most of Hamilton's domestic power consumers, was uninterrupted.

More than 150 steel towers on the 60-cycle lines between Decew Falls and Hamilton went down under the weight of the ice. Heavy wooden poles to replace them are being sought "all over the province," a hydro spokesman said.

The industrial shutdown, second in three days, was caused by failure of 60-cycle transmission lines from the Decew Falls plant at St. Catharines. Last night only one patched-up line was operating the other three lay in a broken, twisted tangle of snapped insulation and toppled, ice-sheathed poles.

Although Hamilton residences, which use 25-cycle power from Niagara Falls, were unaffected, the 60-cycle break halted heating and cooking in some Hamilton apartment houses and in several surrounding towns, including Burlington, Bronte and Oakville.

No cases of actual hardship were reported in these centres but many residents took their chilled bodies to neighbors' coal-burning homes after their electrically-driven oil burning furnaces and fuel blowers failed to operate. Some just took to their warm beds for the duration of the 17-hour break.

Householders Affected

Almost as serious as the power loss was the threatened exhaustion of the artificial gas supply, manufactured by use of 60-cycle power. A cut in this could mean hardship for householders unaffected by the electric shortage.

Hundreds of cautious linemen worked feverishly during the weekend along the ice-coated high-tension lines. Veteran linemen, who said the ice storm was the worst in their memory, reported scores of poles continued to fall over under their accumulation of ice in the Smithville area, 14 miles southeast of here. Toppling trees and ice three inches thick on the lines added to the normal hazards of the repair work.

Proper Balance Needed In Plans for Future And Expenses, Taxation

—ST. LAURENT

Montreal, Jan. 6 (CP).—External Affairs Minister St. Laurent called today for a proper balance in the choice between measures essential to Canada's future greatness and "the natural desire to cut down our expenses and lighten the burden of taxation on our people."

In an address prepared for delivery to The Canadian Club, he cited harnessing of the watershed of the Rockies and the building of legations in world capitals as two of the problems requiring "bold and perhaps even venturesome" decisions by men who "believe that Canada's destinies have barely commenced to be revealed."

Mr. St. Laurent said millions of tons of water run off yearly from the eastern slopes of the Rockies, if used for irrigation purposes in the eastern plains, would multiply several times the opportunities for productive agricultural investment and labor in the mid-western provinces.

Use of Waters.

"Farming communities south of our border are eyeing those waters with some feeling that if we do not see fit to make use of them, they should be allowed to do so," the minister continued.

Another question to be answered was whether the future Canada would require important diplomatic and trade representation in world capitals such as London, Washington, Paris, Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires.

"If it is," he said, "Canada should even now provide itself with permanent quarters in convenient locations in these capitals, though it may involve some rather large capital expenditure to do so.

"The required capital expenditure is apt to be larger as time goes on. We have one permanent establishment in Washington that was acquired a few years ago at a cost of half a million dollars and which could be duplicated today for less than three times that much. The same is proportionately true of Canada House on Trafalgar Square in London."

Must Not Be Left Undone.

In judging these questions, Mr. St. Laurent said, proper balance was necessary because, although things essential to future generations must not be left undone, it was also true that the future must be built "on the strength and capabilities of the Canadian people of our own day and generation."

"Do we, like the Fathers of Confederation, envisage an ever greater Canadian nation made up of an ever increasing number of Canadian citizens? If, like the Fathers of Confederation, the men who are in this day and generation responsible for the decisions which have to be made in the conduct of the public affairs of Canada believe that Canada's destinies have barely commenced to be revealed, the decisions they have made in the past are justified and will necessitate like bold and perhaps even venturesome decisions for the future."

The minister said that in welcoming the Canadian Citizenship Act, it must not be forgotten that citizenship involves acceptance of responsibilities as well as benefits.

Vital Developments.

It was vital, he said, that in developing future plans that the young people be remembered.

Mr. St. Laurent said that what divided Canadians of different languages was most often "lack of exact information regarding one another, stupid prejudices, and practical misunderstanding, unfortunately very widespread, of true principles of democracy."

Committee Chairmen Named At Inaugural Meeting of 1947 Council Held at City Hall

With a gallery of approximately ten former city councillors and officials present, the inaugural meeting of the 1947 city council was held Monday morning in the council chambers, as Mayor Frank Follwell was escorted to his chair by Aldermen Lattimer and Duffy, two new council members.

Highlighting the meeting was the Mayor's inaugural address in which he gave a resume of city business during the past year, and discussion prior to the passing of a recommendation for the purchase of two jeeps for operations as sidewalk snowplows. Following the reading by City Clerk Wilfred Holmes of the list of successful candidates for public office for the year, Rev. J. Grant Sparling, rector of Christ Church, conducted invocation.

Asks for Vote.

Naming of committee chairmen took up but a brief period of time during the meeting with committee recommendation passing without comment with the exception of the appointment of Alderman Harvey as chairman of public works. Alderman Hyde, public works chairman for 1946, asked the yeas and nays on the recommendation with the following result: Favoring the appointment of Alderman Harvey were Mayor Follwell and Aldermen Armstrong, Butler, Duffy, Follwell, Lattimer, Lazenby, Tice, Vanner and Wilbur. Opposed were Aldermen Allin, Chamberlain, Clarke and Hyde.

The recommendation for the purchase of the two jeeps for sidewalk snowplowing saw opposition from several of the members, particularly on the ground that two units would not be sufficient to properly clear city sidewalks. After discussion however, the motion for the purchase of the two units was passed by council.

"We don't need two jeeps, we need eight of them," stated Alderman Wilbur by way of opening discussion on the matter.

Favors Snow Shovelling

To this Alderman Hyde declared that there was now too much snow for jeeps to operate efficiently and moved that the motion be referred to committee for further discussion. "I'm inclined to believe we should revert to the old system of shovelling sidewalks," stated Mr. Hyde.

Mayor Follwell however declared that sidewalk plowing should be continued and that it would be a success if sufficient equipment were acquired. Forty five miles of sidewalk in the city could be plowed by jeeps and also they would be utilized for other work.

As the one to suggest sidewalk plowing in Belleville Alderman Butler stated that in his opinion the jeep would do the job, while Alderman Armstrong held that as a municipal project sidewalk plowing must be done right or not at all. "People in all parts of the city should be given service at approximately the same time," he said.

Suggests Quicker Action

Alderman Tice felt that the city should be zoned and that the plows should be put into operation immediately it started snowing. Alderman Follwell stated that Belleville streets were in much better condition than in many other centres, but held that sidewalks were in a "terrible" condition. Four jeeps were needed instead of two he stated.

According to the recommendation which passed the two jeeps with plows will be purchased with one of the present tractor plowing units to be turned in and an order for two additional Case tractors to be cancelled.

For the sixth successive year Alderman H. J. Clarke was named as chairman of executive, his appointment for the chairmanship being moved by Alderman Chamberlain and seconded by Alderman Butler. With the exception of one year Mr. Clarke has held the above chairmanship since his election to council.

Alderman William Harvey was given the public works chairmanship, succeeding Alderman Charles Hyde who had acted in this capacity during the past year. The appointment was moved by

Clear Weather Provides Chance To Clear Roads, Repair Wires

(By The Canadian Press)

Clear cold weather which today spread over all Ontario gave hydro repairmen a chance to mend high tension line breaks caused by a combination of ice and high winds in Southern Ontario and enabled Highways Department snowplows to continue their task of clearing drifts from main provincial highways.

"As far as we're concerned the worst appears over now," said a spokesman for the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission. "Power is back to a limited degree in the Hamilton area and in Burlington, Oakville and Grimsby and our repair gangs are pushing on to finish the job."

Ice which gathered on the power lines late last week still was on the wires when high winds sprang up yesterday in the Niagara Peninsula. Lines snapped and gave the parts of the western end of the peninsula their second power failure in three days.

The wind also tore down ice-encrusted power and telephone lines in the storm-ravaged Chatham area. Large gangs of linemen were out again today to make temporary repairs. Several sections of Chatham remained without power. Hydro officials reported trouble on a main hydro feeder line near St. Thomas and said power to Chatham industry might be cut off altogether for a time.

High winds caused damage to telephone and telegraph circuits in the Brantford district at the week-end but practically all communications services were in operation today.

ACCUSED ADMITS RUSNAK MURDER POLICE ALLEGE

Five Suicide Attempts Made By Chambers, All Nipped in Bud By Alert Guards

St. Catharines, Jan. 6. (CP)—Jittery Sidney George Chambers—the man who could not kill himself—waited under constant guard today to face hearing in the "furnace murder" of little nine-year-old Marion Rusnak who, police say, was slain and her body burned in a local cannery.

During the weekend Chambers was under 24-hour guard, both to prevent further suicide attempts and to nip in the bud any incipient mob violence.

Police, who charged the 34-year-old stationary engineer with murder after receiving what they said was his confession on Saturday, gave this bizarre account of Chambers' efforts to destroy himself:

He first slashed his wrists as he lay in bed in his dormitory room at the cannery; the blood congealed and stopped flowing.

Next he turned on the gas and lay down to die; he awoke, groggy, but still alive.

Six days ago he placed his head in a gas oven. This attempt led to his arrest after he was found and taken to hospital.

Fourth and fifth attempts, police said, were made Saturday when he tried to hang himself in his cell but was cut down by alert guards.

When first questioned by police in hospital, Chambers denied any knowledge of the Rusnak crime and said he had marital difficulties which prompted the suicide attempt. He said he was estranged from his wife and had an eight-year-old daughter in Toronto.

But Saturday investigators washed a pile of ashes in cannery furnace room and discovered a substance "not believed to be ashes." Police said the confession followed.

Chambers then appeared in court to hear himself charged and to be remanded until Jan. 10.

His alleged confession ended the most intensive manhunt in the history of St. Catharines. From the day Marion Rusnak disappeared two days before Christmas volunteer bands of citizens searched the district for clues that might solve her disappearance. It had been planned to drain the waters of the old Welland Canal Sunday to search for her body.

Today police said they are satisfied the ashes contain bones from the girl's body. They have been sent to Toronto for analysis by medico-legal experts of the Ontario Provincial Police.

Provincial Police Inspector Charles W. Wood, who helped break the case, took the ashes to Toronto and James S. Anderson of the St. Catharines force is continuing the investigation.

Crown Attorney E. H. Lancaster indicated that Chambers will not be arraigned for preliminary hearing for at least two or three weeks. He is due to appear in court Friday for a second remand on the charge of murder.

Hanging Ends Career of Self-Styled "God" Who Ruled Northwest Syria

Damascus, Syria, Jan. 6—(Reuters)—Suleiman Mershid's 23-year career as a self-styled "god" ended yesterday. He was hanged in the public square on charges of murder, robbery and pillage.

In wild and mountainous northwest Syria he had ruled as tyrant over 50,000 peasants. He had power of life and death. He collected taxes belonging to the Syrian government and used them to maintain a personal army of 1,200 well-armed men.

He became a "god" at 23. While watching his herds as an illiterate shepherd, he became ill with fever. When a search party found him he was gesticulating wildly and repeating the name of the "god" in whom the shepherds believed.

Religious sheiks of the tribe immediately pronounced him to be the incarnation of their "god" and advised visitors to bring gifts of gold.

In time he had innumerable wives and children. He controlled 1,300 square miles of Syrian territory. Foreign dignitaries visited him at his modern villa and three of his 13 sons attended the University of Beirut and acted as his diplomatic envoys.

When foreign troops evacuated Syria, his days were numbered. He rejected an opportunity to come to terms with the new independent government. He would not relinquish the lands he had stolen.

He was tried for treason, but that couldn't be proved. Last week a people's court found him guilty of murder, plunder and robbery and sentenced him to die. Thus ended his reign of terror over the simple Allawite tribesmen.

Would Ban Strikes Which Affect Economy of Nation

President Has No Wish To Pass Vindictive Laws

Washington, Jan. 6 —(AP)— President Truman today called on the Republican-controlled Congress to enact a four-point labor program designed to prevent strikes which stifle the nation's economy.

Appearing in person before a joint session of the Senate and House, Mr. Truman proposed:

1. Enactment of legislation outlawing the jurisdictional strike as "indefensible."
2. Enactment of further legislation prohibiting secondary boycotts which involve "unjustifiable objectives." He said boycotts which are intended to protect wage rates and working conditions should be distinguished from those furthering jurisdictional disputes.
3. Legislation providing machinery whereby unsettled disputes over existing collective bargaining agreements may be referred "by either party to final and binding arbitration" and extension of facilities within the labor department for assisting collective bargaining.
4. Provision by Congress for the appointment of a temporary joint commission to inquire into the entire field of labor-management relations and to make legislative recommendations not later than March 15.

Counsels Caution

Mr. Truman cautioned Congress against adoption of "punitive legislation" and added:

"We must not, in order to punish a few Labor leaders, pass vindictive laws which restrict the proper rights of the rank and file of labor. . ."

Republican leaders of the new Congress already have proposed a number of Labor bills ranging from re-enactment of the Case bill vetoed by President Truman last year to measures which would ban strikes in such essential industries as utilities and coal mining.

In his 6,000 word speech, the president recommended that:

Congress take early action to continue throughout the next fiscal year the war excise tax rates, which under the present law, expire next June 30.

Congress co-operate in a program of "stringent economy" which he said he practised in preparing the new fiscal budget.

The Senate ratify peace treaties for Italy, Bulgaria, Romania and Hungary after they are signed next month in Paris.

On this point, he said that further dispute and delay on the treaties would gravely jeopardize political stability in the countries concerned for many years. He added that the government did not regard parts as "completely satisfactory".

The policies which the United States pursued in negotiations on these treaties, Mr. Truman said, made it clear it would not consent to settlement "at the expense of principles we regard as vital to a just and enduring peace."

"Our policies will be the same during the forthcoming negotiations next month in Moscow on the German and Austrian treaties and during future conferences on the Japanese treaty."

Turning to atomic energy, the President reiterated that the United States will seek "no monopoly for ourselves or for any group of nations," but only safeguards insuring no nation "will be able to use this power for military purposes."

Mr. Truman placed upon Congress "responsibility for maintaining our armed forces at the strength necessary for our national safety" and renewed his

BARUCH RESIGNS AS U.S. ATOMIC ENERGY CHIEF

Warren R. Austin, Member of U. N. Security Council, Will Continue Work

Washington, Jan. 6 — (AP) — Warren R. Austin, United States member of the United Nations Security Council, headed here today for top-level conferences on atomic disarmament problems placed in his lap by Bernard M. Baruch's surprise resignation.

Baruch stepped down as United States atomic energy spokesman at U. N. headquarters with the two-fold explanation to President Truman that since the U.N.'s special atomic commission had adopted the United States plan for world-wide nuclear controls and that since the whole issue now moves into the security council as part of the disarmament task, Austin should take over.

The weekend change touched off immediate speculation about a possible softening of American tactics in negotiating with Russia on the atomic energy question.

Austin has made a reputation at New York U. N. sessions as an advocate and practitioner of cooperation with his Soviet colleagues, particularly the deputy foreign minister, Andrei Gromyko.

Baruch, on the contrary, often dealt bluntly with the Soviet and other commission members, stating an American plan or proposal and declaring they could take it or leave it.

Baruch insisted, against adamant Russian opposition, that the great powers in the security council should relinquish their rights to veto any punishment for infraction of atomic controls.

While Russia previously had accepted the principle that the proposed atomic development authority should operate on some majority basis, devoid of a veto, Gromyko battled stubbornly against any modification of the veto in the security council.

Apparently for this reason as much as any other, the 12-member atomic commission last week was able to muster a vote of only 10 to 0 for the American control plan before Russia and Poland abstained from voting.

The issue of a veto over punishment thus remains to be settled.

On another aspect of the atomic issue, some authorities are wondering whether Baruch, in his letter of resignation to the president, may have given an intimation of the deadline at which the United States may stop making atomic bombs.

Under the American plan, world atomic control would be established by a new international treaty which would lay down conditions under which the United States would slowly yield up its atomic information.

POLICE BLOTTER

Strange actions of a Montreal man outside of a local hotel resulted in his arrest on a vagrancy charge over the weekend. The night clerk of the hotel reported to police that some man had been seen running back and forth between the hotel and a nearby garage, at the same time waving his arms.

On arrival of police, the man gave his name as Joseph Bimbaum, of Montreal, and explained that while waiting for a bus he had become cold and had commenced shadow boxing and running to keep warm.

Clairvoyant Told Mrs. Rusnak Girl Was Dead

St. Catharines, Jan. 6. (CP)—Three days after 9-year-old Marion Rusnak disappeared on a Christmas errand, a clairvoyant told her mother that she was dead and described the circumstances under which she was slain.

Recalling the incident to newspapermen, Mrs. John Rusnak said she went to see Mrs. Sidney U. Barnes, of St. Catharines, a woman "with a gift for being able to see into the mysteries of many things," on the advice of a friend.

"My husband was angry because what she said upset me so much," sobbed Mrs. Rusnak. "She told me Marion was walking home when she was met. She said Marion was killed an hour after she was kidnapped. I don't know how she was able to do it but what she told me has come true."

Marion's father, John Rusnak, a St. Catharines real estate agent, said today, "I would be willing to spend $15,000 to see that justices come to the man who killed my daughter."

"I had given up hope after three or four days that she was alive but when the police officers told me what was done with her body, I was too dazed to think anything so horrible could happen to an innocent child. She was the best any man in this world could wish for. It's like a knife stabbing at my heart."

"She was a wonderful child and deserving of all we had for her," added his wife. "This could have happened to anyone's child, but, oh, why was it Marion. We had been getting on so happily and so successfully.'

Married in Fort Frances, 18 years ago, the Rusnaks operated a grocery store there for several years until taking over a larger business in Kenora. A childhood illness in Kenora had left Marion small for her age. The family moved to the Hamilton area three years ago.

Mayor Follwell Outlines Progressive Program For City in Inaugural Address

Following is the text of Mayor Follwell's address which he gave at the inaugural meeting of the council at the city hall today.

Members of Council and Citizens of Belleville:

The inaugural meeting of any municipal council is a momentous event. We look back on the accomplishments of the previous year and forward with faith and hope and greater things in the New Year. I look back with pride on the tasks accomplished by the 1946 Council and once again, as Chief Magistrate of the City, look ahead to making 1947 a better year for Belleville.

I take this opportunity of thanking you, the citizens of Belleville, for your wonderful support in the past and after two years of serving as your mayor I am deeply conscious of the duties and obligations that go with this office. I assure you that I will do my utmost to make Belleville one of the most progressive cities in our fair Dominion and in this I feel I can count on the full support of the entire Council.

Welcomes New Aldermen

I would like to take this opportunity of welcoming the new aldermen. Alderman Bruce Lattimer has already served the city as a member of the Industrial Commission and he knows full well the vital necessity of securing industries. Aldermen Vanner, Duffy and Lazenby are all veterans, Aldermen Lazenby and Vanner having served in the First Great War and Alderman Duffy in the Second World War. They bring with them the view point of fthe veterans and will assist us in no small measure to understand the problems of the returned men. Alderman Vanner has had extensive experience in service club work and is already familiar with a number of problems that confront this council. Alderman Lazenby has served as Chairman of the Belleville Re-habilitation Committee and in that capacity gave leadership and assistance to many returned men. Alderman Duffy is know from far and wide for his services with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and has been referred to on more than one occasion as Canada's most outstanding Soldier. So, to these men I say "welcome" from myself and my colleagues the council.

We deeply regret that we have lost from the Council four men who gave untiringly of their ability and time to Belleville; Aldermen Thompson, McDougall, Trudeau and Woodley. Their sipoprt for the past two years I have greatly appreciated and the success we have been able to achieve can be attributed in no small measure to their able assistance and co-operation. During my term of office, Alderman Thompson, who also served the City of Belleville as a former Mayor, gave me great encouragement and advice.

New Industries Established

As we look back on the year 1946, the first full year of peace, we find it to be a year of adjustment, preparation and planning. It is true we did get things done, but it was really a progressive year on planned activities for the future. The Industrial Commission, through the death of the late Owen Herity, the Industrial commissioner for the City of Belleville, was faced with the responsibility of meeting an even more aggressive idustrial program without the services of an industrial commissioner. The results the Industrial Commission achieved were outstanding. They brought to our city a great many new industries, some large, some comparatively small, and some, starting on a modest basis, but having excellent prospects for future development.

Local established industries have industrial building expansion programs now under way and others are planning further expansion during the coming months. The employee potential in the new industries now located and the prospective expansion program are tremendous. It is my opinion that, with the prospects the Industrial Commission has on hand and with the support of the tax payers who have made available money for the purchase of land for industrial purposes, 1947 should be one of the best years that Belleville has ever experienced in industrial growth. The securing of new industries is of prime importance so that every citizen will find ample work and means to support his own home in this fair city.

Lands Industrial Commission.

I would like to pay tribute to the work done by every member of the Industrial Commission, but particularly to ex-Alderman Lorne McDougall and Ex-Alderman Robert Pringle. These two men actually did most of the work for the Commission and looked after the correspondence.

Early in 1946 the Council engaged the services of Mr. Clifford Meadows of the firm of Meadows and Critoph to prepare and submit a 20-year plan for the City of Belleville. The city was very fortunate in securing Mr. Meadows, as he is the leading town planning engineer in Canada and is advisor to the Hon. Dana Porter, Minister of Planning and Development.

The council has received from Mr. Meadows a preliminary report and meetings have been held with the Townships of Sidney and Thurlow to discuss the Belleville planning area. This area has been approved by the township councils and extends approximately four miles north, east and west of the city. It has also been approved by the Minister of Planning and Development and now awaits only the appointment of the personnel of the Planning Board. I take this opportunity of recommending to the council that ex-Alderman Trudeau and ex-Alderman McDougall be appointed to this board to which they are well equipped to bring good sound judgment from experience in municipal affairs.

A great deal was accomplished toward improving recreational facilities in 1946. Through the generosity of Mr. Sandy Burrows, the Hume Arena was purchased by the city as a Memorial Civic Centre at a very reasonable cost. This can be made into a year-round recreational centre, whereby we can perpetuate the memory of those gallant sons of Belleville who gave their life to protect this Canada of ours, that we might meet here today in our free and democratic way of life. The council has already ordered an artificial ice plant to be installed in the Memorial Centre. Some of the units of this plant are now on hand, but due to strikes and shortages of materials it is not expected that the ice plant will be completed until some time later in the year.

In 1946 the Parks Board was able to improve the parks and to establish another playground at small cost. This new playground is situated on St. Paul Street and is completely equipped and supervised. A new building was constructed at the Agricultural Park and plans and orders placed for a flood lighting system for night games. The Parks Board has also contracted for a new type steel fence around the recreation park. This will be put up in 1947 and under the revised plan for laying out this park the public will have easy access to the grass area.

Good Relations With County.

During the past year we received the heartiest co-operation from Hastings County Council. The City of Belleville had the opportunity of entertaining the County Council and county officials while they were meeting in Belleville at their summer session. This proved most advantageous in bringing together the two governing bodies to discuss mutual problems. I would recommend to our 1947 council that we again invite the councillors and officials of the County of Hastings to be present with us at a banquet in their honor at their mid-summer sessions and I suggest that this be made an annual affair. I would like to pay tribute to Warden Jim Nickle and to County Clerk Erie Denyes for their fine co-operation. Through the combined efforts of the city and county we were able to make further progress in our request to the Ontario Government for a complete survey of the Moira River in regard to flood conditions.

The joint committee set up in Hastings County for the purpose of interviewing the Minister of Planning and Development regarding the Moira River Survey has been assured by him that it will be the first one done by the Ontario Government in 1947.

Last year through the efforts and assistance of the two local provincial members of parliament, Mr. Roscoe Robson and Mr. Fred Wilson, pressure was brought to bear on the Government to complete the highway from Madoc to Millbridge so that the people at the northern end of the county would be able to travel to Belleville quickly and safely. This road has not been completed, but a good start has been made on it. I would like to thank these two members of parliament for East and West Hastings on behalf of the citizens of Belleville, and particularly the merchants, for what they have accomplished on this project and to urge them to carry it through to completion.

New Dock Underway

A Special Water Front and Harbor Committee met the Dominion Government engineers in 1946 and laid before them plans for harbor and water front improvements. Under the Harbor Commission, and at no cost to the City of Belleville, dredging has already been done for the dock extension and it is expected that construction of this extension will be undertaken during 1947.

The Public Utilities Commission agreed last year to supply a complete, new and modern street lighting system for Front Street and the intersecting business streets. The lighting units are now on order and it is expected they will be delivered and installed in 1947. The cost of this improvement will be paid for by the Public Utilities Commission. Additional street lights will also be placed throughout the city as the lighting units become available.

The Council of 1946 had prepared and submitted to the electors plans for the construction of an incinerator. The by-law for this construction was approved by the rate payers and the Council, acting quickly in this matter, have retained the engineering firm of Meadows and Critoph to call for tenders for the immediate construction. It is hoped that this incinerator will be completed and in operation by the middle of the year.

Belleville, like all other municipalities in the country, has been faced with a housing problem, and has done its best to try to solve it. We are using every available building, including the City Hall auditorium and the Police Station, for temporary accommodation. We have investigated every possible means of securing houses but we find that even in spite of the unprecedented program of home building in the city we are still far short of accommodation for all the families requiring houses. The building permits issued in 1946 were the highest in the history of Belleville, but there still exists the need for some further program for the construction of houses, particularly for the veterans.

During the past year we had standing committees trying to solve this acute problem and I would suggest to this year's council that we again set up a special housing committee which would include in its personnel Aldermen Lazenby and Duffy, who are very familiar with the needs of the veterans. I have already invited a representative of Schofield Insurance Company to be present at our next regular meeting to bring us information on this subject and to discuss with us the Integrated Housing Plan. This company believes it can build at least seventy-five houses under this plan if they have the co-operation of the Belleville builders.

Last winter we inaugurated a system of sidewalk snow cleaning. We found that we needed more equipment and unfortunately, due to strikes, we were unable to procure machines which had been ordered. The system seems to be a good one if we had sufficient snow plows. I understand that there will be a recommendation before Council today for the purchase of additional motorized equipment. We have already purchased and put into use road plow and scraper blade equipment which should keep the roads in fairly good condition. We must all realize that to do a job satisfactorily we must have first class equipment ready to go into action at a moment's notice.

The Board of Health recommended to Council some time ago the establishment of a health Unit and the City Council approved this recommendation. The Ontario Government will be asked to establish this health unit by a joint recommendation from the City of Belleville and the County of Hastings, if this is approved by the County Council.

It is my opinion that a competent social service worker would be a great asset to the City of Belleville. At the present time there appears to be a great deal of over-lapping in the work of the municipality and the service clubs. To eliminate this and to secure complete picture of the whole situation, a social service survey should be made immediately. I am confident that the service clubs in the City of Belleville will be most anxious to have this survey made and will agree to sharing the cost as it will ultimately save them money, as well as provide a better means of planned assistance to those in need of same.

Municipal Holiday.

Another matter of importance is the organizing and planning of a day, to be named a municipal holiday, on which the citizens of Belleville will give heartfelt thanks to God for the gifts of victory and peace and pay tribute to the sons and daughters who served in the Second Great War. We have already designated July 14 as a suitable date. The council has been appointed a committee of the whole to make this a success. I earnestly invite all clubs, organizations and citizens in general to take part in this project. It is hoped that Governor-General Sir Harold Alexander of Tunis will be present at that time to take part in this memorable event.

It has been customary in the past to hold at regular intervals an Old Home Week. This was discontinued for some time, but I would recommend that the council give consideration to holding an Old Home Week in 1947 in conjunction with the day above mentioned, July 14, Veterans' Day.

It is a great pleasure for me to welcome to Belleville, as one of its new and valuable acquisitions, Radio Station CJBQ. To those responsible for the establishment and maintenance of this station go the thanks of the citizens of Belleville. This city receives daily publicity through the facilities of Station CJBQ that is most important and places it amongst the most progressive cities in the Dominion. The manager of the station has offered its facilities to the mayor and council to bring to you citizens of Belleville a report of the municipal administration each week. It is hoped that this program will be inaugurated early in the new year.

Expresses Appreciation.

I would like to take this opportunity of thanking the members of every board and commission who served with me in 1946. They have all definitely contributed to the progress of the municipality in which we live. I wish also to thank every official and employee of the corporation for their co-operation and assistance during the past year. They all have the interests of our city at heart and are constantly striving to make of it a bigger and better Belleville.

Through the Rev. Grant Sparling the council has today asked Divine blessing and guidance in managing the city's affairs and I feel sure that we as councillors and leaders in our community will fulfill our duties to the best of our abilities if we abide by the precepts that instill in us respect for the rights of every individual and citizen.

I feel confident that, as your chief magistrate, I can count on the unqualified support of every citizen to help maintain the reputation we have established far and wide of . . . "Beautiful Belleville, the Friendliest City in Canada".

Citizens Asked To Clear Off Fire Hydrants

Citizens who reside near fire hydrants can render a very important service at this time of deep snow if they will clear off the snow about these so that in the event of fire no time would be lost through the firemen having to hunt for the hydrants.

Fire Chief Lynch stated today that one-third to one-half of the hydrants are covered or nearly covered by snow, and citizens' help in this regard would be greatly appreciated.

Over nine hundred head of choice Hastings County cattle found their way into United States herds during 1947, Department of Agriculture officials here announced today. Prices were exceptionally good and ranged at a much higher level than those offered by Canadian buyers. The greater majority of the cattle were of the dairy type and were purchased to bolster milch herds of dairy farmers in northern New York State.

In addition to this number, it is understood that several hundred head were also acquired by American buyers from herds in Prince Edward, Northumberland and Durham and other surrounding counties.

Hotels to Seek Change in Hours From L.C.B.

At a meeting of hotel representatives in the zone extending from Brockville to Portsmouth and as far north as Chalk River, it was decided to lodge a formal protest with the Liquor Control Board on the matter of the new schedule of hours for beverage rooms.

The protest will ask that beverage rooms be opened at 10:30 a.m. instead of 12 o'clock noon and closed at 10:30 p.m. instead of midnight. The meeting was held under the chairmanship of Herbert Johnson, president of the district hotel association.

Two hotel owners of this city, interviewed this morning, stated that they were in favor of such a change.

Last Year's Apple Crop Larger Than Estimated

While official figures are not yet available, Department of Agriculture, Fruit and Vegetable Division, officials here today stated that the annual crop of apples in the district will likely exceed earlier estimates by a substantial figure.

Late Autumn rains resulted in apples "filling out" to larger sizes than were expected.

British Columbia fruit has been sold out completely while there are plenty of Ontario apples still awaiting a buyer, or are being held pending change in prices. It is understood that processing companies which make pie-filler from certain quality apples are paying good prices for stock.

WAS COACHMAN FOR MARQUIS 70 YEARS AGO

Ottawa Man Came From England to Drive Governor-General of Canada Last Century

Ottawa, Jan. 6 (CP).—Nearly 70 years ago Harry Bristow came to Canada as coachman for the Marquis of Lorne, governor-general of Canada before the turn of the century. Today at 91 this lively little white-haired man still takes his two-mile walk every afternoon, and has only just begun complaining of a "little nearsightedness".

Harry Bristow has seen Queen Victoria driving a donkey-cart; he has lived in palaces and in beautiful mansions in the country, travelling to London 'for the season'. In 1891 he was coachman at the funeral of Canada's first prime minister, Sir John A. Macdonald.

Of the Marquis of Lorne, he says: "He was an awfully nice gentleman who liked a bit of fun. . . . I remember once he had been given a pair of moose by the lieutenant-governor of Manitoba. One day he brought some visitors to show them the moose . . . he turned to me and asked: 'Bristow, do you think you could break these moose to harness?'"

Mr. Bristow described how he worked on the moose for weeks, but finally broke them. "We drove them everywhere . . . in those days it was quite usual to see the two moose drawing a carriage."

Once following a dinner-party the marquis came down to the stables and asked Mr. Bristow whether he "thought I could get one of the moose into the drawing room."

"So I brought the moose in the front door, up the stairs and into the drawing-room," recalled the former coachman. "Those guests certainly were surprised."

When the Maruqis of Lorne and Princess Louise returned to England in 1883, Mr. Bristow and his wife, who died six years ago—the year before their diamond wedding anniversary — accompanied them to Kensington Palace.

However the couple eventually returned to Ottawa where Mr. Bristow operated a cab stand until the coming of the automobile forced him out of business.

Mr. Bristow never has owned an automobile, nor does he like them. "I've driven horses all my life and never had an accident," he said. "But nowadays you can't pick up a paper without reading about an automobile accident."

HE LOST A BET!

James C. Bradley of Detroit, was sure he was to be father of a boy, so positive in fact that he bet an army buddy to that effect. He knows now that nothing in life is certain but death and taxes, as the seers have oft said. The newcomer was a girl. Bradley said he would push an English walnut one city block with his nose if he lost. Here the nose is being applied to the nut. Bradley paid off and his conscience is clear.

INTENSE "BATTLE" OPENS FOR AUSSIE AIRLINE BUSINESS

Government - Operated Airways Competes With Privately - Owned Firms in All Phases of Service

By J. D. HOLDSWORTH
(C. P. Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, Jan. 4 (CP)—A "battle" for passengers and freight has developed between Australia's first government-operated airline, Trans-Australia Airways, and privately operated internal airlines, biggest of which is Australian National Airways.

Trans-Australia Airways, which started to function recently, fired the first shot by reducing fares on the Sydney-Melbourne and Sydney-Brisbane routes below those charged by private operators.

In full page newspaper advertisements, T.A.A. announced "one fare for all—the lowest consistent with economical operation." The advertisements also proclaimed that T.A.A. was introducing hot breakfasts to Australian airlines.

Australian National Airways, which operates the Sydney-Vancouver service in addition to its internal services, announced moves designed to counter those made by T.A.A. The company announced it would discard its passenger priority system together with the practice of weighing-in passengers before departure on a flight.

A.N.A. also announced introduction of a scheme to insure passengers for a maximum of $6,000 against death or injury in air accidents.

Next move in the battle was over staff. A.N.A.'s managing director, Captain Ivan Holyman, charged T.A.A. was "poaching" A.N.A. members instead of following usual government procedure of calling for applications for vacancies, and has taken on 10 of A.N.A.'s staff of 3,000.

Chairman of the government's National Airlines Commission, A. W. Soles, denied Captain Holyman's allegations.

The fight has moved on to airmail contracts. A.N.A. holds government airmail contracts, which expire April 30, 1947, and T.A.A. has announced it will take over the contracts then.

Deserted Wives In S. Africa May Obtain Divorces

Pretoria, South Africa, Jan. 4 (CP) — South African wives whose husbands are living in Britain now may obtain divorce decrees in the South African courts as well as orders for the restitution of conjugal rights and decrees of nullity.

An official statement says that the governor-general now is satisfied that adequate provision is made by the law of the United Kingdom for the recognition by British courts of such decrees and orders made in the Union by virtue of the Matrimonial Causes Jurisdiction Act of 1945.

This act provides that where the parties have separated before having settled in the country of the husband's domicile the wife can bring an action in the South African Supreme Court provided she was domiciled in the Union, immediately before her marriage.

The operation of the act is retroactive to September 6, 1939—the date of the Union's entry into war—and is designed to lessen the suffering of wives whose husband's deserted them during the war and left for the country of their domicile.

Air Cruise Begun By Light Planes

Toronto, Jan. 6 — (CP) — Five small planes took off from here today on the first leg of an airplane migration to Miami, Fla. Along the way they will be joined by approximately 4,000 other planes from all parts of the United States.

It is the first time in eight years the air cruise has been held. It is designed to show the practibility of the light airplane.

FOR REDUCING DIETS

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

H. W. Flemming, chief engineer, Grand Trunk Western Lines, Canadian National Railways, Detroit, who has played an important part in many of the big construction projects on the C.N.R. system during his 38-year railway-engineering career, has been appointed assistant chief engineer of the system at Montreal. This was announced here today by B. Wheelwright, chief engineer.

A native of Liverpool, N.S., Mr. Flemming was educated in Halifax public schools, at St. Andrew's College, Toronto, and at Dalhousie University, Halifax, from which he graduated with a B.Sc. degree in 1909. He entered the C.N.R. in the same year as a rodman at Colborne, Ont., and held the successive posts of transitman, instrumentman, resident engineer, assistant engineer, inspecting engineer, division engineer, assistant district engineer and district engineer at St. Prime, Hornepayne, Hamilton, Ottawa, Montreal and North Bay until his promotion to engineer, maintenance of way, Central Region, Toronto, in 1945. Mr. Flemming became chief engineer, G.T.W., in 1946.

Mr. George N. Williams, for a number of years Chief Provincial Architect and latterly Acting Deputy Minister of Public Works, has been appointed as of January 1st, to the combined post of Deputy Minister of Public Works and Chief Architect. As Deputy Minister he succeeds the late R. A. McCallister who died Aug. 1st, 1946.

Board Reserves Judgment On Freight Rates

Ottawa, Jan. 6 —(CP)—The Board of Transport commissioners had before it today the arguments of two Canadian railways and seven provinces on a provincial request for fuller information on the railway's application for a general 30 per cent boost in freight rates.

Judgement on the dispute was indefinitely reserved Saturday after two days of argument. Actual hearing of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways' application for a freight rate increase will open Feb. 1, but the provinces have been seeking more particulars before that date. Chief Commissioner J.A. Cross promised a decision "as speedily as possible."

Saturday's hearing brought a stern charge from Col. J.J. Ralston, counsel for the Maritimes, that the provinces were being given the "brush-off" in their effort to get information on which to base their case. The railways were also criticized by C. H. Locke, British Columbia Counsel and L. A. Forsyth, acting for the Prairie Provinces.

Railway representatives said they had no intention of withholding eveidence relevant to the hearing. They said some of the requested data was available, some on public record and more would be brought out by witnesses at the hearing.

Col. Ralston said it was "preposterous" for the C. N. R. and C. P. R. to suggest that information should wait until officials were in the witness box.

The railway solicitors rejected the claim of the Maritimes and British Columbia that the present inquiry should develop into a general investigation of Canada's whole rate structure.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By The Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Jan. 6 — (CP) — Informed quarters believe it likely that the government already has decided that it will be necessary to pay prairie farmers an acreage bonus on growing barley if a much-needed increase in the production of grains for the feeding of livestock is to be brought about.

The question of such a payment first was brought up at the Dominion-Provincial Agricultural Conference early in December when delegates, after hearing of the great need for feed grains, suggested prairie farmers be paid a bonus of $5 for every acre of land they seeded to barley.

The thought behind this proposal was that a payment of this size would make barley growing as profitable an enterprise as the production of wheat and thus would result in more farmers turning to feed grain.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner promised to place the suggestion before the federal cabinet and this step is believed already to have been taken, with the government conceding that some such payment was necessary.

It is not thought the bonus figure will be decided until after experts have compiled figures necessary to show just how much will be needed to turn the farmers from wheat to barley.

It is considered likely that the payment will be somewhere between $4 and $5 an acre.

Aim behind the drive for more barley is the stimulation of hog production, which has been falling steadily since 1944 and threatens to endanger Canada's chances of retaining Britain's post-war bacon market.

Right now, Canada is falling far short of meeting British requirements, so far short, in fact, that Britain has had to reduce her weekly bacon ration from three to two ounces weekly. Even during war time the British bacon ration never fell below four ounces weekly.

One step in the direction of promoting hog production already has been taken with last week's announcement that the price Britain will pay for Canadian hogs has been boosted from $24 to $29 a hundredweight, effective when this year's production comes to market next September.

The money for this increase, however, comes out of Britain's pocket and therefore is not primarily a Canadian move.

Chances are Canada's spy trials spread over into a second year. February 15 will be the first anniversary of the announcement by Prime Minister Mackenzie King that a probe was under way into efforts by a foreign power to gather information illegally in Canada.

Only four of the 18 cases remain to face the courts, three in Ottawa and one in Montreal. Three of them are actual trials, the other — that of Dr. Henry Harris, Toronto optometrist — is a preliminary hearing which may or may not end in a trial. All four cases, at any rate, are due to start rolling this month, but they may or may not be finished before the anniversary date.

Meanwhile it is virtually certain that some of the numerous appeals against convictions will not be resolved before that time.

Y.W.C.A. STAFFERS ENTER UNIVERSITY

"Y" Secretaries Take Up Social Studies in United States

Toronto, Jan. 6 (CP). — Two staff members of the National Council of the Y.W.C.A. have left their posts for university courses in the United States. They are Miss Margaret Hockin, four years executive secretary of the farm service force department; and Miss Betty Quiggin, former secretary for senior club activities of the program department.

Miss Hockin now is attending Cornell University where she is studying for her doctor of philosophy degree in family life, counselling and group work. She is also taking residence responsibility at the new Clare Dixon Hall of the university.

Miss Quiggin is working for her master's degree in group work at the school of applied social sciences, Western Reserve University, Cleveland. Like Miss Hockin, she too has taken on residence duty, acting as assistant house mother in one of the residences. Miss Quiggin will be in university for two years.

Civilians Ignore Training Appeal

Hamburg, Germany, Jan. 6 (Reuters).—Hundreds of civilian employees of the Control Commission in Germany have ignored a circular asking them to volunteer for training in the use of weapons ranging from rifles to armored cars.

Typical of their attitude is that of one officer, from Reading, Berkshire, who said: "I see no reason why I should begin my Home Guard days all over again.

"I have a wife and child here and although Hamburg is regarded as a place where trouble over food might occur I am sure the Control Commission has made a lot of fuss over nothing."

Little Benny's Note Book

I had a swell rubber band, being pritty near wide enough to make a sling shot out of if I had the right shape stick, and today in school I was stretching it to see how long it would stretch, and Puds Simkins and Artie Bromfield were looking around from their desks watching me and probably wishing it was theirs, and I pulled it out exter long just to give them something werth watching, and just then it got away from me and disappeered, and Miss Kitty said, Well, it seems I have an unexpected visiter on my desk in the shape of a nice rubber band.

Me thinking, Heck, good night, gosh shang the luck, and Miss Kitty said, I'm very pleased and flattered and I'm sure I can put it to a good use, but I don't like to except gifts from unknown admirers, so the entire class will remain after school unless my generous benefacter reveels himself.

Meening who shot it, and Puds and Artie started to look at me again to see what I would do, and pritty soon the whole class was looking at me just out of imitation and I thought, Heck, I might as well admit it of my own free will before she asks me.

And I waved my hand and Miss Kitty said, Benny, does this rubber band belong to you?

Maybe it might I said. I mean I had one and the last I saw it, it was just leeving, but I didn't see where it landed. I could probably idennify it if I saw it, I said, and Miss Kitty said, Then come up and examine it closely by all means.

Which I did, saying, It certainly looks like it, and Miss Kitty said, Then you may remain and continue to inspect it for 15 minutes after the class is dismissed, and if the idennification is compleet by that time, you may have it back without even signing a reseat for it.

Making me feel partly lucky.

Christmas-Time Pardons Granted To Large Number

Ottawa, Jan. 6—(CP)—Christmas-time pardons were granted to many members of the Canadian armed forces serving terms for wartime offences, it was learned today.

A defence department spokesman disclosed the pardons had been granted on the grounds of extenuating wartime circumstances and good behavior since the servicemen were imprisoned.

Number of men freed in time for the Christmas season was not disclosed.

Only a "very few" Canadian servicemen now are in detention, the official said. Some are in civilian penitentiaries while others are in the few remaining army detention barracks, which serve as detaining quarters for members of all three of the forces.

There is no intention, he said, of revising the Canadian court martial system, as has been decided on by the United States Navy. In this country, individual cases are under constant review, but no overhauling of the system generally is in prospect.

Severe Test

Drivers of commercial vehicles and cars, pedestrians, highway and road officials, businessmen, consumers, workers, in every city, town, hamlet and the wide countryside felt the severe test which the series of snowfalls last week forced upon road communications and the various public services and the food and fuel deliveries. Engineering departments had their worries, police had their cares increased and everyone was more or less affected. Highway and rural roads became dangerous and streets became sources of menace in the increased dangers of collision and other forms of accident. Everywhere was snow of inestimable weight. The streets had to be made passable so that the life of the country and every section of it might go on interrupted as little as it was possible to make it.

Higher Voting Percentage

At the time of the municipal election here and in other places some weeks ago, it was noted that in Belleville and elsewhere there was a good turnout of voters, who showed their interest in the municipal government that is to be in power.

In other communities holding elections on New Year's Day there was a larger percentage of voters using the franchise than for some time. In Owen Sound 3,192 voters out of a total of 8,399 cast ballots.

Owen Sound Sun Times noting the record polling says that the government of that city has steadily become a heavier task, its responsibilities increased many fold in recent years, especially since the end of the war. The Sun Times gives much of the credit for the heavy voting to the concerted efforts on the part of various civic bodies, all of which carried on an intensive advertising campaign through the press, over the radio and by other means "drawing attention of the voters to both their duty and their privilege of exercising their franchise as citizens of a democratic nation." It is pointed out that "large numbers of older people turned out to the polls as well as the younger citizens."

There is a strong impetus which should inspire voters to use their ballots, at this time especially, as people everywhere cannot but feel the urge of progress which is a natural consequence of the end of the war which so long required the devoted service of those under arms and those in other positions and those on the home front. This sense of freedom which comes after war's restraint and urgency brings new individuals to the front, a fact that accounts for deeper interest and the sense of great achievements waiting ahead.

Wide Appeal To Tourists

Importance of tourist trade is recognized by every country and Canada during November was able to show an upturn of very great proportions in entry of American tourist cars. The touring industry has rich rewards for the nation which brings over its borders a large volume of traffic. The November figures indicate also the value of winter attractions.

Tourist permit entries for all Canada totalled 68,497 which sets a new record for the eleventh month of the year. There were 270,330 cars on short stay, for an increase of 38.5 per cent over the same month in the year before.

The total of motorcars which entered Canada to the end of November for a long stay was up over three quarters to reach nearly one and half million cars. The aggregate of long and short stay entries was 5,077,000 cars, an increase of 38 per cent over 1945 figures.

Nations of Europe are bidding for the beginning of the revival of touring and travelling by people who live in the Americas and in other countries. A start is being made this year which the European lands naturally hope to see grow to vast proportions in coming years.

The world is alert to the opportunities of this travel trade and there will everywhere be every effort to build up the appeal and attraction of countries to get their share of this business.

So Much Snow

Where did all the snow come from? someone might ask as he looked over the park on the west side of the Moira River south of the lower bridge. This spot has taken on an unusual aspect during the past week. Instead of a wintry plain it is now the dumping ground of hundreds upon hundreds of tons of snow, taken from Front and Bridge Streets where it might have caused traffic blockade and added the dangers of accidents. Hour after hour and day after day countless loads of snow have been carried by trucks to this park where the piles of snow look like miniature mountains in serried ranks. These dumpings have not only found place on the park but have spread over the bank to rest on the ice of the river.

The accessibility of the park, a short distance from Front Street, has meant short hauls and speeded up the work of snow clearance which created a pressing problem to be solved only by removal of the blanket of white precipitation.

Tree Wind-Breaks

With the demand for more and more snowplowing both on the highways and other less travelled country roads, the matter of snow fencing has become an increasingly important one says Owen Sound Sun Times. This type of protection against snow drifting is estimated at $125 a mile, with a 15 year replacement period. In a number of sections in that area a plan of tree wind breaks, has been adopted, and in some cases the trees have already grown to the extent where they are performing the job in a splendid manner.

Collingwood Township council recently adopted the plan. Where such protection is deemed advisable, the farmers are asked to donate a strip of land which the township will fence against stock and plant in trees. These strips will not only give the winter protection aimed at, but will also add to the summer beauty of the district and give reforestation a further boost.

Drifting On The Pacific

To test the possibility that the modern Polynesians are descended not from nomadic Asiatics but from venturesome South Americans, six Norwegians propose to drift across the Pacific on a raft, says The New York Sun. Their craft, made of balsa wood, is to be 25 feet long, and it will be packed with radio equipment, food, 350 gallons of water and some devices developed during and since the war to serve aviators forced down at sea. But of the things which might aid navigation, sails, oars or an outboard motor, there will be none. The adventurers propose to take to sea at Ilo, Peru, and let the Pacific currents take them where they will aided by such windage as their presence on the raft provides.

Their quest is not for the riches of the Indies toward which they expect to drift, but rather for support of an anthropological theory held, among others, by their leader, Thor Heyerdahl. He says that Inca legends tell of a race of white folk, bearded and with blue eyes, who moved down to the coast from their native Andes and eventually disappeared into the western ocean. They were the Kon Tiki, the folk of Tiki, the sun god. Polynesian legends similarly talk of the blue-eyed, bearded white folk who came with the rising sun to settle the islands and give them a religion whose sun god is Tiki. Even if there were not other links in the similarity of language and monuments, Heyerdahl considers it incredible that creators of legends on opposite sides of the Pacific merely by coincidence should have hit on the same type of folk with the same sort of religion. He is certain that currents and winds made a trail for the Kon-Tiki and that if he places himself completely at the disposal of wind and wave he and his companions in about 140 days will find themselves among the Polynesians. The motives of these modern Norsemen would have appeared strange to their Viking ancestors, but the latter would have paid high tribute to their spirit of adventure in undertaking such a voyage.

SURE SIGN

When she smiles upon your Mother
And says pretty words to Dad;
When she says your younger brother
Is a most attractive lad;
And she asks about his schooling
And the work he plans to do,
That young lady isn't fooling—
She has set her cap for you.

When she watches Mother knitting
In a most attentive way,
Or she goes where Dad is sitting,
Something flattering to say;
When her speech is fairly drooling
Of the syrup-laden kind,
That young lady isn't fooling—
She has marriage on her mind.

When the impulse seems to strike her
To start wondering, now and then,
If your Dad and Mother like her,
Let me tell you once again:
In one basket she is pooling
All her eggs, as maidens do;
That young lady isn't fooling—
She has set her cap for you.

The princely Hotel Quinte, the pride of our citizens and the theme of praise of everyone who entered its hospitable doors was destroyed by fire during the night of Jan. 4th., and early morning of Jan. 5th. The fire was detected first by a smell of smoke on the second floor near the elevator landing. It seemed to be between the floors. The fire alarm was sent in at 9.48 o'clock and the firemen arrived promptly. It was soon apparent that the fire had worked its way under the flooring from room to room and was ready to burst out in different places simultaneously which it appears to have done. The building was completely gutted, only the walls standing the following morning. Electric wiring is supposed to have been the cause of the fire. By 10.30 o'clock p.m. a tremendous crowd had gathered at the scene and Bridge Street, the post office square and Pinnacle Street were packed with spectators. Hotel Quinte was first opened on Feb. 28th, 1890, with Charles P. Hunter as the first manager. J. Y. Jenkins assumed the management of the hotel on May 1st, seven years ago. The hotel had a staff of forty. The syndicate which built the hotel was composed of H. Corby, W. H. Biggar, U. E. Thompson, Thomas Ritchie, John Bell, D. M. Waters and Col. S. S. Lazier.

Palmyra Garrison Spurns Rescue As Waves Sweep Islets

By DOUGLAS LOVELACE

Honolulu, Jan. 6 —(AP)— Low-lying Palmyra atoll's little garrison of Americans, munching sandwiches as the storm-tossed South Pacific swirled around their feet, declined proffered rescue as "not needed," Navy emergency centres here reported last night.

And today the United States Navy reported "the immediate danger past and the situation under control," with the tides subsiding.

The vast storm that flooded their six-foot-high islets battered earlier at waterfront installations and buildings in Hawaii, 1,000 miles to the north, and stirred rumors of deaths in Alaska before it faded into the Arctic. In all, it swept across more than 2,000,000 square miles of the Pacific, but left no confirmed casualties.

Alaskan department army headquarters at Anchorage said last night no lives were lost and no great damage was done in Alaska or the Aleutians. At Nome, blacked out briefly by power-line breakage, the army said it could not confirm rumored deaths of several persons in the Hooper Bay area 300 miles to the south.

There were no fresh reports of destruction in Hawaii, where smashing waves did hundreds of dollars damage Saturday.

Sweep Whole Island

Urgent distress messages crackled from Palmyra's radio before dawn yesterday saying heavy seas were sweeping the island and threatening its personnel.

"Palmyra being covered with water," the first flash said; "Request ship stand by to evacuate." But within 15 minutes, it reported: "Back on duty; water receded a little," and soon afterward added: "Cancel everything."

Three ships and sufficient planes to evacuate the entire garrison were nevertheless rushed toward the atoll as emergency centres were placed on the alert and a period of tense silent waiting began.

By evening, contact with Palmyra's long-silent radio was re-established and the Navy reported the first rescue plane had arrived but was "not needed." There was no report of the fresh inundations which had been feared.

Europe Suffers Under Cold Wave

London, Jan. 6 —(AP)— Frigid blasts spread a wide belt of cold over Europe today causing death and suffering and a heavy drain on short fuel stocks.

Suffering was intense in Berlin, where a bitter east wind sent the temperature plunging to two below zero. The city statistics bureau said it was the coldest winter since 1940-41.

Snow—the first since 1942—blanketed Rome. Children, many of them poorly clad for such weather, sledded down the seven hills of the eternal city.

A family of seven froze to death at Cividale, in northern Italy.

Suburban London, with a low of 25 degrees, was the coldest spot in Britain. Snow fell throughout England and Wales as electric companies warned householders of impending five and 10 per cent cuts in current. Many British homes are heated solely by electricity.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

MORBID FEAR OF DENTISTRY

I've made an appointment for you with your dentist for 10 a.m. Thursday, Lalla telephoned. Before I could think of anything to offer as an excuse she went on to say the dentist suggested that I give him about 1 1-2 hours—he expected to extract several molars that didn't show up too well in the X-ray films. Lalla usually rubs it in too hard that way.

In the mail, about the same time, came this letter from the son of a dentist.

Although I am the son of a dentist I've always felt an unreasonable fear of the dental chair. Recent unpleasant complications have developed this fear into an unmistakable complex. I remember you told of something a physician can prescribe that will make a patient indifferent and unafraid of an ordeal in the dental chair.

Please give me further details.

(A. W. R.)

It would seem to be a phobia rather than a complex. A phobia is an unreasonable fear, as you call it, a morbid or irrational or insane dread, as the best medical dictionary defines it, an irrational, persistent fear, as N. Webster says.

The something I said the physician or dentist might give a patient an hour or two before operation is one of the barbiturates called amytal or sodium amytal, no matter whether the operation is a major or minor one, or whether general anesthesia or local anesthesia is to be used, or whether it is to be done in the dentist's office, the physician's office or in the operating room in hospital.

This sedative must be prescribed or administered by physician — it is not available otherwise and it would be too dangerous to place in the hands of a patient anyway. It is the second best way to quiet or calm overanxiety or unreasonable fear of surgery, dentistry or any necessary treatment. The best way is that routine anoci-association (preliminary injections of drugs of the "truth serum" or "twilight sleep" class — and don't ask me just what these drugs are, for that's exclusively the doctor's business together with other measures calculated to render the patient indifferent, neutral, unconcerned. This modern technique has a greater purpose than the mere relief of dread or fear, it prevents shock during or following operation.

Now, boys and girls, with occasional exceptions such as today's correspondent, we are all against pain, I take it. But on the other hand, even the weakest, most timid, most "nervous" of us can and must endure a little pain occasionally—it just happens to everybody sometimes.

In most instances, if one selects a skilful dentist, it is well to leave entirely to the dentist the decision whether to employ any kind of preliminary preparation as well as the choice of anesthetic, if any anesthesia is necessary.

When I reported to my dentist at 10 a.m. Thursday we talked about cabbages and kings, while he had another peek or two at the posterior surface of the last molar. Presently he was injecting local anesthetic—and, although I had taken no preliminary medicine of any kind I swear I didn't know he was inserting the needle for the injection. Having waited a few minutes he brought up the steam shovel and began excavating, the while I dozed in solid comfort. In an hour or more he was through—a temporary stopper in place, and several days later the inlay was ready—having disinfected and dried the cavity the dentist dropped the inlay in —click—bade me bite down and hold it, and we were all through. Not one little twinge of pain at any time.

There is the cure for fear or dread of dental treatment—(1) report to your dentist for periodic examination and prophylaxis often enough to catch cavities before they begin to hurt, and (2) choose a dentist with (a) good aseptic technique (we'll talk about this in a later article) and (b) skill in the use of anesthetics.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What did King John do at Runnymede?

It is commonly said that King John "signed" Magna Charta at Runnymede June 15, 1215. Actually Magna Charta was not signed at all, although it was "sealed." No signature or writing of any kind of John is extant and it is doubtful whether he could write.

The document drafted at Runnymede was inspired by the charter granted about 1100 by Henry I and was in the nature of a treaty or articles of capitulation in which the King agreed to respect certain civil and church rights, to correct abuses and to redress grievances. It was written in Latin, like all public documents of the time, and was dated June 15, although it was not completed, sealed and delivered until June 19.

A copy was sent to each cathedral with orders that it be read publicly twice a year. Four of the original copies still exist, two in the British Museum and two in the Lincoln and Salisbury cathedrals. The Lincoln cathedral copy, the most complete and accurate, is written in a fine Norman hand on parchment pages about 17 inches square. The Latin text contains about 2,500, the English translation about 5,000 words.

John repudiated Magna Charta on the ground that he had been coerced to grant it, and the Pope released him from his promises, but under John's son and successor, Henry III, the document, considerably amended, was reconfirmed in 1216, 1217 and 1225. It is the draft of 1225 that is regarded as the first English statute, the keystone of English liberty and the "sheet-anchor" of the British constitution.

"Magna Charta" is medieval Latin for "Great Charter." There is a difference of opinion as to whether the second element should be "charta" or "carta." It is pronounced "KAHR-ta" no matter which way it is spelled.

Latin "charta" originally signified a leaf of papyrus. Later it came to mean a sheet of writing paper, tablet and document. Sometimes in England, due perhaps to Norman French influence, it was spelled "carta." It was spelled "carta" in the version of the Great Charter of 1215 and "charta" in that of 1225.

In 1946 the House of Lords, while considering a bill to authorize the British Museum to lend the Lacock Abbey copy of the Congress, adopted a resolution ordering the "h" dropped from "charta" in the old document on the theory that it had been inserted by a careless copyist.

The Oxford and the Webster International dictionaries give "Magna Charta" as preferable, while some authorities regard "Magna Carta" and [illegible] na Charta" as "common [illegible] roneous." [illegible] na Charta" [illegible] historically [illegible] "Magna C[illegible] modern[illegible]

Snipper Clips Locks of Two More Women

Two more young women—Nos. 10 and 11—reported today they apparently had fallen vicitm to the snipper, whose hobby seems to be shearing off the locks of Washington's women and girls.

The snipper, also known as the lock snitcher and Harry the Hair thief, gets around.

Victim No. 10 said she apparently lost her locks on a street car No. 11 during a movie. Previous victims have been shorn on street cars, buses and on crowded street corners.

Mrs. Betty Mae Southwood told police she felt a tug on her hair while on a street car and observed a tall young man hurriedly leave. Miss Alice Payne discovered, after returning from a movie, that she had lost some of her wavy brown tresses.

Police are in a lather over the whole thing.

WITNESS HOLDS LEFT IS RIGHT

Capetown —(CP)— A woman who entered the witness box in magistrate's court here recently was told to raise her right hand and take the oath. She raised her left hand and swore to tell the truth.

"I'm left-handed, your honor," she replied.

Note From Greece Touches Heart Of Ottawa Mayor

Ottawa, Jan. 4 (CP).—Varied and strange is the mail which finds its way to the desk of Mayor Stanley Lewis. One missive today from an Ottawa resident brought a chuckle—but no action. The writer asked for a loan of $100 to enable him to go to California to get into the movies. He promised $200 for the $100—but the mayor declined the touch.

But another letter from Greece is getting immediate attention.

Andreas Callgeropolous of Piraeus, Greece, a collector of stamps and coins, forwarded Mayor Lewis an envelope containing more than 100,000,000,000 drachmas (Greek banknotes), chiefly of the Italian and German occupation period.

"I do not send the collection to receive money from you," said Mr. Callgeropolous in an accompanying note. "Money means nothing in Greece, where everything is sold very dear. Only I beg you. . . to send some useless and old clothes, dresses and overcoats, for men and women, for clothing is lacking here."

Mayor Lewis has replied that every effort to get the clothing will be made.

BIG GERMAN FIRM SPLIT INTO UNITS

I. G. Farben Holdings in U. S. Zone to be Separated and Run Independently

Berlin (Reuters)—I. G. Farben holdings remaining in the United States' zone of Germany after reparations and destruction of war potential will be broken up into 30 separate and independent economic units, James S. Martin, United States Military government "decartelization" head, announced.

These units are to be operated under trustees, appointed by the provincial governments, until the I. G. Farben property is disposed of under regulations now being formulated, he said.

There are 850 plants in all four zones, Mr. Martin stated, and of these 40 per cent are in the Russian zone. When the I. G. Farben Trust was seized in November 1945, it had a book value of some 7,500,000,000 reichsmarks (approximately the same in dollars.)

Measures to set up unit trustees were taken in conformity with decisions of the four-power I. G. Farben Control Committee, said Mr. Martin, who is the United States member of the committee. No similar action had yet been taken in the other zones, he said.

As part of a broad industrial program in the United States' zone, limitations have been placed on the size of the units into which I. G. Farben property has been divided.

The plan is expected to demonstrate that units of enormous concerns like I. G. Farben can be operated as separate entities. Profits will go to the Allied Control Authority for distribution as it sees fit, while trustees' salaries will appear on cost sheets of the units.

Miss Vague explained to the judge that the legal step was necessary in order that she may administer a $5,000 fund for her daughter's benefit.

Snowgram Misread Calls Out Fliers, Police, Army, Navy

La Grande, Ore., Jan. 4 (AP)—Mrs. Gale Vincent, who lives in an isolated cabin in snow country south of here, wrote a "snowgram" to a friend and as a result private fliers, state police, the army and the navy were called out.

They all went home today, though, at last convinced there was no crashed plane in the mountains

What Mrs. Vincent wrote was "heard OK, plain"—meaning she had heard her friend shout plainly as he flew over the mountain clearing where she lives.

A passing aviator read it as an appeal for help. The army and navy sent planes from 300 miles away, on chance it was the scene of the crash of a marine transport, missing since Dec. 10 with 32 aboard.

They attempted to establish a communication code involving more "snowgrams." What they got back were code messages reading: 1. "A plane is down." 2. "Someone is injured." 3. "Help is needed." 4. "All OK." 5. "No.". And finally they saw a figure in the clearing busily erasing all the messages with a broom.

State police finally solved it. Sgt. Lewis Johnson and Vern Kirkland worked their way to cabin last night, emerging four hours later with the explanation Mrs. Vincent "just got excited," used the code wrongly, tried to straighten the situation out, then just decided to sweep it away and try to forget the whole thing.

The army and navy are trying to, too.

WEDDINGS

SPRACKETT—WESSELS

At three o'clock on the afternoon of December 26, the parsonage of the Wesleyan Methodist Chapel, was the scene of a pretty marriage ceremony when Miss Evelyn Mary Wessels, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wessels, 67 Lewis Street, became the bride of Mr. Reginald Theodore Sprackett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Sprackett, R.R. No. 6, Belleville, with the Rev. J. S. Spearman officiating.

The bride was attractive in a street-length dress of light blue wool with gold sequin trim, matching hat and veil and wearing a corsage of red roses. She was attended by Miss Edith Sprackett, sister of the groom, who wore a pink wool dress, with brown accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

Mr. Morris Wessels, brother of the bride, assisted the groom.

Following the ceremony a small reception was held at the bride's home for only the immediate friends of the contracting parties, after which Mr. and Mrs. Sprackett left for a short trip to Eastern Ontario. They will later take up residence in Belleville.

Carmel Young Adults Elect New Officers

Stirling (Special) — Carmel Young Adults of St. Paul's-Carmel United Church held a very successful and enjoyable pot-luck supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Bailey on Friday evening.

Because the roads were so heavy the supper was also the excuse for a sleighing party in that all who came — and over 30 were present — had to travel by sleigh.

During the course of the evening an election of officers was held and the following were returned for the year 1947:

President, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Armstrong; secretary-treasurer, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Bailey; program committee, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Grills, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Pyear, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Grills.

It was decided to have two meetings each month until Spring and to hold them the first and third Thursdays.

Donald Charlton Member of Older Boys' Parliament

Young people of Belleville and the surrounding districts, who are members of the different denominational "Youth Movements" are very interested in learning that Donald Charlton, a member of the Young People's Group of Tabernacle United Church has been attending the 26th session of "The Older Boys' Parliament", which convened in London, Ont., Dec. 26th., 1946, and closed Dec. 31st.

Donald's contribution to the work among the "Older Boys" of Belleville has been outstanding, and was evidently appreciated by his colleagues in "Parliament", for he received the appointment to the position of "Under Secretary for Finance East", which appointment has been verified by a certificate signed by the "Premier", Douglas C. Lapp; and by the "Lieut.-Governor", C. A. R. Neville.

Leaders interested in the progress of the boys of the different local groups are proud to have one of their members thus signally honored, and Donald's friends are offering congratulations.

CANDLES RETURN TO FAVOUR AS SLEET CRIPPLES HAMILTON

The industrial city of Hamilton, Ont., was virtually crippled when King Winter took hold of southwestern Ontario with alternate snow and sleet storms which buried the Hamilton area under a heavy sheath of ice and caused major breaks in all three power lines which supply hydro service to the city. In addition to halting industry the sleet storm left hundreds of Hamilton homes without light, office buildings without elevator service, and heavily over-loaded gas-heating units. Citizens moved in their homes and offices, and often in business districts by candlelight. At LEFT Neva Cook, of Hamilton, makes a telephone call with only a candle's flickering flame for illumination. View at RIGHT shows how sleet and freezing rain coated hydro cables and trees, causing line breaks.

Belle Brummel Flannel

By PRUNELLA WOOD

This gray suit with its pert backed jacket and dressy leg o' mutton sleeves shows you whither men's wear flannel has climbed stylishly, on demand from the distaff side. The big buttons fitting the double-breasted cut are shiny metal, suggesting a tie-up with the handsome costume jewelry now in vogue. This suit is styled and sized for those usually neglected women with petite figures.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Is It Smart To Be Too Cautious In Romance?

It's a good thing indeed to be a little conservative about a romance; to take time to study a situation a bit and get some idea of how your advances are likely to be received before going recklessly overboard about a girl. If you don't let yourself get too involved until you are fairly certain your girl feels the same way about you as you do about her, you'll save yourself many unhappy moments.

But on the other hand, it's not smart to be too cautious. How are you ever going to learn the things you need to know about life and about people if you keep yourself too carefully guarded against the experiences that will teach you?

Here's a young man who makes me wonder if he isn't the over-cautious type who may cheat himself out of a lot of valuable experiences. He writes:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I have been going with a girl since last April, and seem to get along very nicely when I'm out with her until at a certain time she always has an excuse about going home early.

"Now it isn't that I wish to keep her out till all hours of the night, but when I do see her I can't seem to understand that she has to go home so early, and I get sort of moody and what not. I also do not know how to approach the subject about her being fond of me. The main reason why I would like some definite answer from her is so that I would not let myself get too involved with her, and so that she wouldn't hurt me too much later on.

"S. A. H."

Now the reason "S.A.H." is worrying so much about this girl going home earlier than he thinks necessary is undoubtedly that he has a sneaking suspicion she gets enough of his company in a short time. It piques him to feel that she's not sufficiently crazy about him to forget all about time and how it may be passing. He thinks that if she were as fascinated with him as he would like her to be, the last thing in the world she'd want would be to have the evening come to an end. It hurts his pride as well as his heart. That's why he gets "sort of moody" when she tells him it's time to say good-night.

So because he feels hurt already, he's anxious to save himself from further wounded feelings by trying to discover whether or not she does like him. He's reluctant to accept as a definite fact what he fears may be the truth, yet he doesn't want to continue the relationship if he's going to find himself out on a limb some day with only a broken heart for company.

Well, "S.A.H." your position is no different from that in which most young men find themselves when they're pursuing a girl. There's usually a period in which a suitor is on tenderhooks, wondering if his lady love returns his affection or if she's just stringing him along, with a firm "No" all ready for the moment when he gets around to asking her to marry him.

But if all young men were as cautious about sticking their necks out as you are, there'd be few marriages, I'm afraid. Happily, most of them prefer to take a sporting chance, to be patient and persistent. And if, in the end, their girls turn them down, they take it with their chins up, instead of going off into a corner, and moaning about how much they are hurt. And they learn something about the mysterious ways of women that gives them a lot of help in handling the next one they go after.

What difference does it make if you do get hurt now and then in life, "S.A.H.?" Isn't that better than trying to shut yourself up in an emotional vacuum and never feeling anything? You can't take just the happiness of life, you know, and think you can sidestep the unhappiness. If you want the first, you've got to take the other, too, when it comes. It's all or nothing, and the smart person chooses "all," knowing that's how he's going to get the most out of life.

So don't let yourself be too cautious, too afraid of getting hurt. Don't try to make this girl come up with a definite answer right now on how she feels about you. Be content to string along with her a while, and instead of getting moody when she wants to go home, take her there cheerfully and tell her what a grand time you've had with her. Leave her with the feeling that it's been a swell evening, and that the next one will be even better. First thing you know, you may have her seeing everything your way!

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Personality hair-do prevails

One of the happy signs of the times: women will not accept a standardized hair-do. It is a long step along the beauty way. In the past it wasn't like that. When the shingle flourished nearly every feminine head was shorn. Young or old, tall or small, fat or thin, it made no difference. Hairdressers were frantic. They got busy, tooted up the windblown and the pineapple bob. Permanent wave machines started up again.

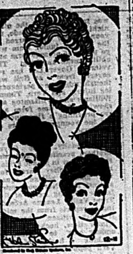
Before the first bob sent the world standing on its ears in surprise, coiffures were standardized. Every feminine head looked like every other feminine head. It had always been that way.

Now what do you see? Last summer there was talk about the return of the windblown. A lot of dollies cut off their pigtail material. Many of them still have short crops. The three-inch curl is a joy to the career girl who has but to dress and rake a comb through her ringlets to be ready to dash out of the door in the early morning hours. No arranging of rolls. No fussing at bedtime. Just a shampoo and wave set every fortnight, a permanent now and then. Say what you will this is the ideal arrangement for any woman who has time chasing at her heels.

If she likes her abbreviated mop she can have it. Nobody will point a finger at her, call her outmoded.

Many movie stars have worn the shoulder-length, softly-waved bob for years, are now wearing it, will go on sporting flowing tresses. Marion Davies, for instance, looks every bit as young and lovely as she did fifteen years ago. This style suits her.

Only one mode is taboo — the mannish shingle. It is flattering to very few women. It has not place in today's fashion picture, which currently is going through a thoroughly feminine cycle. It had its day when the boyish figure prevailed. Perhaps you are too young to remember. The idea was to be straight up and down and bustless. Dresses were cut like pillowcases.



The [illegible] Coiffure Has a Slight Popularity Edge

At the present time, the uppity coiffure has an edge on the others. Women who had had short hair for years thought it fun to let their hair grow. They wanted a change. Stylists found ways and means of upping tresses that were barely long enough in the back to reach the crown of the head. The cash customers liked the new lady in the looking glass.

A late and attractive mode shows large pouf curls on the crown of the head and cascading down the back. Very regal. The hair is parted in the center, has wide undulations at the side, is swept back neatly there. The halo braid is new, forming a crown on the top of the head. For this arrangement you will probably have to buy some demountable tresses. Also the psyche, a protruding roll midway between crown and nape line, is going strong.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Employer and Employee Introductions

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have just been given the position of secretary to a business man, one of the executives in a large organization. This is the first time I have been a private secretary. Before I have only taken dictation, and typed. I would like to know if I should expect to be introduced to all visitors to my employer's private office? Also, I have spoken with his wife on the telephone, and am wondering if he will introduce me to her if she comes to the office.

Therese

The answers to both these questions depend on the inclination of your employer. If he is a cordial man he will probably make more introductions than if he is a stickler for concentrating on business, with little or no interest for any social amenities. It is not necessary for him to make any introductions, and it is wise for you not to seem to expect any. He may introduce you to business visitors whom it would be convenient for you to know because of frequent future visits of these visitors to the office. And he probably will introduce you to his wife.

Her Wedding Plans Must Be Changed

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am being married in January, and all our plans had been made when my father had a stroke and became partially paralyzed. Now, of course, these plans must be changed, and I would so much appreciate your help.

1. I know that Father will not be able to walk down the aisle with me, but I want very much to have him give me in marriage. Is it permissible for him to do this while sitting in the front pew?

2. Then about the reception. I know my father would not be able to stand attending a reception, and I am sure he would feel left out if we had a reception without his attending it. Under these circumstances, may I enclose cards with my wedding invitations saying that because of illness in the family there will be no reception.

S. F.

1. I am sure you will be able to make this thoughtful arrangement by consulting with the minister who is to perform the ceremony. It is proper, and I know how touched your father will be at your pride in having him give you in marriage.

2. I agree that under these circumstances it will be kinder for you not to have a reception. But I do not recommend that with the wedding invitations you enclose cards of explanation about no reception. This is entirely unnecessary, and if your father should chance to see one of these enclosed cards, as he probably would, he undoubtedly would be deeply saddened that his illness had been the cause of your not having a reception.

Travelers' Checks, Not Personal Checks, When Traveling

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband retired from business last year, and now we would like to do some of the traveling we have always dreamed of doing. We may go to Mexico, then to South America, and we have been wondering about paying our travel-expenses (particularly, of course, hotel bills) with our personal checks. We both feel that there will be times when it might be difficult to prove our identity. And doesn't that always have to be done when giving one's personal check? What do you suggest?

R. D.

Ask your bank or a travel bureau to explain to you the procedure and advantages of travelers' or express checks. They are readily accepted everywhere. To cash them you need no identification (as you might with personal checks) since you must sign your name in the presence of the person accepting them and this signature must be the same as the signature you signed on all the checks when you received them. Also, you can get them in various amounts, another advantage.

Princess Elizabeth Is Stamp Collector

London, Jan. 4 (CP) — Latest pictures of Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret released to the British press show them in their private apartments in Buckingham Palace, where they work and relax in privacy.

Princess Elizabeth's study, furnished in Victorian style, has several easy chairs, but the centrepiece is a desk where she writes private letters and handles official correspondence.

The Princess opens her own mail, which has reached large proportions, partly because she is building up her independent stamp collection. Outgoing mail is placed in a basket marked "The Lady-in-Waiting."

The playroom, which used to be the princesses' schoolroom, is lined with glass-covered bookcases. The books include Shakespeare, Robert Louis Stevenson, Bronte, and many Highland romances.

Fashion Flashes

HERE AGAIN for superlative southern smartness, is the resort suit of white linen. Belgian linen is used for a beautifully tailored suit with a long jacket, fitted through the waist with a one-button closing and two buttons above on either side in triangular effect. Notched revers taper to the waist. Slanting hip-pocket flaps.

NEW COLOR SCHEMES give interest to hats created for between-season use. A small breton of apple-green chenille is wound and wreathed in lavendar veiling, with fuchsia-colored chenille roses placed between spiral loops of the veiling.

SOMETHING NEW in the fur trend is that of styling a luxury fur on tailored or casual lines. Mink is used for a tailored greatcoat detailed with high, standing collar and notched revers with wide, pointed lapels. The self belt and the bands on the sleeves and on pockets that are manipulated to pouch outward, all have gold buttons.

HOW GOOD IT IS to wear a hood when one wants to protect a hair-do from winter bluster. A charming evening coat, cut on boxy, casual lines, is of white woolen striped with gold metal threads. Its attached hood is lined in gold brocade. Hood is removable.

JUST IN TIME to brighten the wardrobe, these dark winter days, are little hats made of big, pink, full-blown roses. Some models are trimmed with soft loops of deeper ping or bright green satin ribbon.

NOTHING NEW UNDER THE SUN, except to report that down south it's the biggest white season in many a year. For cooler days, full-length belted coats of white wool jersey or handknit white wool are worn over simple, sleeveless frocks of white sharkskin or linen, the coat neckline filled in with a bright scarf.

EXQUISITE WORK embellishes many of the newest evening frocks, as witness a simply-cut dress of white silk crepe beaded all over in a moire design, with tiny silver beads.

LOOKING AHEAD it would seem that the loose, boxy jacket will be most popular with the young crowd. A delightful teen-age suit, readied for Spring, is of men's gray woolen. The high-closing of the jacket, below a neat club collar, is accentuated by a triple row of tiny silver-ball buttons. Side slit pockets on very boxy jacket. Skirt has box pleats fore and aft.

IDEAL for the country or suburban dweller; or for the busy woman in town, is the greatcoat of Alaska sealskin. A smart model in logwood brown, has a half-belt in back and is double-breasted with big gold metal buttons. The buttons also are used as links on the sleeve cuffs. High collar.

YEAR AFTER YEAR, no matter what fashions are extant, the silk afternoon suit holds its own. Copper brown faille, with big all-over dots of deep brown satin, is used for a handsome suit. The jacket has a soft, rippled peplum that dips slightly in back and is fastened with gold rimmed amber buttons.

WE'RE WAITING, like women all over the land, for those new slippers, the new slippers whose satin uppers have been treated with luminous paint that makes them visible in the dark. No more groping!

Working Mothers Receive Faulty Childbirth Care

By DENISE DALTROFF
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Jan. 4 (CP) — Working class wives have to put up with more distress and suffering in childbirth than others, says a report of the Eugenics Society which inquired into the social and economics problems of child-bearing.

Three out of every five women who are the wives of professional men in Britain get relief from pain in childbirth but with the wives of manual workers the ratio is one in five.

Dr. J. W. B. Douglas, a member of the Royal Commission on Population, gave these figures and added that one mother in four among manual workers has a child at home—usually overcrowded—compared with one in ten for white collar workers and one in 20 for the professional and employer class.

"You would expect equality of treatment in the same kind of institution," said Dr. Douglas, "but the facts are that although the majority of better-off women have their own doctors, others rely mainly on midwives."

This difference in care and attention ran all through the course of childbearing. Wives from higher income groups never left hospital before the tenth day while the manual worker's wife might have to leave five days after the birth.

Only one-quarter of the former class started a full day's work in the house 15 days after the child's birth against one in two of manual workers.

"This inequality of care among women of different incomes in this country," said Dr. Douglas, "is being paid for in ill-health of mothers, and the aim of any national health service should be to achieve equality."

Lady Juliet Rhys-Williams, vice chairman of the National Birth Trust Fund founded in 1928 to give relief in childbirth to all said, "it is most deplorable to find that after nearly 20 years we have got no further than this."

Health visitors of 424 authorities have collected data on all births that occurred in England and Wales for the week beginning March 3, 1946. The results of the inquiry will be published next June.

White gown with navy piping

TAILORED, but yet beguilingly dainty, is this nightgown of white rayon satin, piped not in the usual pink or sky blue, but in a good, dark navy. Piping outlines all the edges, the front closing terminating in a defined waistline. The neckline can be worn open as well as is depicted in the sketch. Navy buttons and a navy embroidered monogram offer other contrasting color touches.

Proper Use of Your Perfume

Perfume is the final touch if you are dressing for a party

By HELEN FOLLETT

ARRAYING ONESELF for the grand party isn't much fun unless one can dip into the perfume bottle. Perfume is the final touch. It makes one feel elegant and romantic. The counter where the floretted odors are displayed is tempting beyond belief. A woman can regard the monthly grocery bill with dismay, vow she will economize; but let her get within ten feet of the perfume counter and she is lost.

Let her be canny when using a scent. She must never announce her arrival at a gathering by carrying a too distinctive aura, no matter how sweet and compelling it may be. The art calls for more subtlety than that. The scent must be illusive. So be moderate in your application. A light spraying with an atomizer on chest and upper arms is enough. The warmth of the flesh will cause the alcoholic content to evaporate, only the delicious aroma will remain.

The Exotic Blends

Exotic blends should be left to the woman of exotic dress and flair. They are not for the run-of-the-mill girl who doesn't go in for extreme modes or unusual make-up patterns. Strong scents are vulgar because they offend the fastidious nose and that is a social error.

Now that perfumes are more expensive than ever, remember that they are affected by light, heat and contact with the air.

Spread on Hand

When buying perfume spread a little of the essence on the back of your hand. A handkerchief is not a good testing surface, nor is any other fabric except wool.

It is wise to buy a small container; see if it is friendly or tiresome after using for a few weeks. You have to live with it for awhile to find out.

Place your frocks on scented hangers. Put sachet pads in hat, handkerchief and glove boxes. In time, your wardrobe will become impregnated with the floretted perfumes.

Chuck Rayner of N.Y. Rangers Turns in a Pair of Shutouts Against Maple Leafs, Hawks

Boucher's Team Strongly Entrenched in Fourth Spot and Mighty Close to Bruins

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toast of Manhattan today—when its hockey-minded burghers decided the incredible "twin triumphs" of their New York Rangers were far more than wishful thinking—was a big bushy-browed young man from Canada's Western Plains.

Claude Earl (Chuck) Rayner, whose goal-tending wizardry kept the Rangers' opposition scoreless for 120 minutes of weekend hockey, was the man of the hour. From Manager Frankie Boucher to stickboy, his team-mates didn't let the 26-year-old netminder from Sutherland, Sask., forget it.

"He did it," said Boucher after the Blueshirts humbled the league-leading Maple Leafs 2-0, in Toronto Saturday night. There were several others to share the praise after the revitalized Rangers smashed to a 9-0 Sunday night victory over Chicago Black Hawks, but Rayner remained the central figure.

Opportune Time

Those two triumphs came at an opportune time for the New Yorkers, threateing to slump back into their old rock-bottom habits as they neared the end of a concentrated seven-game diet in which the only previous points came on a pair of ties.

The four ponts gained lifted Rangers within a single point of the third-place Bruins, who obliged by losing 4-1 to the Canadiens at Montreal and 3-1 to the Red Wings at Detroit in the other two weekend matches.

The Rangers Saturday night victory incidentally struck a strong blow for Canadiens, now only three points behind in their effort to catch the flying Maple Leafs.

Handled Shots Flawlessly

Raynor, who returned from three years in the Canadian Armed Forces to catch a regular berth with the Rangers last season, showed his strongest netminding to a crowd of 13,347 at Toronto. With the Rangers outplayed and outshot, he did acrobatics to handle 45 stops flawlessly while Goalie Turk Broda flubbed on two of 31 in the Toronto nets.

Edgar Laprade, Calder Memorial trophy winner as prize rookie last season, and the veteran Bryan Hextall, out through illness all last year, handled the scoring for the New Yorkers, with Laprade helping Hextall on a first-period counter an dHextall returning the favor in the second session.

The Canadiens picked up two points on the Leafs meanwhile with an easy victory over the Bruins, whom they have beaten five times and tied once in six meetings. Playing before a Montreal crowd of 11,377, the Habitants scored all four of their goals before Boston replied.

Hector (Toe) Blake, Ken Mosdell, Maurice Richard and Billy Reay counted for the Canucks while Joe Carveth spoiled Bill Durnan's shutout at 18.10 of the last period.

Third of Season

Rayner, turning his third shutout of the season before a New York crowd of 15,923, had plenty of help against the hapless Chicago Black Hawks as his mates ran up their best scoring drive of the season with nine goals. Two each came in the first two periods, five in the last.

Laprade and Cal Gardner each scored twice others going to Rene Trudell, Church Russell, Rookie Joe Levandoski, Joe Bell and Joe Cooper.

The fifth-place Red Wings scored with their first home victory since November 21 in upsetting Boston before a crowd of 13,186. Murray Henderson scored the first goal for the Bruins at 5:05 of the second frame but Pat Lundy, Bill Quackenbush and Jim Conacher all tallied for the Wings in a rugged final period.

Pat Egan, burly defenceman, was the bad boy of the Bostonians, drawing a 10-minute misconduct and then a match misconduct for pushing around linesman Stan McCabe.

CAPITALS HAND 14 TO 2 LICKING TO PHILADELPHIA

Buffalo Bisons in Third Place, Three Points Away From Second

(By The Canadian Press)

Indianapolis with a 14-2 win handed Philadelphia the worst beating in American Hockey League history last night.

Surpassing Pittsburgh's record of 13 goals against New Haven in 1941, the Capitals were on a scoring bender. Cliff Simpson and Bob Weist accounted for six of the Cap markers with three goals apiece. Hugh Miller and Gerry Couture each found the net twice. Other Indianapolis tallies were chalked u pby Les Douglas, Enio Sclisizzi, Thain Simon and Dan Dumners.

Meanwhile Buffalo after taking third place in the west away from Pittsburgh Saturday with a 6-5 victory was within three points of the second-place Caps and moving up.

The division leading Cleveland Barons bowed 9-3 to Buffalo last night as the Bisons rocketed eight markers into the net in the third frame. In that hectic period, Johnny Mahafney and Jerry Brown each counted twice and Murdo McKay notched his second tally of the evening while Hub Macey, Jim McFadden and Fred Hunt each counted once.

The Barons announced in the third period that they intend to protest the game because of a protruding board behind one of the cages.

Providence remained in third place in the east and strengthened its position in two weekend games with Springfield. The Reds tied Springfield 3-3 Saturday and defeated them 2-1 Sunday on counts by Chuck Shcerza and Billy McComb with Billy Cupolo scoring for the losers.

New Haven came from behind in the third period last night to beat Pittsburgh 4-2 as Sherman White counted twice and Lin Bend and Alex Shibicky staged the winning rally in the third. Wally Wilson and Johnny O'Flaherty scored for the losing Hornets.

In other games Saturday, Providence tied Springfield 3-3; a lucky shot caromed off the shoulder of Goalie Ralph Almas to give St. Louis a 3-2 victory over Indianapolis; New Haven, second-place team in the east, downed the first-place Hershey Beas 4-2; and Cleveland trounced the Rockets 5-1.

STAKES ARE HIGH FOR JOE MAXIM

Philadelphia, Jan. 6 — (AP) — The stakes are high tonight for strong, shifty Joe Maxim, Cleveland, O., heavyweight, and Jersey Joe Walcott, of Merchantville, N.J., for their 10-round return meeting here.

To the winner probably will go the dubious pleasure of taking on champion Joe Louis next spring and though the amazing 30-year-old Walcott is a 2-1 favorite it would be no great surprise if Maxim repeated last August's decision over the Jersey battler.

Promoter Herman Taylor estimated some 12,000 fans will pay $40,000 to witness the match. Taylor says he has received a promise of co-operation from Atlantic City officials and expects approval from the ailing Mike Jacobs for a winner-against-Louis bout at the seashore resort in April.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George B. Cayer, Sports Editor

Tonight at eight of the clock Don Whillan's Belleville Bees, junior puckists wearing the colors of this city, will get their 1947 baptism of fire when they tangle with the Trenton junior "B" squad in the first game of their Ontario Hockey Association grouping.

• • •

The "Bees" will be clad in brand new sweaters with a red body and white shoulders, quite nifty and quite neat, but not gaudy, and will be out there rarin' to baptise their new habiliment with a win. Plumley, last year's junior net sensation, will likely start between the pipes but that is not definite as yet — or it wasn't last night. However, clever "Moe" Rollins is available and there are lots worse custodians than the bespectacled youngster.

• • •

Up from the first string attacking division will be "Huck" Reeves, Dougie Day and Wardhaugh while back on the defence will be either Hurst and Utman or M. Green and Milligan. On the second string front line will be Lyle, Johnny Semark and Haggis or Green, a brother of Murney's and Don. Semark. Coach Whillans has been putting his proteges through some rugged practices and they should come through their initial test tonight with flying collors.

• • •

The Trenton strength is not known but reports from the neighboring town have it that the junior management has been having some trouble in getting the boys out to practice. However, it is understood that these difficulties have been ironed out and don't be surprised to see a strong hockey representation from Ken Couch's town face the Bees here tonight.

• • •

Up in the Intermediate circles Coach Les Shiels is weeding out his initial squad of some twenty-five players and has got them down to eighteen. A few more will get the figurative axe within the next two days and the coach will concentrate on the material at hand.

• • •

At the present time he has Gordie Cook between the nets while out front he will select his team from Vern and Leo Goyer, Timmy Williams, Clare Williamson, Clare Yerke, ex-junior star, Bill and Mark Storms; Doug Bastedo, Stirling flash who looks like a coming star in the upper brackets; Jack Wardhaugh, Bill Beauine, a newcomer from Mountain View; Fred Smith, Pat Maracle, of softball chucking fame down around Ox Point way, Bill Greatrix and Barney Wright.

• • •

The team is fairly well fortified for attacking divisions but there is need for couple outstanding defencemen. Coach Shiels has been holding nightly practices in an effort to whip the boys into some sort of teamwork shape, and they are gradually getting their skating legs.

• • •

Cal. Yerke, is one of the most improved players on the team and the dark-haired kid was fairly flying the other night at practice. Bastedo, the young fellow who starred on the Stirling junior team will go places if present form and ability mean anything. The veteran Goyers,Leo has recovered from at first was thought might be a permanent leg injury, and Vern, Timmy Williams and Williamson are showing old time form and are providing a fine nucleus for the younger members of the squad.

• • •

Incidentally, the Goyer brothers practically stole the scoring show in Madoc Friday night when they starred for the home village squad against the Norwood entry in the opening game of the Trent Valley League According to reports from the mid-Hastings village where in winter time, hockey is secondary only to eating, or dunking a beaker of suds, Vern popped in five of the Madoc goals with brother Leo setting up the plays. Leo got the other goal of the 6-3 victory in the sixth Damon-Pythias act of the night, the pass coming from big Jumbo's shillelagh.

• • •

Over in Wellington tonight, the Trenton Flyers and Bloomfield inaugurate the Intermediate "B" group of the district. On Wednesday night here all four teams of the group will go into action in a double-header that sees Trenton tangle with the Picton Combines and Mountain View cross hockey swords with the Bloomfield squad. The first game starts at 7:45.

It isn't likely that the veteran Speedy St. Louis will see much, if any, playing action this year, but instead will concentrate on a refereeing job. "Speedy" made a distinct hit with district teams, including the hard-to-please Kingston squads, last year in a whistle-tooting capacity and he, with "Toots" Holway has been assigned the arbiting job for the Army and Navy Intermediate squad here. Speedy's work drew outstanding acclaim over Picton way last season and it's likely he will get plenty of work over in that hotbed of hockey before long.

A quarter of a million pounds, (nearly $1,200,000) was raised for the British Red Cross by a humble pub-keeper in Essex who also travelled 60,000 miles, through the medium of darts, a popular English indoor sport. The money was collected mostly in "bobs and tanners" quarters and dimes to youse guys and gals, by this modest chap who goes by the name of "Jock Cooper" and who originally came from Lanarkshire in Scotland. He became treasurer of the National Darts Association soon after war broke out and later travelled all over the Isles arranging matches for the Red Cross. "Actually" he said, "More money was raised in wartime through the medium of darts than from any other sport, for war purposes."

REMEMBER WHEN—

Black-haired Fred Perry, 3-times winner of the All-England tennis championship and backbone of the all-conquering British Davis Cup team the previous four years, made his professional debut at New York 10 years ago today. He whipped Ellsworth Vines, regarded as the best professional in the world, in four sets.

Montreal, Jan. 6 — (CP) — Whether George Slater's revival of a proposal for an all-star team to represent Canada in the Olympics will get any shorter shrift than previous attempts remains to be seen. But at least the Quebec Senior Hockey League's president is keeping the Olympic question in the limelight.

Such a scheme was advanced in previous Olympic campaigns, but didn't get very far, mainly because of civic pride that demanded some particular community get the kudos, rather than a team drawn at large.

Just because nobody was too anxious for the trip to Prague this winter for the European championships doesn't mean that the cities in the running next spring won't put in vehement bids for the honors.

Another drawback is the fact that all-star teams don't necessarily make the best competitors.

The sad plight of the United States all-star squad in Europe now is a case in point—although it must be admitted the American team isn't a national squad of the type Slater wants, representing the best from all parts of the country.

Reverse Justice

Either Lucien Leduc has something different, or else the people of Valleyfield, Que., are exemplary characters, but in any event the fans there don't seem to want Leduc to lay down his reins as coach of the Valleyfield Braves in the Quebec Senior Hockey League. Braves haven't been going to well this year, and Leduc feels he should get out and give someone else a chance. The townspeople, at last reports thought differently.

Greco's Dilemma

Johnny Greco, scrappy Montrealer who holds the Canadian welter crown, is in a quandary about his next fight. Johnny has made tracks for New York to train for his next fight, but does'nt know whether it will be staged there or in Montreal. He is slated to brawl in Madison Square Garden Jan. 17, but promoter Raoul Godbout wants to sign him for a match here Jan. 20, matching him with any of his four prospective New York opponents—Beau Jack, Tippy Larkin, Freddie Archer or Tony Pellone.

FERRY FORCED BACK

Kingston, Ont., Jan. 6 —(CP)— Residents of Wolfe Island in Lake Ontario, five miles south of here, have been storm bound for several days because the ferry Wolfe Islander has been unable to reach the island wharf.

The vessel made two return trips Saturday but was forced back half a mile from the landing place.

OSHAWA, MARLIES TIED FOR SECOND IN JUNIOR RACE

Owen Sound Mohawks Pull Surprise Upset by Defeating Hamilton Pats

(By The Canadian Press)

An upset in the O.H.A.'s senior division and two near-upsets in the Junior A loop marked a full weekend of play with all 10 junior teams seeing action and one senior game played.

Owen Sound Mohawks, provided the major surprise as they outfought the third-place Hamilton Patricias to climb out of last place in the five-team senior loop. Equally impressive were the gallant battles of Stratford Kroehlers and Windsor Spitfires before they went down to one-goal defeats before the powerful Oshawa and Barrie squads in junior games.

On the other hand there was nothing surprising about the way the league-leading St. Michael's Majors trounced Hamilton Szabos 10-0 in Toronto, except that they were held to two goals in the first two periods. It was their third 10-goal triumph over the Hamiltonians in as many starts. And the only surprised people in Galt were the consistently outmanoeuvred St. Catharines defencemen as the Red Wings climbed all over them for an 18-1 victory, the highest score of the season.

Marlies Tie for Second.

In the remaining junior game Toronto Marlboros moved into a second-place tie with Oshawa by beating Toronto Young Rangers 2-1 in the first half of a Maple Leaf Gardens doubleheader. Frank Kent and Cam Church scored for the Dukes and Jack Anderson for the Rangers in the tightly played contest.

Flem Mackell, Johnny McLellan and Ed. Sandford got two goals apiece as St. Michaels overwhelmed the seventh-place Szabos in the nightcap. Costello, Migay, Harrison and Winslow got the others.

Murray Fife's goal with 12 seconds left gave Barrie Flyers their Victory in Windsor after the scrappy Spitfires had nullified a two-goal lead earlier in the period. Meger, St. Pierre and Favero were the other Barrie marksmen while Harry Marchand had two and Gord Haidy a single for the losers.

Crowdis a Hero.

Goalie Lou Crowdis was Oshawa's hero as he staved off determined efforts by the Kroehlers to tie the score in the third period after George Robertson had cut the Generals' lead to a single goal. Drysdale and Casanto also counted for the losers while Ceresino, Curik, Samis and Blair found the range for the winners.

Galt Red Wings fattened their scoring averages against the futile Falcons of St. Catharines, with Fred Glover leading the way with three goals and five assists. Marty Pavelich with four and two and Trent Anderson with three and three were other high scorers. Lyle Wiseman had three goals and Hnatuk got two while McBride, Uniac, and Giesbrecht had singles before Currie put the visitors on the scoresheet late in the final frame.

In the senior tilt, Doug Gillespie kept the Owen Sound squad in the game for two periods, his three goals matching the combined Hamilton output of Tindall, Hollinger and Tom Smelle. Then Smith and Kilpatrick came through with third-period markers to sew up the game. Jim Boddy with four assists was also prominent in the Mohawk cause.

NECK OPERATION TO BE PERFORMED ON BABE RUTH

Famed Sultan of Swat in "Serious" Condition in N. Y. Hospital

New York, Jan. 6 (AP)—George Herman (Babe) Ruth, baseball's 51-year-old retired Sultan of Swat, today was described as in "serious" condition as he prepared for a neck operation in French hospital.

A bulletin from the hospital late last night said "the outlook is considered serious." It added the operation will be performed "for the relief of intracable pain."

Hospital sources intimated there would be no further announcements until after the operation has been performed by an unidentified physician.

Despite numerous trips to hospitals since he severed his last baseball connection as a coach for Brooklyn Dodgers in 1938, the spingly-legged athlete has been active in golf and bowling circles.

Last April he flew to Mexico as a guest of President Jorge Pasquel of the Mexican baseball league for a "vacation."

Even at that late date the managerial bug was still buzzing in his bonnet and he said he had asked Larry MacPhail to make him manager of Newark Bears in the International League. He never got the job but continued to hope that some day he would boss the New York team at Yankee Stadium, "the house that Ruth built," with homeric home run feats.

The moon-faced slugger, whose $80,000 salary in 1930 and 1931 never has been equalled, still holds the all-time major league home run record with 60 in 1927.

Ruth was first, last and always a Yankee although he broke in with Boston Red Sox as a pitcher.

Purchased by the New York club for $100,000 and $35,000 in players in 1920, the Babe shifted to the outfield and started to hit home runs at a furious clip. He was generally credited with saving baseball in 1920, when he hit 54 homers and helped make the fans forget the "Black Sox" scandal of 1919.

American League pennants and world series followed Ruth from Boston to New York as the Yankees rocketed to the top of the heap on the strength of his distance hitting.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

The Kibitzer

Jumping Jupiter does no messing around with a long suit. With a long string, he hops right to it. His one-jumps and higher-jumps mean the same thing. Partner must decide where to go from there.

A long suit responding hand has a choice of bids. You can split hairs if you know where they part at the borderline. Standard rules for such suits are easy to understand.

With two high cards among three tricks, responder bids. His bid in a new suit is forcing for one round. So, there is no need for him to jump to show suit length. Length can be shown in his rebids.

With six tricks including two sure, responder one-jumps. This is forcing to game. So, there is no need for him to show length of suit at once. He can do this in his rebids.

This leaves double-jumps and higher-jumps for the showing of long suits. When is this done at once? Only when no lower bid is truly available. Or for a gamble.

South opened with one spade when north held this hand:

♠ 9 7
♥ K-J 10 8 7 5 3
♦ A 7 6 5
♣ None

North leaped at once to four hearts and south passed. The pair muffed reaching a cinch slam. When the smoke of battle cleared, the north player tried to blame his partner.

Two high cards in three or more tricks are in the north hand. He has plenty of stuff for a non-jump or two hearts. This kind of a take-out is forcing for one round. South must bid again.

The immediate high jump to four hearts denies qualities for a normal response. It is in fact a shutout signal. It virtually cries out loud for partner to pass this gamble for a game in hearts.

The higher the jump, the less desire it has for partner to show anything more. That is why such a bid is known as a shutout.

Few partners incline to split hairs too fine.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN

Variety, the film trade weekly, has looked over the brightest new stars to rise above 1946's horizon.

Variety's list of new male favorites includes Larry Parks, Burt Lancaster, Rex Harrison, Robert Mitchum and Guy Madison. Its new feminine favorites are Peggy Cummins, Joan Caulfield, Evelyn Keyes, Catherine McLeod, Jeanne Crain, June Haver, Vivian Blaine and Janis Paige.

Parks, in the starring part in "The Jolson Story," and Lancaster, who made his debut as the star of "The Killers," made the most spectacular rises of the year, for they came up from nothing. Rex Harrison has been a big-time established star in England.

Robert Mitchum has been slugging up to the top the hard way. Guy Madison scored so well with Dorothy Maguire in "Till the End of Time," an undistinguished picture which he helped to enliven that he is well launched.

Evelyn Keyes' rise in "The Jolson Story" was a swell break for an attractive actress who has had some bad ones. Joan Caulfield, an unknown until she was seen with Bob Hope in "Monsieur Beaucaire" made such an impression she was put into the starring role in "Blue Skies" with Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire.

Catherine McLeod, another unknown, started to stardom in "I've Always Loved You."

Another batch of top-grade actresses, who burst on the American scene, came from Britain. Ann Todd, Lilli Palmer (Mrs. Rex Harrison), Phyllis Calvert and Patricia Roc either were seen on American screens or went to Hollywood to make films.

With all this talk of new stars we'd like to put in a line of comment and congratulation for afomous, middle-aged one, Ralph Richardson, who was Knighted by the King in the New Year's Honors. Sir Ralph, now 45, is on the screen currently in "Henry V," and will soon be seen in "School For Secrets," officially a documentary on radar but as entertaining as a make-believe feature.

HOGAN ON TOP AFTER 54 HOLES

Los Angeles, Jan. 6 — (AP) — Blazin' Ben Hogan was on top as usual today as firing started on the final 18 holes of the 72-hole tour over Riviera Country Club's course.

The Hershey, Pa., sharpshooter, at 208 for the first 54, had a two-stroke bulge over little Toney Penna, Cincinnati, who was making his gamest try for a major tournament win.

Penna, who wasnt even in golfdom's top dozen money winners in 1946 shot near-sensational golf Sunday to post a one-under-par 70 and shave two strokes off Hogan's previous lead.

But close observers gave him only an outside chance to overhaul Hogan, the 1946 king, who usually gets steadier as the going toughens.

Aside from Penna, only Ed (Porky) Oliver, the Wilmington, Del., slugger, was given a chance to horn in on Hogan's act. Oliver was third, five strokes behind the leader at 213.

Football Held Responsible For 21 Fatalities

New York, Jan. 6—(AP)—United States football was held directly responsible for 21 fatalities in 1946 in the 15th annual survey presented today by Dr. Floyd R. Eastwood of Purdue University to the National Football Coaches Association.

Dr. Eastwood recommended further safeguarding players by appointing a committee to study the design of headgears, thus coinciding with one of 5 rule changes asked by the coaches themselves.

The coaches recommended that wearing apparel should be softened wherever possible, stressing that many injuries resulted from hard elbow pads and knee braces.

101 YEARS OF SERVICE FOR TWO R.R. VETERANS

St. Thomas, Jan. 6 —(CP)— Two veteran railway men of this city, a conductor and engineer of the New York Central Railroad, have retired with a total of 101 years of service. Alfred Clements, the conductor, started with the railroad in 1895, while William Jolliffe, the engineer, has served for 49 years.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was watching Maggie Jonsin making a slide in the snow in frunt of her house in her cowboy pants and no hat, and Mary Watkins went passed in her red coat with gold buttons looking even more bewty looking than usual, and Maggie Jonsin said, Good night look at that sissey guy. White mittens, can you imagine? White mittens and it aint even Sunday. Why cant she wear reguler gloves like reguler guys? she said.

Probably meening big black leather gloves like hers, and I said, Maybe she's too delicate.

Aw where do you get that stuff? Maggie said. If you want to know what's a matter with her, somebody must of told her she was pritty once, and she never got over it, she said.

Being sourcastic, and I thought, I bet if somebody ever told her she was pritty, I bet she'd never get over it either.

And I tried it just for a experiment to find out, saying, Aw, you're as pritty as she is any day.

Aw go on, what's you giving me? Who wants to look pritty Maggie said. Hay, what's a matter with you talking like that, do you want a good kick in the shin? she said, and I said, Why, what's a matter? It's not your fault if you can't help looking pitty without even trying, is it? G wizzickers I bet you'd beet her in a bewty race any day, I said.

Aw you're talking nutty, you sound nutts, Maggie Jonsin said. I got a good mind to push your face in for that crazy kind of talk. Shut up and talk sense, will you? she said.

Saying it without sounding mad and she reetched down and tied her undone shoelace to make herself look neeter.

Proving everybody is willing to except a compliment if it's forced on them hard enough.

BOXING CHAMP HURT IN CRASH

Vineland, N.J., Jan. 6 — (AP) —William Papaleo (Willie Pep), world's featherweight boxing champion, was injured last night in the crash of a passenger plane but his condition was reported "good." He suffered injuries to the left ankle and chest.

The Hartford, Conn., battler was scheduled to fight in Havana, Dec. 21 but his manager, Lou Viscusi, said Dec. 12 that an injury to the champ's right ankle had forced a postponement. At the time he said the injury might force postponement of a Jan. 28 title bout with Nel Tarleton in London.

The plane was en route from Miami to Newark.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

In a resumption of the Lily Bowl football match between United States Army-Navy teams at Hamilton, Bermuda, a last-quarter, 75-yard run by Capt. H. W. Hoffman of Flushing, N. Y., gave Army a 7-7 tie with the aggressive Middies yesterday. As the touchdown was converted, 9,000 spectators roared approval.

Governor Admiral Sir Ralph Leatham tossed out the ball before the kick-off.

If the Navy team, made up of personnel stationed at Bermuda, had won the game it would have given them permanent possession of the Lily Bowl trophy, a football carved out of Bermuda cedar.

Members of the American Davis Cup team left Melbourne yesterday for San Francisco taking with them the trophy which they won in straight sets from the Australian tennis stars.

Something of a record was set at Brantford on Saturday when a total of 12 hockey matches were played. In the morning 10 schoolboy teams were in action. Eight minor league association teams played in the afternoon and four teams in the city league played at night.

Imperator, a three-year-old American-bred colt owned by R. S. McLaughlin of Oshawa ended a six-month layoff Saturday at Tropical Park, Miami, with a win in an allowance race. Imperator paid $41.70, $19.70 and $8.70.

The $50,000 seven-furlong Santa Susana Stakes at Santa Anita Park, Acadia, Cal., Saturday was won by R. C. Ellsworth's Hubble Bubble before a crowd of 47,800.

More U.S. Irish Than in Ireland

Dublin, Jan. 4 (CP) — There are far more people of Irish blood in the United States than in Ireland, D. W. Brogan, professor of political science at Cambridge, told the Royal Dublin Society.

Between 1820 and 1920, nearly 5,500,000 Irish people settled in the United States, becoming the "basic proletariat" of the country. The only parallel in history was the migration from Portugal to Brazil.

Even so, said Professor Brogan, the proportion of Irish stock was higher in Newfoundland, Australia and Scotland.

Sports Roundup

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Jan. 6 — (CP) — Danny Murphy is 68 and Arthur Devlin is 66 and if you saw them at work today in the isolation hospital in nearby Hudson county, you'd swear a harsh word never passed between them . . . Friends describe them as "the greatest cronies you ever saw," but mention the 1905 World Series and you'll revive some ancient arguments . . . Murphy played second base for Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics then and Devlin was one of the fiercest members of the late John McGraw's New York Giants, and the games of 41 years ago are evergreen in their memories.

Point of View

Al (N.Y. Herald Tribune) Laney encountered Murphy and Devlin the other day at the hospital, where the two have been working in harmony for the last seven years . . . Devlin avowed that the Giants "murdered" the Athletics in that 1905 "3483", but Murphy insists it was "very close" . . . Devlin then related the story of the play that he says led to one of baseball's oddest rules—namely, that you can't steal a base "backwards."

Backslider

Anky Coakley was pitching for the Athletics, with Bill Dahlen of the Giants on third and Devlin on first . . . "I stole second while Andy just stood there with the ball in his hand," Devlin told Laney. "I thought Dahlen would break for the plate, but he had to hold third. So then I stole first back again when Andy pitched and Dahlen scored when the catcher threw to the shortstop." . . . Murphy disagreed over some of the details, but acknowledged that Devlin's reverse run produced a ruling making "backward" stealing illegal.

Toronto Fans Have Pet Peeve Against Arbiter

Toronto, Jan. 6—(CP)—Public enemy No. 1 among Toronto's National Hockey League fans today was referee Bill Chadwick, not just because he was arbiter when the leading Leafs bowed to the fourth-place New York Rangers 2-0 Saturday night, but because they think he waves their idols to the cooler for insufficient cause.

One of the 13,347 fans directed an apple at Bill late in the second period after the Broadway Blueshirts scored both their goals, when the official caught Garth Boesch draping a New Yorker on the boards and sent him to join a penalty parade, which at one time saw two players of both sides sitting it out.

There were Leafs in the cooler when Bryan Hextall and Edgar Laprade scored the two New York goals in the early stages of the first and second periods, but the Leafs fattened their record as the N.H.L.'s most-penalized squad by receiving eight of 13 minor banishments.

Just to add to Chadwick's unpopularity with the cash customers, he ruled "no goal" when Syl Apps knocked the puck into the Rangers' goal late in the second period as the Leafs tried desperately to beat Goalie Chuck Rayner legitimately. The young netminder was the game's outstanding star, blocking 45 shots 23 of them in the opening 20 minutes.

RICE CROP GROWN BY AUSSIE WOMEN

Operate Successful 525-Acre Farm for 25 Years in New South Wales

Leeton, Australia, Jan. 6 (CP). —Two sisters who have managed a mixed 525-acre farm in this New South Wales district for 25 years have proved that women can succeed at rice farming in Australia.

They are Margaret and Lois Grant whose father, Donald Grant celebrated his 101st birthday last year.

The Grant property grows rice, oats, fruit and vegetables and in 1929 won the first prize ever given for an Australian rice crop. It was one of the first of six farms in the district to grow rice well, and Mr. Grant and Miss Margaret Grant sold the crop in Melbourne for £15 ($48) a ton.

The Grant home is a comfortable, English-style bungalow which the sisters designed themselves. Around the lounge-room walls are rare Chinese prints which have been in the family for several hundred years. Doulton china, early pewter mugs and other family treasures from England are along the mantelpiece.

Mr. Grant came to Australia in 1865 after receiving a grant from the Duke of Sutherland for military service. He worked for nine years on a station of 300,000 sheep in the Riverina district of southern New South Wales, and became station manager. His two daughters were born there, and the family went to the Leeton district in 1912.

At that time rice had not been established in the Leeton irrigation area, so Margaret and Lois decided to run the farm as partners and plant 16 acres of rice in addition to their other crops.

Malden, Mass., Jan. 6—(AP)— Dishpans were used to rescue a collection of tropical fish Sunday as fire gutted a 2½-storey shingle house here, causing damage estimated at $7,500. Jacob Shaw, his wife and their three children scrooped the fish out of an aquarium in their home with dishpans. Most of the collection was saved.

CHAPTER 37.

"But what happened to your marriage?"

"Well, I—we put it off. He's down in New Guinea now."

"Service, eh?"

"Medical corps. Captain James Lippincott."

"Oh? Crazy about him?"

"Aucassin and Nicolette." Jennifer's bright color came up.

"You and your Aucassin and Nicolette! I suppose I gave you that?"

It gave her an opening. Her laughter died and she said quickly, "What didn't you give me, Monty? Was there ever a friend like you?"

"Oh, cut that!" he commanded hastily.

"Of course I'll cut it. You can't look a person right in the eye and say, 'You pulled me out of a ditch. You gave me courage and wisdom; you taught me and you cared about me! I have to thank you for my first good times—' "

"Oh, for the Lord's sake! the man said impatiently. He got up and went into the little apartment he had designated as the kitchen. In a moment or two he was back with a plate of cookies. "Still like 'em?" he asked carelessly. But she saw his eyes were wet.

"Do you still eat cookies all day and all night?"

"Pretty much. So you got a companion's position that only lasted a few days? What busted that up?"

"Well, it was only to be for a few days. From the beginning."

"I see. So what're you doing now?"

" I'm living with my grandmother."

"I didn't know you had a grandmother. Where's she been living all these years?"

"She lived across the bay."

"You used to go and see her?"

"No, I didn't know she was alive. You see, my mother quarreled with her when I was a baby."

"Father's mother, eh?"

"No, my mothers own mother. But she didn't want my mother to marry the way she did, and my father was older and not very successful or romantic, I imagine Anyway, she sort of —put them out of the house," Jennifer phrased it delicately.

"But now she's turned to you for help?"

"Well, no, not exactly. She sort of sat around waiting for them to come back and say they were sorry, and it happened that they both died shortly afterward. I was quite a little girl, and Betty didn't know anything about it, so there was no one to tell her."

"How'd you find her?"

"She found me, really."

"Staying down here? You you couldn't come over to a supper tomorrow night, could you? The Carerets are down and some of the others of the old set."

"Monty, I'd love it! My Grandmother, I think..." She paused

"Bring the old lady!" Monty said warmly.

"She isn't that kind of old lady." Jennifer laughed, gave him a suddenly demure and apologetic smile. "She's giving a dinner party of her own tomorrow night," she said, "so that I can easily get away. They'll have two tables of bridge afterward; I'll make all the arangements and then slip down here. I've plenty of gas for that."

"Well but looky," he began bewildered, "where are you staying? She's giving a dinner, she plays bridge..."

They were in the doorway now, for Jennifer had risen with an air of departure after a startled glance at her wrist watch, and Monty had accompanied her. Beyond the narrow strip of garden and the cliff the burnshoreward in long level combers. Gulls were specks of black aginst the glare; every spear of lush sea grass stood up, outlined in lines of fire. Toward the south a long headland ran out into the ocean, and the creamy sand of the dunes, tumbling inland in long patterened hillocks and valleys, was dappled with purple shadow.

"Not all grandmother's are poor," Jennifer observed simply. Her laughing eyes met the man's eyes.

"You don't mean to say....?"

"Yes, I do. I am still Sara Crewe."

"It's comfort, it's security for you, Jinny?"

"It's more than that. And you started me."

Monty laid an arm affectionately about her shoulders and they stood together looking out at the ocean.

"You didn't' need much of a start."

"You'll never know. You started me, and then Julie came in and suggested that I take the Vogelsang's job, and that's how my grandmother found me. It all hangs together." She twisted her shoulders a little in his hold and smiled up at him, her eyes close to his own. Monty kissed her on the temple.

"Happy, Jinny?"

"The happiest woman in the world....And the unhappiest." She added the last phrase after a moment's thought. "You see, I love him horribly, Monty. Terribly. And not just with—with excitement this time; but all through and through. Thinking about having breakfasts with him, telling him about the gas bill, telephoning him at the office to say that the baby's better. I love him," Jennifer went on, speaking dreamily now, "through all the ways and kinds and, types of a woman's loving—weeding out the garden, making cookies, trimming a Christmas tree, the last thing at night and the first thing in the morning. Everything seems a waste of time, somehow, until he comes home. And he may not come home!"

"Then why didn't you marry him?"

"Oh...." She looked away, flushing and laughing. "Panic, the last minute. I was a fool. I've always been a fool! But I'm less of a fool—how'll I say this? I'm less of a fool," Jennifer worded it carefully, "than I would have been if you hadn't taken hold of me!"

"Was there ever a time, I wonder," the man said, "that you'd have—no, maybe not." Their eyes met a little consciously and they both laughed.

"There'll never be a time that I don't love you, Monty," Jennifer said seriously. "I have to run; I'll be late! Good-by. I'll be here around seven tomorrow night."

Suddenly she turned fully, put her hands on his shoulders, raised her face, and kissed him on the mouth. Then she was running away across the cliff and down to the great tumbled boulders that lined the shore. He watched the lithe young figure in the old roll-top sweater and brief skirt; her shabby tennis shoes were very firm on the tipped surfaces of the rocks. The rising tide swelled into and brimmed little pools filled with a kaleidoscope of color; sea urchins, starfish, abalone, anemones, set in an undersea world of waving ribbon grasses and strange fungus brilliance of scarlet and purple. Jennifer turned before she mounted the narrow path that led up to the golf links and waved at the figure still watching her from the sunset-drenched cliff.

Mollie and Dan Moore had a pleasant, ugly, unimaginative house out in St. Francis Wood. It was squarely built, with plenty of windows, five good bedrooms, countless closets and pantries and storage space, a fine furnace, wide hallways, four bathrooms, refrigerator, washing machine, wide back balcony, wide tiled terrace flanked with young beeches. It was a house of children; Mollie had four children, and most of her friends at least one or two. The talk in the house was all of formulas, baby schools, "sitters," nursery discipline, nursery morals. Every young mother had a system to expound, or was eager to drink in news of a system to make a bored baby eat her meals, to prevent a first baby from psychopathic evidences of jealousy of a second baby, to circumvent the dreadful "no" and "why" phases. They all read flimsy magazines filled with brief articles signed only by initials and purporting to solve all maternal problems from prenatal months up to the draft age. Many of them had tried to write these articles, and some had succeeded and were modestly elated at being heard.

Jennifer was immensely popular among them; she came in about once a week after hours of Red Cross work on her way to the canteen, and by her very ignorance of their difficulties kept them laughing. Jennifer adored children, and the children as always reciprocated; Mollie's friends knew a part, at least, of her romantic story, and they could not study enough the Cinderella girl who sat among them in all her beauty and happiness. The line of her frocks, the set of her hats, the tones of her voice, and the beauty and fragrance and vitality that came with her were all equally fascinating.

Mollie, a baby dangling at her hip, would meet ner at the front door.

"Anthony and I were looking down the street, Jen, and we saw your car. Take him; he weighs a ton. Go to Aunt Jen, lover. Darling, I'm so glad to see you! Nobody else is here. Norma's kids all in quarantine for measles—they haven't got it, mind you, but they're in quarantine because they were exposed. So she can't come. And Harry's mother landed on Barbara last night. She telephoned that she didn't have time to take down the guest-room curtains even; she say's they're black. And Nannan had to fall down and practically tear her face open; I asked Barbara if it showed and she said, 'Showed! She looks like a bowl of cooked rhubarb.'"

Jennifer, loving every bit of the gossip, would carry the baby upstairs, distribute small toys to the other children, sit down breathless with the heavy baby in her lap. Mollie instantly would attack a basket of rough-dried wash. The diapers must all be folded—between the two youngest children these amounted to about a hundred a day. The small shirts were folded too, and the ridiculous curled, shapeless lumps that were sleeping garments, tops and lowers, little anchors and clovers depicted on their faded pink flannelette scupulously matched. But the rompers and bibs and little frocks and slips had to go downstairs again to be ironed. Mollie whipped through this work with the speed of a machine; what her hand found to do she did with a will, never wasting a word of protest when a crib just made must be remade, or an upset tray spilled cereal, milk, prune mush, chopped beets upon the nursery carpet. Before the calamity had finished its work Mollie was whirling fresh sheets about her head or was down on her knees with mopping cloths. Jennifer could sit comfortably holding the baby, meanwhile fabricating a story filled with the mewing of good pussies and the scratching of bad, for the delectation of the older children.

"Mollie, I don't know how to help you," she said one winter afternoon.

"If you knew how you help me, just holding Anthony Daniel. It gives me a chance." Mollie rushed about, gathering small wrappers and nightwear, laid microscopic slippers in a row. "Mom often comes over at this time," she said, "but she's got a bad cold now and she doesn't want to pass it around. Come on; girls, baths. "It doesn't make the slightest difference to me whether you want baths or not; baths you are going to have tonight and every night. If you were dead? No, dead people can't have baths. Because they're down under the ground.. Untie your own shoes, darling, you can untie your shoes; show Aunt Jen how beautifully you can untie your shoes."

Jennifer watched Anthony Daniel with deep satisfaction as he lay luxuriously across her knees with his big hard head in the curve of her arm. He was draining his bottle so rapidly that the warm milk left a film of white on the glass. His meal was accompanied by convulsive springs of his legs that all but propelled him to the floor and furious activity with his arms and his square big hands which clutched at the glittering clip on Jennifer's frock, at the curl of chestnut hair that went around her ear, at the corner of her mouth, obligating her to keep up a constant undertoned protest of "Stop, Tony. No, no, darling. Let go! Mollie, just take his bad little fingers out of my mouth!"

"Jean," said Mollie, when the long-awaited moment had come for tucking Anthony in the nursery and tucking bibs on the small girls for the last act of their crowded day. "Mash that up for her, Jen, and spoon it into her; she'll take it. It's the party unknown within a million miles of me who has my heart broken over her comestibles," Mollie diverged to say significantly with a downward glance of resentment and scorn for her middle daughter's flaxen head.

"You were going to say....?" Jennifer prompted her when there was a lull.

"Well, I don't know whether I was going to say or not," Mollie said hesitantly. "Dan would murder me. He made me swear that I'd keep this a secret from everyone—especially from you. Jen, it's six," she added, glancing at the clock.

"I know perfectly well what time your children have their supper, Mollie. And you're dodging something. I have plenty of time tonight, for Granny and I are staying at the Fairmount and we don't dine until late. She has people there playing bridge, so she won't care how late I am, What were you starting to say?"

"Well, it's this. And no matter what Dan says," said Mollie, "and not matter what Jim says, I say you ought to know."

"Jim?" Jennifer whispered, changing color.

"Married? That's what you were afraid to tell me." Jennifer could feel her heart going clock-clock-clock in her breast.

"No, not married," Mollie said with a sad little laugh; "but — Dan'll kill me for this!—he's hurt. He's come home wounded."

Herrings Delay Large Liner

Southampton, Jan. 6 (Reuters)—Herrings—thousands of them—delayed the 24,000-ton America on her latest voyage,, it was made today.

Chief engineer Pat Brennan, talking to reporters before the crack liner set out on a return trip to New York, said the vessel slowed down to 19 knots compared with the usual 23 or 24. Nobody could figure it out.

On arrival, it was discovered that about four tons of the fish had been hauled in by "scoops" in the ship's bottom used to take in sea water for cooling engines.

"Both the port and starboard condensers were crammed full of the fish," said Brennan. "It took us five hours to shovel them out."

Hamilton, Jan. 6. (CP)—In a move to save the lives of birds in ice-sheathed areas of the Hamilton district, the Hamilton society for the prevention of cruelty to animals today provided 500 pounds of grain for distribution by airplane.

About ten flights are to be undertaken today. The grain will be dropped in five-pound bags which, when they break, scattered the kernels over marsh and woodland.

N.B. SUSPENDS TAX NEGOTIATIONS WITH DOMINION

McNair Charges "Gross Discrimination" by Ottawa in Offer to Br. Columbia

Fredericton, Jan. 6 —(CP)— Announcement that New Brunswick has suspended taxation negotiations with Ottawa was made this afternoon by Premier John B. McNair, who charged "gross discrimination" on the part of the federal government and termed the Dominion offer to British Columbia an "affront" to New Brunswick.

As there now seemed little likelihood of an early settlement, he said municipalities could proceed with drafting of legislation in the personal income tax field and the provincial government would prepare legislation to reenter the corporation tax field.

These fields were relinquished to the Dominion in the wartime tax agreement which ended Oct. 31.

"As a citizen of New Brunswick I cannot, as matters now stand, support New Brunswick's further participation in the taxation negotiations," Premier McNair said.

He released the text of a telegram sent to Prime Minister Mackenzie King Dec. 17 when some of the terms of the British Columbia agreement were made public.

Situation Reconsidered.

The telegram declared New Brunswick had been compelled to reconsider its position in view of the federal government's offer to the other province.

Mr. McNair said in the telegram New Brunswick had no issue with British Columbia, "which is entitled to seek the best terms available," but we find it impossible to understand the action of the Dominion government in negotiating a deal entirely outside the ambit of the budget proposals without counterbalancing adjustments for other provinces. The present situation is entirely unacceptable to this government."

Premier McNair said not only would British Columbia be getting approximately $21 per capita allowance as against New Brunswick's $15, but the gap between the two provinces would continue to widen as Canada's gross national production grew.

Depression Debts

In addition, the federal government had signified its willingness to write off $8,000,000 in depression debts and assist her in refunding $26,000,000, a portion without interest charges, thereby permitting British Columbia to pay both principal and interest with payments totalling $1,124,675 annually.

Previously, interest alone cost the province $1,020,000.

There had been no suggestion from Ottawa that New Brunswick or her municipalities should be relieved of any obligations assumed by them to finance direct relief.

British Columbia's agreement would also mean that her capita allowance would be increased proportionate to any New Brunswick increase which might develop should gross national production go up. In other words, as the gross national production grew, the gap between British Columbia's $21 per capita allowance and New Brunswick's $15, would widen.

"This," said Premier McNair, "is downright discrimination and therefore entirely unacceptable to the province of New Brunswick."

U.S. Asks Russia To End Military Control of Dairen

Washington, Jan. 6. (AP)—The United States has asked Russia and China to arrange without further delay to end Soviet military control of Dairen and open the Manchurian port to world traffic under Chinese administration.

The action, announced today by the State Department, was the first official step, taken by Washington following refusal of Soviet authorities Dec. 20 to allow three American civilians to land at Dairen. The Russian ordered the United States naval ship which took the civilians there to leave port in 20 minutes.

The 20-minute notice was served after the ship overstayed a 48-hour permit under which it had entered. State Department officials have said the Russians were within their rights in ordering the ship out and have refrained from any criticism of the so-called "ultimatum" nature of the departure order.

The State Department said a note was delivered to the Soviet Foreign Office at Moscow and the Chinese Foreign Office at Nanking Jan. 3. It said:

"The American government considers it desirable that the current unsatisfactory situation with regard to the status and control of the Port of Dairen be promply considered by the Chinese and Soviet governments with a view to the implementation of the pertinent provisions of the Soviet-Chinese agreement of August 14, 1945, in regard to Dairen.

"This government perceives no reason why there should be further delay in reopening the port under Chinese administration, to international commerce as contemplated in the aforementioned agreement.

"The government of the United States, while fully appreciating that this is a matter for direct negotiation between the Chinese and Soviet governments, feels that it has a responsibility to American interests in general to raise the question with the two directly interested governments. It hopes that the abnormal conditions now prevailing at Dairen may be terminated at an early date and that normal conditions may be reestablished which will permit American citizens to visit and reside at Dairen in pursuit of their legitimate activities.

"In the foregoing connection, this government also wishes to express the hope that agreement can be reached soon for the resumption of traffic on the Chinese Changchun railway.

"It is believed that prompt implementation of the agreements with regard to Dairen and the railway would constitute a major contribution to the re-establishment of normal conditions in the Far East and the revival of generally beneficial commercial activity. This government therefore would be glad to have the assurance of the Chinese and Soviet governments that all necessary steps to this end will be taken in the near future."

Britain Preparing Big Offensive To Crush Rebels

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

London, Jan. 6 —(AP)— Government sources said today British military authorities were preparing the biggest offensive in modern Palestine's history to crush what they called "the open rebellion against law and order" by Jewish extremists.

All branches of Britain's army in the Holy Land, estimated to total about 100,000 men, will take part, these sources said. Troops from Egypt are reaching the Holy Land by road and rail as reinforcements.

The trigger for the operation is expected to be British cabinet ratification of proposals formulated in conferences among Palestine's high commissioner, Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham, Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, Prime Minister Attlee, Foreign Secretary Bevin and Colonial Secretary Arthur Creech Jones.

The informants said the British government took the view that whatever settlement finally emerged for Palestine, the reimposition of law and order was Britain's first obligation.

A final decision on Palestine's fate also may come from Britain this week. The possibilities include:

1. Partition plan for the Holy Land, which would create independent Arab and Jewish states there.

2. Considered a last resort solution, British surrender of the League of Nations mandate to the United Nations Organization.

Whatever solution is finally adopted, with or without Arab and Jewish consent, government sources said the United Nations would have to ratify the new arrangement.

WOULD BAN

plea for a universal training program. He also called again for a merger of the armed forces.

On the economic front, Mr. Truman outlined five major policies calling for:

(a) Promotion "of greater harmony" between management and labor;

(b) Restriction of monopoly and unfair business practices, assistance to small business and promotion of private enterprise;

(c) Continuation "of an aggressive program of home construciton".

(d) A balanced budget during the next fiscal year with a substantial surplus and

(e) Production of "a fair level of return to farmers in post-war agriculture".

Later in the week, Congress will get two more messages from the President—one dealing with the budget, and the other with the economic outlook, a report on which a Senate-House Committee must make recommendations next month.

In the Senate, Republican sources said one of the first jobs to be undertaken will be the selection of a committee of experts to begin a thorough inquiry into proposals to expand Social Security coverage.

Postpone Bilbo Action

The Senate's decision Saturday to postpone for at least two months any action on the controversy over seating Theodore G. Bilbo (Dem.-Miss.) left Democrats with only 44 active members to the Republicans' 51.

Bilbo left shortly after the decision for New Orleans, where he will undergo a second cancer operation on his mouth and throat. He announced that "If I live," he will be back to demand the seat the Republicans said he shall not have until ouster charges are heard against him.

In the meantime Bilbo will continue to draw his pay under the deal that finally let the Senate complete its organizing tasks after two days of stalemate.

Hearings on Labor legislation are expected to get under way in both Houses shortly. The Senate, following custom, awaited House action on tax-cutting before beginning any study of that matter. Bills to pare a flat 20 per cent off all individual income tax bills except those in the top brackets and to speed the rollback in some wartime excise levies are due for early action in the house.

All Main Routes Ontario Roads Now Plowed Out

(By The Canadian Press)

Ontario Highways Department officials gave some hope today that all main routes would be open for travel following a weekend that saw heavy drifting in the northern areas and severe icing conditions in the Niagara Peninsula.

Hamilton suffered a 17-hour power break Sunday when scores of high-tension lines broke down under their weight of ice and snapped the 60-cycle link with DeCew Falls near St. Catharines. A gas shortage followed, causing an industrial shutdown. Residences which used 25-cycle power from Niagara Falls were not affected, but industries, apartment buildings and suburban areas suffered inconvenience.

Snowplows operated all night on many roads but failed to break through to Midland, isolated with five-foot drifts blocking the outlets to Barrie and Orillia. Owen Sound also reported heavy drifting with buses running as much as two hours late.

An accident on the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo railway line at Smithville, southeast of Hamilton was blamed on the ice storm. No one was hurt but four coal cars and the caboose of one freight train were wrecked when a second freight plowed into its rear.

Pupils Say Chinese Teacher is Tops

Killarney, Man., Jan. 6 (CP).—Elin Lee is Manitoba's only Chinese school teacher and as far as Killarney is concerned, she's "tops".

"She's one of the best sports we have. She's an excellent bowler, a swell guy and a good mixer."

And Miss Lee, slight, dark and vivacious, says she likes Killarney and the people.

Born in Baldur, Man., she has been teaching school for four years. She taught a year at Willen, Man., a year at Rowland and this is her second term at Baldur.

Miss Lee, whose parents came to Canada from China, received her early education at Baldur and her normal school training in Winnipeg. Three of her brothers served with the Canadian armed forces during the war and now one is studying engineering at the University of Manitoba.

There are two brothers and a sister at home. Another sister, Lillian, is nursing at the Ninette, Man., sanatorium and Anna is studying commerce at the university.

Miss Lee wears a diamond but she won't say anything about it. As for teaching: "I like it very much—that's why I teach."

EDEN'S EN ROUTE TO SOUTHERN VACATION

Among distinguished arrivals on the Queen Elizabeth in New York as 1947 started off in low gear were the Honorable Anthony Eden and Mrs. Eden, who are radiating smiles for the cameras here. CLEAR WEATHER

Weather forecasters' assurance that good weather would last through Tuesday came as welcome news to Highway Department men who concentrated their snowclearing efforts on Highway 6, which runs from Hamilton to Owen Sound, and on Highway 24 between Shelburne and Collingwood.

Severe drifting from Goderich to Guelph and from Brampton to Collingwood as well as in Muskoka district has made highways narrow and driving heavy.

"But throughout the rest of Ontario, normal winter driving conditions prevail," a Highway Department spokesman said.

Owen Sound reported its district's worst roads were in the area of Reddicksville on Highway 24 and the portion of Highway 6 from Ferndale North to Tobermory at the tip of the Bruce Peninsula. Elsewhere in the area, all provincial highways were open.

Washington, Jan. 6 — (AP) — The government-owned big and little inch oil pipeline system, successfully converted to transmission of natural gas a month ago, may take on new supplies this week to reach capacity output.

Federal Power Commission staff members disclosed today that gas from the two lines already is supplying consumers as far north as Buffalo, N.Y., and is helping relieve shortages in Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri. The lines directly serve Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Illustrated Map Of Eastern Ontario

A colorful illustrated map of the Ottawa Valley and the St. Lawrence vacation route has been published by Brading's Capital Brewery Limited, Ottawa to highlight the vacation attractions of Eastern Ontario and the Gatineau district.

The map covers an area extending from Belleville to the Quebec border, south into New York state north to Mont Laurier, and includes the western districts of the Laurentians. It is reproduced in four colors with historical notes edited by Dr. L. Brault, Director of Research, Public Archives of Canada, and provides a digest of tourist information concerning communities and vacation spots in the Ottawa Valley.

References to the best fishing and hunting areas are included and important industries are marked. Canada's capital city, Ottawa, is the map's focal point and international bridges, ferries and all routes between border points and communities are illustrated.

The Brading vacation map is being distributed free to tourist bureaux, chambers of commerce travel agencies, transportation companies and other organizations to publicize the attractions of the Ottawa Valley. It is a handy pocket-sized map, suitable for easy reference.

Royal Greeting for Stirling Couple — Congratulations from all parts of the Dominion on their 71st wedding anniversary New Year's Day reached a climax for Mr. and Mrs. Robert Eggleton of Stirling when a special greeting was received from Buckingham Palace. Mr. Eggleton is 90, his wife 87.

Smaller Cattle Shipments, Black Market Buyers Blamed For Toronto Meat Scarcity

Toronto, Jan. 7 —(CP)— Beef was reported scarcer than usual in Toronto butcher shops today and half a dozen possible reasons were advanced.

Most generally held was the theory that the shortage is a seasonal affair that crops up annually after Christmas and New Year's. Last week's storm aggravated the situation, it was said, and blocked sideroads in many areas still kept animals off the market.

This suggestion came from F. C. Fletcher, manager of the Ontario stockyards, from a packing plant spokesman and from a prominent Toronto butcher.

But the packer took the view that, in addition, some cattlemen were keeping animals off the market in the hope of forcing an increase in prices for live cattle.

"I may be wrong, and perhaps next week or the week after we'll see more cattle on the market than we expect," he said. "But I can't help feeling that we may be up against the same situation as last year—with producers holding cattle off the market to create an artificial scarcity—and that it's here three months earlier than in 1946."

The black market theory has been raised again but a veteran meat dealer said that in his opinion the so-called black marketers were out-of-town buyers—chiefly from Montreal to Windsor—who were willing to pay enough money to outbid local dealers. Their free-spending activities, it was said, were partly responsible for the lack of meat on Toronto dealers' shelves.

A packer said his firm bought few cattle at the stockyards because prices asked were too high to enable him to sell meat profitably.

$40,000 Holstein Bull is Dead

This cooler air is expected to cover all regions by Wednesday morning but temperatures are not expected to drop sharply except in northern sections. Snow and freezing rain is falling just south of the Great Lakes and is expected to enter the southern section of the province this morning. Intermittent snow is falling in Northern Ontario ahead of the advancing cold air and will affect the northern forecast regions.

Woolworth Chain Founder Dies

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 7 — (AP)—Charles Sumner Woolworth, who was a founder of the Woolworth chain of 5 and 10 cent stores 65 years ago, died today at his home. He was 90 years old.

Woolworth, who had been in ill health for several weeks, opened his first store here 65 years ago and later formed the F. W. Woolworth Company with his brother, the late Frank W. Woolworth, and the late Fred M. Kirby of Wilkes-Barre.

He was born Aug. 1, 1856, at Rodman, N.Y. The 5-and-10 cents store idea was credited to Frank Woolworth but the success of the enterprise was largely attributed to Charles, who began his career sweeping floors and tending fires at Watertown, N.Y., for $4 a week.

Prospector Says Starvation, Disease Caused Deaths in "Headless Valley"

Vancouver, Jan. 7 (CP)—Myths of "Headless Valley," the uncharted mystery land of the Northwest Territories on the banks of the south Nahanni river were dissipated here by Walter J. Tully, 29-year-old prospector-explorer, one of the few men to enter the country and return to tell the tale.

Thirteen prospectors, traders and trappers who entered the valley, some 200 miles northeast of Whitehorse, Y.T., are known to have died in the rugged wilderness.

Tully, who recently returned from the Yukon, claimed that he penetrated the valley fastness in 1945, exploring its 200 mile length and found a body believed to be that of Ernest Savard, a 40-year-old prospector. The body, head virtually severed, was found encased in a tight sleeping bag, zipped up to the dead man's neck.

Gold in Abundance

Indian lore links the valley with ancient tales of headhunters, seeking to protect their gold deposits reported in abundance.

Tully, however believes disease and not headhunters responsible for the "mystery deaths."

"We believe that Savard, like many others, died of a mixture of scurvy and starvation," he said. "The coyotes couldn't get his body but they gnawed away the head."

He and two partners, Walter Budd and Jack Thorstein of Vancouver, went up the tortuous, wild Nahanni by small boat, through a narrow pass into the sub-tropical valley.

They found little gold in the valley, but there was plenty of gold-bearing quartz in the hills.

The valley is almost ringed by jagged mountains, and is 30 to 40 degrees above temperatures of the outside country.

Warm As Vancouver

"It is at least as warm as Vancouver," said Tully in telling of lush vegetation, hot sulphurous springs, and a waterfall of tremendous height.

"It was the most wonderful sight I've ever seen," he said. "I waited five hours to get a picture of it in sunlight. Most of the time the valley is mist-shrouded."

He has an explanation for the Indian tales of prehistoric animals.

"The high winds do strange things to the ice cliffs outside the valley. I saw many shapes which resembled prehistoric animals cut out of the ice."

Two Canadian expeditions and one from the United States are planning exploration trips to the valley.

Tully said he had brought pictures out with him but lost them when he was held-up on a Vancouver street recently.

He has offered to guide an expedition, headed by Tom Carolan of New Westminster, B.C., planning to enter the Nahanni country in March.

CANADA SELLING FOR CREDIT AND BUYING FOR CASH

Parliament Likely To Hear Plenty Of Questions Asked On This Question

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Jan. 7 (CP)—Year-end foreign trade figures reveal that Canada in 1946 made its biggest export sales on credit and its biggest import purchases for cold cash which, as one trade official agreed, is not a happy way of doing business under ordinary circumstances.

Parliament, which resumes Jan. 30, is likely to hear plenty of questions asked as to how long this situation is likely to continue and what it will do to Canada's reserve of United States funds, which stood at $1,500,000,000 at the beginning of 1946.

Canada imported from the United States in 1946 goods to an estimated value of $1,332,000,000 and exported to that country an estimated $847,000,000, exclusive of gold. If the gold exports totalled $100,000,000, as seems probable, it would leave $865,000,000 to be provided from other sources, including the tourist traffic.

It has been estimated American tourists spent $200,000,000 in Canada last year but during the same time Canadians spent large sums while visiting United States.

Favorable Balances

The difference between what Americans spent in Canada and Canadians spent in United States may not help the Canadian exchange situation by more than $65,000,000, it is said, which would leave the remainder, to be provided by other sources, at around $800,000,000.

Final figures may show that Canada has favorable balances in her trade with some South American countries which would be paid for in United States funds. If that turns out to be correct it will also lessen the drain of Canada's nest-egg of American funds.

Foreign trade in 1947 may prove less of a drain on Canada's holdings of American dollars. The United States demand for maximum importation of Canadian newsprint is likely to continue. Gold production may be somewhat greater in this country as the labor situation eases. The outlook in fact is bright for an over-all increase in Canadian exports to her neighbor this year.

Canada is starting the New Year with 88 trade commissioners and assistants spread over the world as compared with 61 when the war broke out. They will be looking not only for markets in which to sell Canadian goods but also for goods in foreign countries Canada can advantageously purchase.

CHURCHILL MEMOIRS NEARLY COMPLETED

London, Jan. 7—(CP Cable)—The Daily Express said Monday Winston Churchill has virtually finished his memoirs covering the last 10 years. The newspaper added that the wartime prime minister has been working on the book during the Christmas parliamentary recess at his home at Chartwell, Kent.

"Brides of Despair" Tell Of Mistreatment By U.S. Officials, People

London, Jan. 7. (AP—Prominently headlined stories of "Brides of Despair"—British girls "abandoned" by their American ex-soldier husband in New York—appeared in most London newspapers today, with purported details of neglect by United States officials and mistreatment by the American people.

The stories stemmed from an interview given by Mrs. Millie Vincent when she arrived from the United States last night with a tale of "Divorce by Proxy" from Charles Woodrow Vincent of Birmingham, Ala.

Mrs. Vincent, who has a 12-year-old son by a previous marriage, told the British Press Association that when she reached New York last August she was informed by an immigration official:

"You are a divorced woman. You have no right to travel here under false pretences at the expense of the U.S. government."

Until a few weeks ago Mrs. Vincent said, she and two dozen other British women, unable to find their husbands, lived in a hotel, with government allowances of $2 a day for food and another $2 for sleeping accommodation.

"The money was only sufficient to buy breakfast," said Mrs. Vincent. "The hotel cast me $80 a week.

"English women were shabbily treated in New York. American women sneered at us and shop assistants (clerks) kept us waiting," she added.

A New York dispatch to The Daily Mail said "Hundreds of British war brides are stranded and living in squalor in New York, awaiting passage back to Great Britain."

"Without the help of the American Red Cross, which pays for their hotel accommodation . . . and gives them a little money each week, they would be penniless," the dispatch said.

Dutch Girls Like Canadians

The Pas, Man., (CP)—A Dutch war bride said today that The Netherlands is so perturbed over the number of Dutch girls who have or plan to become married to Canadian servicemen that newspapers are attempting to forestall further marriages by painting a gloomy picture of their chances for marital happiness.

Mrs. Joseph Boschler, formerly Guurtje Wipjcs of Zaandam, near Amsterdam, who came to The Pas three weeks ago after marrying the Canadian soldier who saved her life by bringing her food and medical attention, tells about it.

"After all, it's only a small country you know, and already 6,000 young women have left. The girls think highly of Canadians but the men—they wonder. Four thousand Dutch girls already have come to Canada and another 2,000 are scheduled to arrive.

"Me? I think Canada is wonderful. I'll never go back to Holland—perhaps for a visit but never for long."

Mrs. Boschler, formerly a nurse, bears scars from beatings she received in Dutch and German concentration camps where she spent eight months after Nazi investigators found she was sheltering two Jewish children whose parents had been arrested by the gestapo.

She also worked for the Dutch underground.

ALPHONSE ROCCO SHOT TO DEATH IN HIS HIDEOUT

Futile Flight Follows New Year's "Camera" Shooting of Former Wife

By TONI ADAMS

Grand Gorge, N.Y., Jan. 7 — (AP)— "They'll never get me alive," Alphonse Rocco swore before he was shot to death in his snowy hilltop hideout near here, after a futile flight following the New Year's Eve "camera" shooting of his former wife in New York City.

Rocco met death last night under an evergreen tree and a full moon in Patchin Hollow, as he crouched in a sleeping bag taken from one of the two Catskill mountain farm homes where he gained shelter for nearly 48 hours by brandishing two pistols.

He fired four shots from his German automatic as State Police and New York City detectives waded through knee-deep snow to surround him. Then Trooper James H. Smith, after shooting at close range, called:

"Come on out, you skunk!"

Rocco could not come out. A bullet from one of the guns fired by Smith, Cpl. Francis Hilfrank and New York City detective Henry Strauss had struck home. One had smashed his nose and the blood ran over the crusted snow.

Pleas for Conservation Of Wild Life, Sanctuary Made to Commission

Toronto, Jan. 7 — (CP)—Pleas for conservation of wild life and of the forests that give them sanctuary were heard yesterday as the Royal Commission on Forestry listened to government experts deal with varied questions.

Dr. C. D. H. Clarke of the Ontario government's fish and wild life division told commissioners: "We should aim to have moose distributed over the whole of Northern Ontario or know the reason why this objective cannot be attained."

He said moose have been decreasing throughout eastern North America and until the cause was determined no real moose management could be possible.

Tourists spent an estimated $165,000,000, in Ontario during 1946, H. H. McKay, Ontario Forest Department biologist, said. He told of the time when Lake Ontario was well stocked with salmon before indiscriminate cutting of forest changed the size and nature of streams, driving the fish from their spawning grounds. Efforts are being made to determine whether salmon can be brought back.

DIVERSIONARY LINE MAY END POWER TROUBLES

Hydro Linesmen Race Against Time to Prevent Power Break at Hamilton

Hamilton, Jan. 7 —(CP)—Hydro linesmen raced against time early today in an effort to prevent another disastrous power break which could close down the industries of this city of 166,000. Only a single, overloaded transmission line was bringing in power to operate the city's many big factories and to provide fuel gas for them and Hamilton's citizens.

Hard working repair crews sought to patch up another of the four transmission lines which bring 60-cycle power into Hamilton from Decew Falls at St. Catharines, and to erect a diversionary line around the ice-coated towers that lay wrecked between the two centres. The diversionary line would correct the trouble once and for all.

Hamilton's on again, off again power troubles started during the weekend when the huge steel towers topped under their load of ice, carrying the transmission lines with them. Residential districts were not affected because they use 25-cycle from Niagara, but apartments and surrounding towns were cut off for 17 hours Sunday.

No Decision On Gold Mines Relief Until the Budget

Ottawa, Jan, 7 —(CP)—Representations have been made to the cabinet for a better financial break for the gold mining industry of Northern Quebec and Ontario but no decision will be taken until the budget is brought down at the coming session of parliament, it was learned today.

This step follows an interview early last month with resources Minister Glen and Rt. Hon. J. L. Ilsley, then Finance Minister, in which two delegations from the mining areas urged the government to consider the possibility of granting special tax treatment to the industry and its employees.

Mr. Glen told the delegation the government proposed to give "immediate and serious consideration" to all phases of the gold mining industry.

It was learned that Mr. Glen since has placed the representations before the cabinet.

On the Toronto stock exchange today Junios and senior gold groups posted gains, based on rumors of imminent government assistance of some kind to the gold mining industry.

SEE COMBINED TRAINING SCHOOL AS POSSIBILITY

Such a School Would Enhance Tendency To Closer Co-ordination Of Canadian Forces

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Jan. 7 — (CP)—Establishment of a combined operations training school may be one of the more tangible outgrowths of inter-services co-operation to emerge from current studies of the peacetime activities of the Canadian forces.

It is too early yet to say definitely that the school will join others — the new schools for the various branches of the army, for example — springing up to keep the Dominion abreast of post-war developments, but it is under study by high officers of the army, navy and air force.

Of the three services, the army is understood to be further advanced than the others in its consideration of this particular subject.

The school — and chances that it will eventually materialize appear good — would enhance the current trend towards closer co-ordination of the forces, a matter still under active study by the new defence minister, 48-year-old Brooke Claxton, towards the close of his first month in office.

Lessons of War

It would bring together soldiers, sailors and airmen of the regular services in training patterned upon and developing out of the combined operations lessons learned during a war which bared the utter necessity for the closest co-operation among the forces of any modern belligerent.

It would also throw a new light upon the comparatively recent visit to Canada of Maj.-Gen. R.E. (Lucky) Laycock, Britain's young chief of combined operations. His visit to Ottawa at the end of a Washington trip now is viewed in a more serious light than the rather social event by which it was originally characterized.

Combined Training During War

It is not improbable that Gen. Laycock discussed at some length with Canadian officers the picture of British plans for the future in this particular field. But his visit to Washington also suggests that combined operations may be one of the categories to fall within the orbit of British-United States standardization of equipment and exchange of personnel as recently announced in London.

Canada made her debut in the combined operations training field with a joint Army-Navy school at Courtenay, B.C., during the war. This location, already approved once, would certainly be given considerable study as the potential permanent site.

As for action, the Canadians at Dieppe, Sicily and Normandy learned the lessons of combined operations the hard way. And some of their officers and men are still in uniform to pass them along.

Winnipeg Physicist Gets Award For Gallantry in Atomic Mishap

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Jan 7 (CP)—John Hersey, a tall, slender author, heard his report on Hiroshima pronounced the "finest journalistic job" of 1946. Then he stepped before a microphone to describe how a Canadin physicist, Dr. Louis Slotin, sacrificed his life in a final experiment with the atomic energy that made history at Hiroshima.

In soft-spoken tones, Hersey told last night how the selfless action of the 35-year-old Winnipeg physicist saved seven fellow scientists from possible death last May in a laboratory test at the atomic research centre in Los Alamos, N.M.

"Dr. Slotin noticed that the atomic pile was reacting at a faster rate than anticipated," Hersey told an audience of 3,000 as he presented one of 31 awards at the 11th annual "page one" ball of the Newspaper Guild of New York.

"Without hesitating and without regard for his own safety, Dr. Slotin plunged his hands into the pile and prevented serious injury to his seven colleagues, all of whom recovered."

Hersey presented the posthumous award to Sam Slotin, younger brother of the singleminded scientist who kept his wartime activities secret from his family through the final nine days preceding his death.

"Louis knew he was going to die," said the younger Slotin, who came to New York with his wife Corinne to receive the award. "But he wouldn't tell even mother or dad what had happened or what he had been doing."

by radio-active rays emanating by radiolactive rays emanating from the atomic pile and his dark, wavy hair turned brittle. His colleagues all recovered.

The tribute to Dr. Slotin, headed "page one award to atom martyr," was in the form of a "stick" (paragraph-sized section of linotype) containing the text of the award citation in a transparent plastic case.

Dr. Slotin, educated in Winnipeg schools and at King's College, London, did research work at Chicago before joining atomic projects at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Los Alamos. He was scheduled to leave for the Bikini test immediately after the fatal experiment at Los Alamos, many of whose details still are shrouded in secrecy.

Thirty other awards, including one to Hersey for his report on the Aug. 6, 1945, bombing of Hiroshima, were made before an audience recruited largely from celebrities of stage, screen, radio and journalism.

Henry A. Wallace, former United States Secretary of Commerce, accepted a public affairs achievement award in a speech asserting that "in the long run people never will be against the liberal cause."

Among other recipients were heavyweight champion Joe Louis; Henry Morgan, radio comedian; Frederic March, star of the film "The Best Years of Our Lives"; and Herman Levin, co-producer of the musical comedy "Call Me Mister."

Report Partition Seen Only Hope For Holy Land

Observers Think Showdown Likely With Arab States

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

London, Jan. 7. (AP)—Foreign Secretary Bevin and Colonial Secretary Jones were reported by a government source today to have "decided in principle" that partition of Palestine into Arab and Jewish states was Britain's only hope of settling the Holy Land problem.

While the Colonial and Foreign offices studied what this informant called "several variations on the partition theme," the British government received an appeal from Hagana, most moderate of Jewish underground organizations in Palestine, to shun any "large-scale retaliatory operations in the Holy Land".

The British Cabinet expected to consider Palestine proposals Thursday. An atmosphere of urgency was heightened by the steady flow of British soldiers, veterans of North African desert warfare, from Egypt into Palestine, where London sources have predicted a large-scale offensive to crush Jewish underground resistance.

Lt.-Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham, Palestine High Commissioner, conferred with Colonial office chiefs on partition proposals, which informants said would range somewhere between the American-supported "Goldmann plan" and a revised version of the semi-federalization scheme announced last year by Herbert Morrison, deputy prime minister.

The Goldmann plan envisaged creation of a Jewish state within the area recommended for the Jews by the 1937 Peel report, plus the Negeb Desert in Southern Palestine. This would give the Jews about sixty per cent of the Holy Land. The revised version of the Morrison plan would give more power to the provinces proposed in the original draft.

In any partition plan, which would be subject to final approval by the United Nations, Britain probably would reserve at least Jerusalem and the port City of Haifa as neutral areas under British trusteeship administration, informants said.

By PAMELA MATTHEWS

London, Jan. 7 — (Reuters) — Fears that Britain may be heading for a showdown with the whole of the Arab Middle East were expressed by political observers today. There is every indication that both in Palestine and Egypt events now are moving to a climax.

It is no secret — although a statement of official policy is unlikely before the Palestine conference opens here Jan. 21—that opinion in Whitehall is moving in favor of partition as the only long-term solution of Palestine's problems.

If such a plan is presented to the delegates of the Arab states who have accepted the British invitation to attend the Palestine conference, they will immediately return home, it is maintained in Arab quarters.

Arabs in London strongly emphasize that partitioning of the Holy Land would be resisted to the limit by the Arab world and that outbreaks of violence in Palestine are certainly to be expected.

No British reply has been sent to the two memoranda from the Arab League urging that the exiled Mufti of Jerusalem, Kaj Amin El Huseini, should be allowed into the Holy Land and that attendance of the Palestine Arab higher committee at the forthcoming conference should be secured.

The committee has refused to attend as long as Britain bars the Mufti.

Well-informed observers here do not expect a Jewish delegation to attend the London talks.

The attitude of the Zionist movement is one of watch and wait — though there might later be modified if a firm offer to establish an independent Jewish state was forthcoming.

Haganah, largest of the Jewish underground groups, declared in a broadcast over the secret Palestine radio station "Voice of Israel" last night that retaliation against recent outbreaks of violence in the Holy Land would "only tend to create more terrorism."

It reiterated its oft-stated appeal to Irgun Zvai Leumi and the so-called Stern gang, the most extreme underground organizations, to cease their attacks against the British.

FARMHOUSE DESTROYED

Lindsay, Jan. 7 (CP). — Word reached here today that the farmhouse of Mr. and Mrs. A. Fox near Haliburton was destroyed by fire last week during the worst blizzard the district experienced in more than 40 years.

The blaze started from an overheated pipe and forced the family, including their four children to flee in night attire.

A call for help to Haliburton village went unanswered due to the storm. When neighbors finally battled their way through the blizzard to the scene, they found the Fox family huddled together in the barn.

Lesson of Dieppe Prompted Act For Citizenship

Hamilton, Jan. 7 —(CP)—Rows of crosses in a cemetery at Dieppe, France, prompted him to sponsor the Canadian Citizenship Act, Health Minister Paul Martin disclosed last night at an annual civic dinner which named Peter W. Gordon, O.B.E., as Hamilton's outstanding citizen for 1945.

The "lesson of Dieppe," the health minister told the dinner of the Advertising and Sales Club, lay in the realization that these men of various national origins had all died as Canadians wearing the same uniforms.

This gave him the inspiration to bring into being a real Canadian citizenship and he determined to do everything in his power to make Canadian citizenship mean something in fact and law.

Mr. Gordon's award coincided with the second day of the observance of citizenship week across the Dominion. Chairman of the Citizens' Rehabilitation Committee, he has been active in other spheres of the community.

The annual citizenship award has been sponsored by the club since 1938 and carried with it presentation of a gold medal and inscription of his name on a plaque with those of other outstanding Hamilton citizens.

The Canadian Citizenship Act, said Mr. Martin, is no violation of the British relationship but rather is an extension of the principle of liberty for which Britain stands.

Three annual citizenship days may be set aside yearly "for the purpose of honoring citizenship," said Mr. Martin in his prepared address. They might be in February, June and October.

PUSSY WILLOWS SEEN IN BLOOM NEAR HOLLOWAY

Don't say we're not the first with this story. You can believe it or not, but that corner behind which elusive spring is hiding is not so far away, despite drifted highways, frozen water pipes and sub-zero temperatures.

For evidence is at hand that the vernal season is not too far away.

Found bravely lifting their green twigs upon which are blooming pearly tear-drops of white fuzz, were pussy willows, defying Old Man Winter to do his worst.

The "Pussies" were found near Holloway by 10-year-old Francis Reid.

Bagpipe Orders Wait, Tartan is Used in Making Coat Linings

Glasgow, Jan. 7 —(Reuters)— Scottish bagpipe makers with export orders worth thousands of pounds can not fill them because too much tartan cloth — used to cover the instruments — is being used in England for overcoat linings. Archie McPhedran, manager of one of Glasgow's oldest bagpipe firms, said today that there are plenty of orders to keep his plant busy for 18 months.

Largest Calculator Unveiled at Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 7 —(AP)— The world's largest calculating machine — one capable of solving mathematical problems almost too complex for the human mind — was unveiled today at Harvard University. Harvard authorities said that with this machine a man could solve in one second a multiplication problem running into the billions. Addition of numbers running in the billions can be done in less than one-fifth of a second.

Makes New Tests To Find if Bones Were Human

Toronto, Jan. 7 (CP)—Tests by provincial analyst Joselyn Rogers showed that particles taken from the Simcoe Canning Company furnace at St. Catharines, Ont., by investigators probing the slaying of nine-year-old Marion Rusnak last Dec. 23 were bone material, it was announced today.

Further tests are to be made to determine if the bones were human.

Police have charged 34-year-old Sidney Chambers with murder. Chambers was employed at the canning plant. Investigators indicated that they believed the little girl's body was burned in the furnace.

At Lincoln County jail 34-year-old Sidney Chambers, charged with murder in the girl's slaying, remains under constant guard. Police report that the prisoner — whom they say has confessed — has made five unsuccessful attempts on his own life.

Samples of ashes from the furnace at the Simcoe Canning Company, where Chambers was employed, were taken to Toronto for analysis but it is expected it may be several days before a report will be made.

Meanwhile, Marion's two sisters —Cecile, six, and Margaret, 15— went back to school for a second day. They resumed their studies yesterday with advice from their mother to tell their questioning fellow students that "all I know about the case has been in the newspapers".

Used Car Prices Decline Sharply In U.S. Cities

New York, Jan. 7 (AP)—That spoiled darling of the war and postwar years—the used automobile—has suddenly slipped from earlier towering prices by from 10 to 30 percent in most sections of the United States. Many dealers agree that further declines are in the offing.

One of Boston's largest dealers in used cars predicted today that "prices will be down 20 to 40 per cent from recent peaks within 30 to 90 days."

In a cross-country survey most dealers reported the greatest decline in the past month was in prices of slightly used 1946 models, which have dropped from $300 to $1,000.

In this they saw at least a start toward a "buyer's market." some regarded it as a "stop" sign on how high factories could go without cutting off a sizeable part of the market.

The sharp drop in the demand for "just anything that'll run" was ascribed to several causes.

Money Is Running Out

A Los Angeles dealer said "people don't come in with rolls of bills any more!"

"People can't go the prices," said Bert Baker, Detroit dealer. "Before the public was taking them away, now you have to go out and sell them"

A Philadelphia dealer said "the public is sitting out," and Henry Naytorena in San Francisco expected a gradual drop corresponding to increased production.

Washington dealers reported sales falling off considerably, while buyers wait for newer models, but predicted "no drastic decrease in prices on used cars at present."

Atlanta and New Orleans dealers agreed prices were 'likely to go lower in the latter part of the year as new car production steps up.

Here is the current used car situation in brief in a number of key points:

New York—10 to 25 per cent decline with "jalopies" off 50 per cent or more.

Chicago—Generally 15 per cent under the peak.

Detroit—"Considerable drop, especially on 1946 models."

Philadelphia—25 per cent decline "across the boards" and few takers.

New Orleans—Most models $150 to $300 lower.

Boston—10 to 30 per cent from top.

Los Angeles—Light cars off 10 per cent heavier cars more.

Denver—Old cars off 25 per cent; later models 10 per cent.

Arraigned For Murder of Wife

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 7 (AP)—Frank G. Werner, 39, was to be arraigned today on a charge of first-degree murder in the killings of his wife, Thelma, 40, last Friday.

Mrs. Werner's body, garroted and beaten, was found Saturday morning beneath the window of her second floor rented room.

Werner, arrested 36 hours later in the New York City rooming house where he was superintendent, was charged here last night after district atorney Gordon Steele said he signed a 10-page statement.

Steele said the statement described Werner's "connection with the killing of Thelma Werner."

Earlier, assistant New York District Attorney William Keating said Werner had signed a statement there that he killed his wife when she threatened to break up his bigamous marriage with 22-year-old Irene Woods of Amityville, L.I.

William T. Fitzgibbon, Buffalo Chief of Detectives, quoted Werner as saying he had come to Buffalo to ask Mrs. Werner for a divorce and that he struck her during an argument.

Fitzgibbon quoted Werner as saying that when he saw the woman was unconscious he "carried her to the window and forced her out of it."

Service Club Co-operation Sought By Mayor for Old Home Week

Mayor Frank Follwell asked for the cooperation of city service clubs in a proposed Old Home Week which may be held here this year and which will include city tribute to the returned men and women of the community, in an address given to the Rotary Club on Monday following the installation of civic officials in the city hall earlier in the day.

The mayor and a number of city council and civic officials were guests of President Bert Howard and his Rotarians who heard Mayor Follwell outline what has been done for Belleville during the past year and what is planned for the coming year.

He pointed out the advantages of the new incinerator stating that it would be the beginning of a lovely park area on Zwick's Island. Council had taken an active interest in the Moira River watershed and he had been promised that the survey would be completed this year.

Dredging had been carried out successfully at the new dock near the government wharf, he said, adding that while he and Alderman Fred Chamberlain had gone to Ottawa for the purpose of getting this important work done, much of the credit must go to Rotarian McLean Haig.

Reception For Veterans.

His worship said that he had in mind an Old Home Week which he hoped could be held next summer. It would bring great publicity to the city as well as giving the old boys and girls a chance to visit their old home. Incorporated with this week, His Worship said, could be the day set aside for the civic reception to veterans of the city.

"But this is going to cost money," he said, "and I hope the service clubs of the city will help shoulder the burden."

He warned the clubmen that taxes would go up this year because "if we want progress we must pay for it."

Mayor Follwell introduced the members of his council and other civic officials present at the luncheon. Included were Aldermen H. J. Clarke, Charles Hyde, Jack Allin, J. H. Lazenby, H. J. Armstrong, Bruce Lattimer, Claude Tice, Newton Wilbur, William Harvey, Fred Chamberlain and E. E. Follwell. Other officials included Suburban Roads Commissioner Jamieson Bone, Parks Board Commissioner Orland Pinkston, Public Utilities Secretary O. H. Scott and School Trustee Alex Nathan.

The mayor and city officials were formally welcomed to the luncheon by President Bert Howard.

Maybe it Was "Mr. X" Who Proved So Generous at City Restaurant

So you don't believe there is a Santa Claus? Ask the staff and patrons of the "Round Spot," Dundas Street restaurant, and they will give you the laugh.

They believe it, for they saw him, and benefited by his alarming generosity.

It happened last night. The "Spot" a rendezvous for the men who drive the large intercity transports, was going through its usual routine. Drivers munched sandwiches or light meals, drank their coffee or tea and conversed, as drivers do, about road conditions and the weather plus experience.

The door opened. A well-built stranger, finely dressed, walked slowly into the warm cosy atmosphere of the "Spot." No one paid any more attention than a casual glance. Outside, with its lights on, both inside and out, stood a luxurious black car, its sleek lines glistening in the glow of street lights.

Returns Coin

The stranger walked towards thecounter, then stopped and apparently picked something off the floor. The waitress looked up in surprise.

The stranger laid a twenty-five-cent piece on the counter and with an engaging smile said, "There is a quarter I found on the floor. It must be yours."

The waitress lifted a puzzled face. "It can't be," she smiled back. "For I have just swept the floor and I couldn't have missed it."

The stranger insisted. "It must be yours," he said. "Here, take it." And he pushed the coin towards the girl.

Then this Santa Claus in a business suit that must have cost at least $100, went to work. He bought lavishly and well for all. Not for two hours did the "Spot" cash register jangle to the tune of coin other than that of the mysterious stranger.

Every patron who entered the place over that period of time was his guest, no matter what he ordered. Meals, sandwiches, soft drinks, cigarettes, in fact anything you wanted you could have, at the stranger's expense. And with each order went a generous tip to the waitress.

At the end of two hours the stranger departed. The waitress was ten dollars richer, and the patrons were well-fed. He walked slowly to the door, turned, waved a smiling good-night, stepped into his car and drove away into the night as mysteriously as he came.

It is believed the description of the stranger host fits that of the fabulous Harry McLean, millionaire, who made the headlines a few years ago with his generous gifts of money, to strangers.

Justice Hudson Dies at Ottawa

Ottawa, Jan. 7 (CP)—Canada lost one of her senior members of the judiciary last night with the sudden death of the Hon. Mr. Justice Albert Blellock Hudson, a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada since 1936.

The 71-year-old justice, who had long and distinguished legal career and spent some time in provincial and federal politics, was stricken with a seizure at his Ottawa home and died on the way to hospital.

Born in Pembroke, Ont., Mr. Justice Hudson spent much of his life in Manitoba. He was educated in Portage La Prairie schools and at the University of Manitoba.

Admitted to the Manitoba Bar in 1899, he was made a King's counsel in 1914, and in the same year was elected to the provincial legislature.

For his work in prosecuting contractors involved in a provincial scandal, he was appointed attorney-general of the province in 1915, a post which he held two years.

Later, in 1921, he ran as an Independent Liberal candidate in the federal riding of Winnipeg south, and gained election, retaining the seat until 1925.

His appointment to the supreme court came in 1936, and in the same year he married, in Halifax, the former Marjorie G. Runciman, who survives. A previous wife, Mary B. Russell, died in 1925.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

'Monty' Welcomed By Russian Staff

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, Jan. 7 (AP)—Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, chief of the British Imperial general Staff, today placed his conceptions of the role of assault troops in modern warfare before high-ranking officers in the higher military academy of the Soviet General Staff.

Montgomery, famed for his generalship, told the Russian military leaders he placed great emphasis upon what he called the "human equation" in the direction of a fighting army.

Here as a guest of Marshal Alexander M. Vasilevsky, Chief of the Soviet General Staff, Montgomery was the first foreign military leader to make an address of such importance to a group of such high-ranking Soviet leaders. He spoke through a translator from a prepared text.

Montgomery is being lavishly entertained. Tonight he was to be a guest of Vasilevsky at the Bolshoi Theatre Ballet, after a day of sight-seeing.

Montgomery learned from Field Marshal A. M. Vasilevsky today the greater part of his recent book on the European war had already been translated into Russian for distribution among Soviet officers and student soldiers.

David Price Named President Of Junior Board of Trade

Manager of the Price Advertising Agency of Belleville and one of the charter members of the local Junior Board of Trade, Mr. David Price was named president of the above organization at their annual meeting and election of officers held in conjunction with their regular dinner meeting at the Masonic Temple on Monday evening.

Mr. Price was the choice of president from a slate of seven council members who had been elected on a previous ballot. The seven council members in turn were chosen from a slate of 12 names brought in by the nominating committee and as result of nominations from the floor.

Council members include David Price, Don Thomas, Charles Lundy, Jack Sherwood, F. Cormier, Bill Edward and Paul Mercier.

Malcolm Robb Presides.

President Malcolm Robb presided over the meeting and announced his withdrawal from the executive. Mayor Frank Follwell attended the meeting and was complimented by the retiring president on the city council's prompt action in entering negotiations for the acquiring of an airport in Belleville.

Speaking briefly Mayor Follwell agreed that an airport was "vital and necessary" for a progressive city and the prompt action by council members had shown recognizance of this fact.

The Junior Board of Trade was complimented by the Mayor on their "get out the vote campaign" which he said had been mainly responsible for increasing the vote at the municipal elections from 38 to 58 per cent. Projects in which the Junior Board of Trade might assist were given as Veterans' Day scheduled for next July 14th, and an "Old Home Week."

Planning Area Outlined.

Action of the city council in their efforts to have a planning area set up to embrace parts of Sidney and Thurlow townships, was outlined by the Mayor as was the proposed construction of the incinerator of which ratepayers approved in the December elections.

With Zwick's Island having been chosen as the site for the proposed incinerator Mayor Follwell envisioned the entire island developed as a park area and suggested that heat from the incinerator could possibly be used to heat an outdoor swimming pool.

The supervised parking scheme set up by the Junior Board of Trade during the past summer had won the approval of the motoring public, according to the Mayor.

General discussion on future activities for the organization brought out plans for increasing revenue and also for increasing the membership. Membership now stands at 117 with expectation of bringing this to approximately 160 before the year end. The financial statement for the first year of operation was also presented at the meeting.

Lions Club Opens Fund to Buy Home For Davidson Family; After Finding Destitute Conditions in Cabin

Bancroft, (Special.)—Warm-hearted residents of this North Hastings village have rallied to the aid of the almost destitute Davidson family, who made provincial headlines on New Year's Day with the birth of triplets.

According to Provincial Police Constable Stanley Palmateer, and H. H. Loucks, public school inspector, who inspected the lonely log cabin, three miles south of Maynooth that houses William Davidson and the other six children of his family, they met a scene of absolute poverty.

Huddled in the tiny home were the six children with their father. There was only one pair of pillows in the room and three ancient beds with no mattresses. There was not a blanket to be found. Bed coverings were made from old grain sacks and a few ragged pieces of quilt.

Beef Only Food

The only food to be found was about ten pounds of frozen beef.

As a result of this inspection and disclosure of conditions in the Davidson household, Dr. O. W. Anderson, the physician who brought the tiny Davidson trio safely into the world on a sub-zero New Year's morning has ordered that the triplets must not go into the home and that the rest of the family must be removed.

With these startling disclosures coming to light, residents and organizations of this village and district have rushed to their aid.

The Bancroft Lions' Club, with the Rev. R. F. Gardner as chairman, has organized a committee of ten members called the Triplet Welfare Committee, which will look after the interests of the family.

Lion Bill Painter, Maynooth hotelkeeper, immediately donated $20 in cash and half a pig. His wife gave the family three flannelette blankets. William McCaw of Maynooth, has given 15 yards of flannelette.

House To Cost $3,000.

A fund has been started to purchase a new home, already constructed, in this village. The cost is $3,000 and the owner has dropped his original price $500.

The Bancroft Lions Club has headed the subscription list with $100. Police Constable Palmateer has given $5 and Provincial Police Constable Dolachuk $10. J. A. McFee, Belleville, has given $10 and other subscriptions are coming in.

An Oshawa furniture company which wishes to remain anonymous has promised a truckload of new furniture for the new home once it is acquired. The firm will also provide the services of a trained nurse and dietitian for the triplets.

Donations can be sent to Lion Jack Hahn, Bank of Nova Scotia, Bancroft, who stated today that the donations will be tax-free and official receipts will be given contributors.

Bearded Lumberjack Real Artist With Nifty Homemade Jew's Harp

Give Bill Hailstone a piece of a Swedish saw, parts of a Ford connecting rod, or a baby carriage and he'll turn you out a Jew's harp made to measure.

As a matter of fact, Bill, who is a bearded lumberjack from "someplace north of Gilmour" is thinking seriously of entering the business of manufacturing the nasal-twanged musical instruments, if they can be classified as such.

For Bill is an accomplished artist on this miniature tooth-harp and can play anything from the "Turkey in the Straw" to the "Meditation from Thais," or the "Irish Washerwoman" to the "Sextet from Lucia di Lammermoor."

In fact he carries in his pocket a wide assortment of his favorite instrument. The largest measures some fourteen inches in length, and is Bill's favorite for he is troubled with itchy ears, and as he twangs the elongated instrument, the motion of his flying fingers eases the irritation as they flick his drooping lobes.

The smallest "harp" that this lumberjack impresario has made measures a little short of an inch in length. Bill grips the miniature between his strong teeth and with gentle flips of horny fingers twangs out your favorite melody.

"Only trouble with this size," Bill commented, "is that you might swallow the darned thing. I swallowed one of them once. The harp was still twanging when it hit my gizzard and I almost laughed myself to death I was that tickled."

The redbeard, who is in the city on a holiday from his timbering activities has found a ready sale for his harps. He sold six in Trenton, four in Shannonville and thus far has relieved himself of seven in the city. If sales keep up the present pace, he will relinquish his lumbering job and cut up his saws for the new business.

Favor Abolition Milk Delivery On Sundays

Brantford, Jan. 7 — (CP) — Board of Trade yesterday passed a resolution recommending that milk delivery on Sunday be abolished in order that delivery men may be able to spend the day with their families.

This action would be in line with a policy already in effect in Windsor and Ottawa and other Ontario cities. London instituted the six-day-a-week system Jan. 1.

Fiery Ball Roars Over S. California

Los Angeles, Jan. 7 (AP)— A fiery ball, giving off weird flashes of light, roared over Southern Canifornia last night and out to sea. It was visible from San Diego to Bakersfield —nearly 200 miles apart. Although two separate searches were made for crashed planes, it was agreed today that the object was a meteror, and apparently was exceptionally large. No missing planes were reported.

Govt. Controls and Contracts Are Not in Best Interests of Cheese Producers Says Secretary Joss At Annual Meeting Being Held in Toronto

Producers Losing Advantages of Seller's Market Through Maintenance of Controls

The fourteenth annual meeting of the Ontario Cheese Producers Association is being held in Toronto today and tomorrow. One of the features of the meeting is the report of S. L. Joss, secretary of the Association. The text of Mr. Joss' report which was given today follows:

At the last annual meeting of our Association my report dealt with cheese markets. I have carefully reviewed this report because what I have to say today deals with the same subject. This review was made in the light of events within and without our organization during the past year. I have also kept in mind present conditions as they affect the cheese industry. If I were to rewrite the report there is no part of it I would change, as what I said then is, I believe, still relevant to cheese market conditions as these conditions affect Ontario cheese producers.

Before getting into my subject I would like to pay my respects to the views of those who disagree with me. The disagreement, in so far as policy is concerned, has always seemed to me to emanate more from a misunderstanding rather than any serious cleavage of opinions. The fundamental reason for our organization is to bring about conditions that will be the means of securing for our members the maximum returns for their produce. To do this our policy must be one that is wide, one that is flexible and one, of course, that is basically sound. Plans already presented that seem different have tended to call attention to their technical dissimilarities rather than to their common purpose, thus obscuring the basic problem which must be solved in some way, the basic problem in the case of the Association being to make our industry financially attractive to our members. Marketing, I believe, is definitely one way of doing this.

Since 1940 the bulk of our cheese has been requisitioned by the Dominion Government for shipment to Great Britain, and during that period we have had only fodder cheese to offer to Canadian consumers. We have also, with the exception of a few shipments to the U.S.A. during 1942, been confined to the United Kingdom market. We, along with other members of the British Commonwealth, are concerned about this, and along these lines I want to read an extract from my last copy of the publication, "The New Zealand Dairy Exporter":

> "New Zealand should plan and act now in preparation for the return of unrestricted marketing conditions in Great Britain, says the writer of this article, a prominent Tooley Street distributor of New Zealand dairy produce. In the course of the article, received by air-mail from London, he gives his views on the future possibilities for New Zealand dairy produce on the British market and suggests changes in supply, packaging and distribution which he considers will assist us in holding our pre-eminent place as a supplier of dairy produce to the United Kingdom market under peace-time conditions.
>
> "No one can criticize any emergency steps that were taken during the war period to insure the effective rationing system to the consumer in Great Britain and which resulted in the pooling of methods of distribution. On the other hand, no one can fail to admit that any system of distribution under government control is wasteful and inefficient. Now that the period of emergency is over, it is time to plan for a long-term policy of distribution to replace the existing methods under government control.
>
> ### BACK TO NATIONAL BRANDS
>
> "New Zealand and Australia and, to a smaller extent, Canada, were practically the sole suppliers of dairy produce to the United Kingdom market during the war years. Under existing control the produce of the above-mentioned countries loses its identity and is sold to the consumer as National Butter or National Cheese. We must anticipate that from now on, production in other countries will steadily expand, and those exporting countries, who, before the war, shipped to this market, will resume their shipments in steadily increasing quantities.
>
> "The people in this country are very mindful of the wonderful efforts of our Dominions in keeping us supplied in foodstuffs during the war years, and are definitely prepared at the moment to give a preference to the Dominions in their purchasing.
>
> "Now is the time for New Zealand to capitalize goodwill for the future by demanding the right of our Ministry of Food to market in this country their produce under their own national brands through their selected channels of distribution."

The remainder of my paper will be deduced from the foregoing extract, under the three following headings:

1. Unrestricted marketing conditions in Great Britain.
2. Plan for a long-term policy of distribution to replace the existing methods under Government control.
3. Anticipate increasing production in other countries with increasing exports to Great Britain.

UNRESTRICTED MARKETING CONDITIONS IN GREAT BRITAIN

Government contracts for food, socialization of farms in Great Britain, good-will established during the war, or producer marketing organizations will not, in my opinion, prevent unrestricted marketing conditions returning to Great Britain or Canada. The return of these conditions will bring with them competition, and we shall only prosper in proportion as we learn to meet this competition by putting brains and skill into the common occupations of our industry, and understanding our true place in the development of the industry.

There is an abundance of evidence to support the prediction that unrestricted marketing will return to Great Britain. As an example I would quote from two marketing letters from the United Kingdom:

The first, November 11, 1946:

> "The United States Department of Agriculture has notified the British Food Mission at Washington that it can no longer procure food on behalf of Foreign Governments.
>
> "The Ministry of Food will now have to formulate an alternative policy. There are two methods open:
>
> "(a) To receive offers through normal trade channels.
>
> "(b) To buy on the American open market through the Food Mission in Washington. This would require an extensive organization of commercial experts.
>

The second, December 6, 1946:

> "Negotiations are now taking place in Copenhagen for increased supplies of agricultural produce to the U.K.
>
> "The Danish negotiators are demanding prices equal to the prices obtained for exports to other countries, for any additional supplies over and above existing contracts."

Mr. Gardiner, our Minister of Agriculture, has announced that the bacon contract price with Great Britain has been revised upward, the increase in price to be from $25 to $29 per 100 pounds. It would appear that these contracts can be quite flexible. Such flexibility at the present time may work to the advantage of the seller because of the short supply position but we must keep in mind that this will work two ways, and when the supply position is one of plenty the buyer would benefit. I cannot view this trend without feeling quite convinced that ultimately competitive buying on unrestricted markets will prevail.

An article in the December edition of the Farming News, a Scottish publication, dealing with "British Farming's Potential", is interesting. We find one heading as follows: "We Buy at the Lowest Price"—Mr. Strachey. Mr. Strachey is a Minister in the present Labor Government in Great Britain. He was questioned by a Member of Parliament on this statement. Here is the official quotation:

> "Mr. Snadden (West Perth)—Can the right honorable gentleman explain how this policy of buying agricultural products below cost of production in the country of origin squares with the Hot Springs resolution which this Government has supported?
>
> "Mr. Strachey—We buy agricultural products at the lowest price we can get them in the world, and if we deviated from that policy I am sure the House would censure us very severely indeed."

Plan for a long-term policy of distribution to replace the existing method under Government control:

Any long-term plan of distribution should be undertaken by producers themselves selecting their own distributing agencies. This particularly applies to the distribution of Ontario cheese because of its fine quality. We have what I consider three principal markets for Ontario cheese — Canada, United States and Great Britain. In my opinion they are named in the order of their importance to us. In these three countries there are approximately 200,000,000 people and a normal yearly production of around one billion pounds of cheese. Ontario produces an average of 100,000,000 pounds per year, which is very small considering the large number of potential consumers. We have, therefore, a product second to none in quality with the potential demand for it far in excess of supply. This demand, however, must be stimulated through sales promotion and continuous efforts to keep our product before the public.

To place the American market ahead of the British market would appear, (to use a colloquialism) to be going out on a limb. I do not make this choice lightly as it is only after a close study of both markets that I arrived at such a conclusion. The United Kingdom's principal supply of cheese is imported from New Zealand and for many years this country has demonstrated that they can, and are ready to, undersell us. Plans in New Zealand are for increased production and this also applies to Australia. Our only satisfactory outlet on the British market, therefore, is in a luxury class, or on quality basis that will pay a price considerably above New Zealand prices. This, I believe, can be done to a limited extent.

The American market with its 145,000,000 people is a tremendously large market. There are in that country enough people who are willing to pay any reasonable premium for our cheese, a premium large enough to cover even the present tariff, and still give us a relatively good net price. On my last trip to the United States, which was about a month ago, I saw cheese in one of the large New York stores being retailed for 65 cents to $2.05 cents per pound. Many types were included, but unfortunately no Canadian. It occurred to me as I watched thousands of people inspect the cheese counter that if we had had some of our good Ontario cheese on display with a sign telling the people about it, the price factor would have been overcome to our satisfaction.

It would be foolish to predict when the world supply of dairy products will be adequate to meet the demand but we would be living in a fool's paradise by thinking otherwise than that this situation is not so very far away. Last November the price of Wisconsin cheese was 46 cents f.o.b. Wisconsin. On December 27 it was 39 cents, a drop of 7 cents per pound. Price predictions by American authorities last November were that by June of this year the price would be 30 cents to 35 cents f.o.b. Wisconsin. This downward trend in prices is taking place principally because production or anticipated production is catching up with demand.

As this process of increased production develops, unrestricted marketing and competitive buying will become more and more prevalent, until we are again selling our produce by our own efforts. We will then need all the markets we can get and it is now that we should be doing everything we can to become as firmly established as possible in that respect.

From what I have said it is quite obvious that I am of the opinion that Government contracts and Government controls on cheese are not in the best interests of cheese producers. My principal reason for this opinion is that ultimately they must be eliminated and the sooner this comes about the better for the producer. Under these restrictions we are losing the advantages of a seller's market and yet coming closer to the disadvantages of a buyer's market, and in spite of what may have been said to the contrary when supply is equal to demand open competition will determine the price of your product.

Table showing net returns per 100 pounds of milk to the patrons of an Ontario cheese factory from 1914 to 1920 and from 1939 to 1945:

Year	Price per 100 lbs. of Milk	Year	Price per 100 lbs. of Milk	Difference
1914	$1.12	1939	$ .97	—.15
1915	1.29	1940	1.17	—.12
1916	1.59	1941	1.51	—.08
1917	1.78	1942	1.85	+.07
1918	1.89	1943	1.87	—.02
1919	2.34	1944	2.04	—.30
1920	2.15	1945	2.00	—.15

In 1914 the price per 100 lbs. of milk was $1.12. In 1920 the price was $2.15. In 1939 the price was 97 cents and in 1944 it was $2.04. A detailed study of these figures will reveal that in the early period, which was during the first great war, producers' returns exceeded those of the second period or second great war.

Carrying this study further and including the period 1921 to 1930 we find a range in prices from $1.24 per 100 lbs. in 1922 to $1.65 in 1925.

Prices from 1921 to 1930 inclusive from statements of the same Ontario Cheese Factory:

Year	Net Price Per 100 lbs. Milk	Year	Net Price Per 100 lbs. Milk
1921	$1.51	1926	$1.34
1922	1.24	1927	1.40
1923	1.62	1928	1.57
1924	1.24	1929	1.54
1925	1.65	1930	1.26

The above table will show that prices held very well. I prepared this table to bring out the following point: That there was no disastrous break in prices in the period. It is not likely that one will take place in the next number of years, although it has been intimated that if we were not under contract our prices would soon tumble below the contract prices.

There are many factors influencing these prices but whatever these influences may be there is one point that stands out very clearly. If government contracts are to continue there is coming a time when the contract price must exceed by a large margin the current market price. This will be absolutely necessary if producers are to be adequately remunerated for the period during which the contract prices have been below competitive market prices.

My subject is debatable, and I know there are many different opinions on it. So before presenting my views to you I carefully considered the whole matter from the long range viewpoint and as it applied to our industry.

Port Arthur's Perennial Mayor Again Elected

(By The Canadian Press)

Prominent among questions presented for approval were by-laws dealing with civic construction as voters in more than 60 Ontario municipalities on Monday chose the mayors, reeves, and who will represent them in 1947.

Snow-filled roads kept voters away from ballot-boxes in Tobermory, unofficial "capital" of the Bruce peninsula, but in most communities a keen interest in civic affairs was shown by good attendance at voting-places.

To Port Arthur's perennial Mayor Charles Cox, 13 was no jinx. He was re-elected for a 14th term by the greatest number of votes in his career.

Brother fought brother in the race for the reeveship of Shallow Lake in Grey county when Cochrane Noble edged his brother Percy out of the office by 91 votes to 69.

Citizens of Forest, in Lambton county, approved by a vote of 515 to 123 a by-low to raise $20,000 for a memorial recreation centre.

A similar project, to cost $30,000 was also passed by the voters of Markham, near Toronto, 204 to 81.

The people of Collingwood enthusiastically endorsed raising by debenture the $150,000 cost of erecting a municipal arena. Vote was 704 for, 428 against.

In Oshawa, a money by-law was defeated when electors defeated a proposal to spend $848,000 for a new public school, 1,888 to 1,846.

Air Mail from Montevideo

Toronto, Jan. 7 — (CP) — Evidence of the increasing efficiency of world airmail was shown Monday when Mrs. A. E. Brown of Toronto received a letter mailed by her father in Montevideo, Uruguay, Friday, Jan. 3. Mail from Montevideo once took two weeks to reach Canada, she said.

$100,000 Blaze At Chatco Steel Products Chatham

Chatham, Jan. 7 —(CP)— Plant No. 2 of the Chatco Steel Products Limited was a smoldering ruin today, aftermath of a $100,000 blaze that destroyed the half-block long establishment and terrified residents within a mile radius, as an explosion of naphtha-gasoline within the plant shook the area.

The explosion occurred as firemen arrived to fight the blaze and it aided in igniting thousands of gallons of paint within the sprawling building. The glare of the explosion and fire could be seen for miles.

Realizing the impossibility of saving the plant, firemen concentrated on saving nearby residences. Dense clouds of smoke and near-zero weather added to the difficulty.

During the war Plant No. 2 produced war material and recently had been reconditioned to produce oil burning furnaces and steel cabinets. Fifty furnaces were completed yesterday and the company planned to double the staff within a month to produce 1,000 furnaces a month.

In spite of the naphtha explosion no one was injured.

The night watchman barely escaped the fire, believed to have started when a transformer in the new east end section of the plant exploded. Forty employees had left the building several hours earlier.

A. J. Jones, Chacto manager and vice-president said an accurate estimate of the loss could not be made until today, but "it might well go over $100,000."

SPEEDY ATLANTIC FLIGHTS

Passengers between Britain and America now can fly the Atlantic at an average speed of 300 m.p.h.

WILL NOT RUN

Columbia, S.C., Jan. 7—(AP)— Assault, horse of the year in 1946, will not run in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap.

Trainer Max Hirsch said Assault had raced a long season "and I just didn't have time to get him in shape for the California race."

Hirsch added that "he'll be ready and running when the New York spring season opens." Assault, owned by the King Ranch of Texas, is wintering here.

RECORD VOTE IN ELECTION

Scotland, Ont., Jan. 7—(CP)— A record was believed established in this Brant county village when residents voted yesterday to elect three police trustees persons eligible to vote numbered 184. Those who exercised their franchise—176.

ALPHONSE ROCCO

State Police Inspector Charles La Forge led the uphill attack over the mile from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Lewis, where Rocco last had been seen.

The gun that inflicted the wound that necessitated amputation of one of Mrs. Rocco's legs was concealed by Christmas wrappings. Blonde Pearl Lusk, 19, told police Rocco, under the pretence he was an insurance investigator, had instructed her to use the "camera" to photograph hidden jewelry he said Mrs. Rocco was wearing.

The guns that killed Rocco were not hidden but they were many. La Forge used 50 men for the trap.

DIVERSIONARY

Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission employees got back two of the lines early Monday but one failed last night.

Asked To Cut Use

Sixty-cycle power users in Oakville, Burlington and Bronte got a taste of what might come when power failed completely for three minutes late yesterday. After suffering heating and cooking inconveniences Sunday, their troubles were only partially eased when they were asked to cut down their use of power by one-third.

Despite the power troubles industries managed to keep going Monday and a threatened shutdown of large factories did not materialize, mainly because the United Gas and Fuel Company which manufactures gas from 60-cycle equipment, had managed to build up a reserve.

Workmen from all parts of the province swarmed around the diversionary line where holes are being blasted in the frozen earth to set up heavy wooden poles which will carry double-circuit lines.

Preparations For Treaties

Foreign Secretary Bevin has appointed Sir William Strang, the political adviser to the British Commander-in-Chief in Germany, to be his special deputy for Germany, and Viscount Hood to be his special deputy for Austria in preparation for the meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers in Moscow on March 10.

The special deputies of the four Great Powers are to begin work at Lancaster House, London, on February 14th.

Viscount Hood, who is the head of the Peacemaking Section of the Foreign Office, has been chief assistant to Mr. Gladwyn Jebb in London, Paris and New York in the latter's capacity as special deputy for the preparation of peace treaties with the ex-satellite countries.

The deputies for Germany are instructed by the Council of Foreign Ministers, firstly, to hear the views of the governments of the neighboring Allied states and of other Allied states which participated with their armed forces in the common struggle against Germany, which wish to present their views on the German problem; secondly, to consider questions of procedure with regard to the preparation of a peace treaty for Germany and thirdly, to submit a report on these matters to the Council of Foreign Ministers by February 25th.

The deputies for Austria are instructed to, firstly, proceed with the preparation of a treaty recognizing the independence of Austria, taking into consideration the proposals already submitted by the Government of the United Kingdom, as well as any further proposals which may be submitted by any member of the Council of Foreign Ministers, and to hear the views of the governments of neighboring Allied states and of other Allied states.

The following 18 Allied governments are expected to be invited to submit their views on Germany. Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Byelorussia, Canada, China, Denmark, Czechoslovakia, Greece, India, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, South Africa, Ukraine and Yugoslavia.

Those Holiday Accidents

Stressing of the number of accidents on holiday occasions causes the New York Times to remark, "it strikes one as being less than fair to the spirit of the season or to the concrete facts when we speak of the holiday casualties or the nation's death toll." This has become a regular feature of press services' post-holiday reports "and in fact a regular feature of pre-holiday forecasts. Competent authorities are quoted as foreseeing a national casualty list of so many hundred lives lost, so many more lesser accidents. This is of course, only a pretext for admonishing the American people to go about their holidays sanely and soberly but it makes the holiday death toll a standing feature just the same."

The Times admits that it is quite true that the nation's death roll in the Yuletide is increased by reckless motorists on bad winter roads or under the influence of too much drinking. But not all holiday accidents can be attributed to such reasons.

"Probably the greater number of accidents is to be explained by the mere fact that the American people are making holiday instead of being engaged in their regular occupations in the fields, factories, shops and homes. The press associations will tabulate, in their holiday death tolls, the number of people killed or hurt in California or New York over a two-day winter or summer holiday. The press never prints as a matter of routine news the number of Californians or New Yorkers killed or hurt in the course of any two working days in industry and their homes."

So the Times sums it up, "yet we are being reminded every little while that more accidents happen in American homes than on motor highways or in the factories and for the simple statistical reason that more people spend more time in their homes than they do anywhere else and accident always exacts its dread percentage, bigger or smaller. If nobody went carelessly into the water on Independence Day and Labor Day or drove carelessly on icy roads on New Year's Day but everybody stayed snugly at home there would nevertheless be a casualty percentage to be noted if we took the trouble to do so."

U.K.'s Merchant Navy

New proposals for better pay and conditions for Britain's seamen are now being discussed by the National Maritime Board, the Central Industrial Council of ship owners, and officers and men of the merchant navy. These propositions which constitute the new postwar program for Britain's merchant fleets have been submitted by unions and cover such subjects as regularity of employment, paid holidays, improvement of conditions on board ships and hours of work.

The essential works order which has governed the terms of employment in the merchant navy during the war years will cease to apply as from January 1st and at present discussions have for their object the framing of a code of conditions of work—drawn up by the voluntary agreement between all concerned—which will replace this order and constitute "a seamen's charter." The government has taken a keen interest in these talks and—in response to the approach from the Maritime Board — has agreed to continue a merchant navy reserve pool which was started as a wartime measure for guaranteeing regular employment to seamen.

The Maritime Board in return for this assistance have undertaken to work out a scheme for the continuous employment of seamen under peacetime conditions, which is to commence operation not later than April 1st of this year.

Training colleges for new recruits of the Merchant Navy—specially for officers —are full to capacity and there are, in addition, long waiting lists. It will, however, be 2 or 3 years before they will be ready to take the helm or man the engine rooms of Britain's reconstructed Merchant fleets. The conference now proceeding must deal with the problem of bridging the manpower gap until training schemes are completed.

The shortage of ships due to depredations by enemy submarines, raiders, aircraft and mine-sown waters, is being rapidly recovered from, Britain's' merchant marine, which before the outbreak of hostilities was the largest in the world with a gross tonnage of 17,500,000 tons, has a proud and glorious war record. It contributed by the sacrifice of ships and man as well as by devoted and intrepid service in a most generous measure to the Allied victory.

During 5½ years of war 31,000 merchant seamen in Britain's fleet lost their lives and 11,500,000 tons were sunk. More than 6,000 of Britain's merchant seamen have been decorated for conspicuous bravery.

What Will He Do?

When the age of leisure comes upon the world as some day it is bound to do with the release of atomic energy to the full service of mankind, "spare time" instead of being something easy to dispose of, will become probably the world's greatest problem. With a five-hour working day—or even less — man will have to discover means of filling in the rest of the 24 hours with something other than reading and listening to the radio and visiting friends. What will he do? asks Ottawa Citzen.

Glass Bottles

How many glass bottles do you buy, use, break, or lose every year? No one can answer this question, but the big glassworks know from experience that world requirements are increasing from year to year. One single Scottish glass-bottle factory, has now decided to increase its yearly production from 43 to 100 million. This tremendous increase, demanding a capital outlay of £500,000, will require a great deal of effort to achieve. In about 3 years' time, that is before 1950, the firm hopes to reach the one-hundred-million-mark.

Only 3.5% of newspaper readers would be satisfied to see all advertising removed from the daily newspapers according to a recent poll of wage earners by MacFadden Publications.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

EXPRESSES THANKS FOR YULE GIFTS TO C.A.S.

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

We take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation to the following donors whose help assisted us greatly in caring for families and neglected children under our care. Had it not been for the kindly well disposed donors we would not have been able to spread the Christmas Cheer we did. We most sincerely thank them and trust that others will come to our assistance during the winter months, as we have many families who have very little and need the helping hand of the Children's Aid Society to maintain a decent living.

Mrs. Hornsby, St. Andrew's Church—presents; Rednersville Group—$5.00; Mrs. J. A. McFee—$5; Dr. MacDonald—oranges, candies, nuts; Mrs. L. S. Gerow—food, toys, clothing; Mrs. L. Fever — honey; Mrs. G. C. Vince—games, candies; Bridge Street Sunday School—$66; 38th Club — gifts, clothing, food; Kinsmen's Club—presents 138 children; A friend—oranges; St. Michael's Benevolent Society—fruit,candies; Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Anderson—$2; Albert College—cars, toys, etc; Miss Hanley—gifts.

We would especially mention the generosity of Mrs. Stiver and her committee of the Kiwanis Auxiliary for the assistance they contributed in making pyjamas and clothing for our children during the year. It was indeed a labor of love and we feel that they will rejoice in the fact that they have brought comfort and happiness to some child. We trust in the coming year that they will continue to assist in providing layettes and clothing for us. We would also express gratitude to the Kiwanis Club who allowed a number of our children to go to the camp free of costs.

We would like to point out that we are not a government organization and are maintained by voluntary contributions for our preventive and family work.

We also thank Bridge Street Sunday School for the magnificent donation of $66 to provide Christmas Cheer for several families under supervision.

To the Kinsmen Club we owe much for their liberal assistance in the donating of gifts, toys, etc to our wards which they undertook to do direct. We fully realize the heavy task that was upon them not only in the buying of presents but in the packing and delivery of same. We trust they received as much joy as we did in knowing that the children were being made happy this Christmas Season by their generosity.

The Board of Directors is not only greatly indebted to the Kinsmen for gifts, etc, as already mentioned but for the arrangements of a picnic during the summer, which entertained over a hundred of our wards.

To everyone who has in any way assisted us in this great work we say "Thank You" and wish one and all a Happy New Year.

Children's Aid Society,
T. D. Ruston, Superintendent.

WANTS SUNDAY MILK DELIVERY ELIMINATED

Editor,

Did it ever occur to you and to people of Belleville that during the Winter months, months we could all take our supply of milk on Saturday for Sunday and give the men who deliver a day of rest on Sunday?

I hope you will publish this letter and ask the people of Belleville to pass their opinion.

Prospects For Higher Sugar Ration "Good"

Ottawa, Jan. 7 — (CP) — Informed sources said yesterday the prospects for a higher sugar ration for Canadians in 1947 "looked good" but added that it would depend largely on the progress of crops and on international allocation.

They added that if, as reported from Washington recently, the United States got an increase of five pounds per person per year this April it was likely that Canadians would get a similar allotment as Canada, the United States and Britain share equally in the world supply.

The individual allotment in the three countries works out to about 71 pounds a year, including sugar for all purposes. Excluding sugar for industrial and similar purposes, the individual ration comes to about 39 pounds. The latter total includes ration coupons for preserves and canning sugar.

These sources said that if the European crop of sugar beets improved this year and progress was made in reclaiming Philippine sugar fields devastated by the Japanese it was possible that an increase would be made.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

THYROID GLAND FUNCTION

Men and women approaching middle age commonly develop manifestations of hypothyrea (hypothyroidism, deficient thyroid gland function)without any sign of swelling or enlargement of the neck below the Adam's apple. The chief complaints are chronic tired feeling and lack of usual or former energy or pep, a state little if any relieved by rest or a vacation; a tendency to accumulate slacker flesh (flabby superfluous fat); a tendency to nod or fall into brief cat naps perhaps in embarrassing circumstances; depression of spirits and a bleak or almost melancholy frame of mind quite unlike the individual's normal disposition; mental torpor; cold hands and feet and a desire for more artificial heat indoors and more clothing or covers than normal persons need for comfort; in some instances premature graying and falling of the hair, thinning of outer thirds of eyebrows and sallow complexion with excessive dryness of the skin.

Hold on, now, if your condition answers this description. Again I caution you the very least you can do is to give yourself the benefit of a general medical examination and find out what perchance is developing before you try the Iodin Ration on the dog. If the physician's examination reveals no sign of—oh, any of the diseases or degenerations that may happen to any of us when we are fortyish and I shall not mention them if you don't mind the oversight—if your $10 to $100 investment gets you a comparatively clean bill of health, then, I assure you, it will be in order to have to go at iodine feeding. Not that it is ever dangerous for child or adult to take the Iodin Ration, but, as I have just explained, it is never advisable to worry along without benefit of medical examination whether you get idone or not.

For many years there has been a standard idone preparation officially described in the United States Pharmacopoeia as Mild Tincture of Iodine (Tinctura Iodi Mitis) and a preparation of virtually the same strength described in the British Pharmacopoeia as Weak Solution of Iodine (Liquor Iodi Mitis) If either preparation is available, it is the right "iodine" to use as a first aid disinfectant or antiseptic upon wounds or abrasions. It is also the best liquid iodine I know for internal use.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

No Authority

Your daily column is one of my favorite.... I am glad to have a medical authority to back my belief that colds should be taken care of immediately because they may lead to something serious or may be the beginning of a serious illness ..My pet peeve is mothers who send their children to school when the children are developing heaven knows what, on the theory that it is "just a little cold." (Mrs. T. E. P.)

Answer—Such mothers get plenty of encouragement and support from teachers and even health authorities who still believe in "colds." I am no authority, however. Sometimes I do wish I were an "authority"—whatever that may be. Maybe some of the mothers, teachers, health officers or even medical practioners would pay some attention to my teachings. But this is vain yearning—any Wiseacreca can dismiss my teachings as just my theories by citing what some eminent medical authority says about it—and any doctor who has said what the Wiseacres likes becomes an authority, just like that. Readers who are not too stuffy about authorities may learn something to their advantage by studying the booklet "Cal it Cri" (25 cts. and stamped self-addressed envelope)—which deals with respiratory infections, bronchitis, tonsils and adenoids, catarrah, sinus trouble or what have you.

Whiskey

Is whiskey a stimulant if taken in the correct proportion? Does a person suffering from shock have increased or decreased heart action? (J.G.)

Answer—Whiskey, brandy or other alcoholic liquor is never a stimulant. In a state of shock the heart action is usually increased in rate but decreased in force or strength—the pulse is thin, feeble and rapid.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What is meant by the tonnage of a ship?

"Tonnage" as applied to ships is confusing because it may refer to either capacity or weight and because several complicated formulae are used to determine the tonnage of different types of ships and of the same ship for various purposes. The subject is further complicated by the fact that the weight unit called a ton may be the short ton of 2,000 pounds or the long ton of 2,240 pounds.

As now applied to the merchant ships of Great Britain, the United States and most other maritime nations tonnage may refer to any one of several measurements of capacity and weight used as a basis for taxes, port and harbor charges, pilot fees and canal tolls and to prove a classification, registration and identification system.

Gross tonnage (also called space or statutory tonnage) has no connection with the weight of the ship as a whole nor to the weight of the cargo she can carry. It is the total capacity of the entire hull and the closed-in spaces on the deck available for cargo, stores, crew and passengers expressed in terms of one "ton" for every 100 cubic feet of space. This ton is a purely arbitrary unit of space. The 100-cubic-feet-per-ton formula is used in measuring gross tonnage regardless of the type or cargo actually carried. Ships sunk or captured in war are usually listed in gross tonnage.

Net tonnage (also register tonnage) is the actual cargo-carrying capacity in terms of 100 cubic feet. It is the gross tonnage less the space occupied by machinery, fuel, water tanks, master's cabin, crew quarters, navigation space and other things representing no earning power. Net tonnage varies in different ships, but is generally about two-thirds of the gross tonnage. Since net tonnage is the basis of registration dues, port and harbor charges, pilot fees and canal tolls, it is limited by navigation laws to certain percentages of gross tonnage.

Deadweight tonnage, the term generally used in construction statistics, is the weight in long tons of any kind of cargo required to depress the ship from the light water line, when only machinery and equipment are on board, to the "load line" or the safe limit of loading. It represents the weight of the cargo, fuel, stores, water, crew, passengers and whatever else the vessel is designed to carry with safety. Deadweight tonnage is measured by the difference in displacement of the ship when light and when loaded.

Displacement tonnage, used in designating the size of warships, is the total weight of the vessel in tons of 2,240 pounds and everything on board measured by the weight of the sea water displaced. This is based on the principle, discovered by Achimedes, that a floating body displaces a volume of water or other liquid equal to its own weight. A battleship with a tonnage of 35,000 displaces 35,000 long tons of sea water.

A merchant ship with a displacement tonnage of 12,000 might have a deadweight tonnage of 8,000, a gross tonnage of 6,000 and a net (register) tonnage of 4,000.

Santa Monica Captures Suspect Jack the Snipper

Santa Monica, Calif., Jan. 7. (AP) — Let Washington, D.C., continue worrying about its "Jack the Snipper". Santa Monica police said today they had captured theirs.

They booked a 16-year-old youth and said he had admitted spoiling the coiffures of no fewer than eight girls' heads in the last few months. He was quoted as explaining:

"Girls never gave me much of a break and I've got it in for them."

He was picked up at a bus stop, armed with a pair of eight-inch shears. Officers reported two feminine bus-riders had identified him as the long-sought lock-looter.

Washington police are still seeking a snipper who has sheared the locks of numerous women in the United States capital.

Canada Dedicates Cemetery For the Eternal Rest of 137 Who Died as Prisoners of War

Ottawa, Jan. 7 —(CP)—With stolen ceremony, Canada was dedicated a cemetery for the eternal rest of 137 of her sons who died as prisoners of war of the Japanese.

It lies in a quiet wooded glade at Hodogaya, Japan, on the eastern fringe of Yokohama, in the Canadian section of a British commonwealth war cemetery. The New Zealand and Australian plots lie nearby.

All but two of the Canadian dead were soldiers taken prisoner in the fall of Hong Kong Dec. 25, 1941. The other two were naval men taken there too. All 137 met their deaths largely through Japanese negligence and brutality, chiefly at the notorious Niigata camp whose commandants and guards now are under trial.

They lie buried between flowered pathways and beneath simple, gleaming crosses in a section dedicated Nov. 6 when a commemoratory service was attended by some 40 Canadians, almost the entire Canadian community in Japan, together with representatives of both British and United States Army forces. Both Protestant and Catholic services were conducted, followed by the placing of wreaths, the firing of a salute by an honor guard of Royal Welsh Fusiliers, the Last Post and Reveille.

Lt. Col. John A. Baillie, of the Winnipeg Grenadiers, himself a prisoner of the Japanese and currently in Japan in connection with the work on Canadian war graves, arranged the service also placed a wreath on behalf of the officers and other ranks of "C" Force, the Canadian Hong Kong contingent. Mrs. Norman, wife of the head of the Canadian liaison section in Japan; Dr. E. H. Norman, on behalf of the next-of-kin of the fallen servicemen; and by Brig. H.G. Nolan, C. B. E., M. C., Canadian prosecutor before the international military tribunal for the Far East and senior Canadian officer in Japan. All wreaths were placed on a temporary monument erected in the centre of the cemetery, suitably draped with a large flag and topped with a white cross bearing the inscription "Canadian Section."

Full military honors were accorded those soldiers who had been brought to Japan to work in factories and mines following Winnipeg Grenadiers or the Roytheir capture while with the al Rifles of Canada of Quebec City.

I wish you were, for land sakes, ma said. A handy man around the house would certainly be a great saving in time ond money and petty annoyances. Every time some little thing goes wrong with the lites, I have to send for an electrician and he has to bring an assistant helper, she said, and pop said, The trubble is, every time I start to fix something my fingers all tern to thumbs and my thumbs all tern to big toes.

It's just a mental attitude, William, ma said. With just a little more confidence I'm sure you could at least approach a leeky faucet with a ferm step and a new washer. Nobody expects you to be a menacil genius like Yewstace Hews. Maud told me that Yewstace actually fixed their electric toaster last week, she said, and pop said, I can do it. By gollies if I take my time and keep my wits about me, I can do it, he said.

Now William, dont get a Napoleonic complex on the subject, and besides, there's nothing wrong with our electric toaster, touch wood, ma said, and pop said, I'm talking about my meersham pipe. The darn thing is clogged just where the bowl cerves, but if I reason the thing out carefully and exercize patience and judgment, I'll bet I can get it clear with a hot hairpin without jamming a hole in the meersham. I believe you're right my dear, the whole thing is a mental attitude with me, he said.

Oh, such a man, ma said.

Meening pop, and she quick fixed his meersham pipe with a cold hairpin before pop had time to try it with a hot one.

Probably being a lucky thing for him and the pipe.

10,000 Woodsmen Needed in Bush

Ottawa, Jan. 7 —(CP)—Canada's lumber camps, despite labor increase of 15 per cent over last year, still are in need of more than 10,000 woodsmen, Arthur MacNamara, deputy minister of labor said today.

Bulk of the requirements were in the Quebec. The labor demand in Northern Ontario had fallen off but vacancies still existed with most operators.

"There are orders for replacements in all provinces, and as log hauling on the prairies and in the east gets into full swing very soon, numbers of additionmen will be needed."

The situation in British Columbia was "pretty well in hand" although skilled workers were still required.

"High employment is bound to continue in the woods industry," Mr. MacNamara said, "because of the heavy demands for lumber to meet building programs and export requirements, and also to meet the heavy demands for pulpwood products both at home and abroad."

WEDDINGS

SMITH—MARASSE

A pretty wedding took place at the Church of St. Michael the Archangel at nine o'clock, on Saturday morning, Jan. 4, when Marguerite, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Marasse, of North Bay, became the bride of Mr. Douglas Smith, Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Smith, Picton. Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., performed the ceremony.

Yellow and white 'mums adorned the altar for the occasion, and wedding music was played by Miss Dorothy Grant.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Mr. K. D. Smith, brother of the groom, looked charming in a floor-length frock of white sheer, her veil being caught to her hair with orange blossoms. She carried a bridal bouquet of white and pink carnations.

Miss Jeanne Marasse, Toronto, was bridesmaid for her sister, and wore powder blue sheer with matching veil. Her bouquet was of pink carnations.

Mr. John Thompson, Toronto, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Nelson Smith and Mr. L. Smith.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Smith left on a wedding trip to eastern points, the bride wearing for travelling a turquoise blue wool dress, beige coat trimmed with brown squirrel, brown hat and accessories.

Upon their return they will reside in this city.

BEER—BENWAY

At half-past two o'clock on the afternoon of Dec. 28th., 1946, Holloway Street United Church was the setting for a very pretty double-ring marriage ceremony when Helen Ruth Benway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Benway, Hillier, Ont., became the bride of Hershel Eugene Beer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Beer of Belleville, with Rev. C. A. Perkins officating. The chancel was made more than usually attractive for the occasion with lighted snow-white trees, rose-colored cyclamens adding a touch of color and the pews were marked with bows of white satin. As the mother of the bride was seated the soloist sang "The Lord's Prayer".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by Professor Hunt, making a charming picture in a floor-length gown of French maleise, fashioned with sweetheart neckline, long sleeves pointed over the wrists, a full skirt gathered at the sides of the bodice which was buttoned down the full length of the back, and a long veil held in place by a headdress of white lilies and sprinkled with silver sequins. She wore matching silver necklace and earrings and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Mrs. Ray Jones, of Toronto, aunt of the bride, was the matron-of-honor, wearing a floor-length gown of pastel blue, with wreath of pink and blue flowers, pearl centred and matching gloves. She carried a nosegay of carnations and roses.

Miss June Benway was her sister's bridesmaid, in a floor-length gown of poudre blue, with floral wreath of pink and blue, pearl centred, and she carried a nosegay of carnations and roses. The junior bridesmaid was a younger sister, wearing a gown of turquoise blue net, with floral headdress, and a nosegay similar to that of the other bridesmaid.

The groom was assisted by Mr. Clarence Caulkin, the ushers being Mr. Vincent Massey, cousin of the groom, and Mr. Ray Jones, of Toronto, uncle of the bride. During the signing of the register Mrs. Myrtle Houston sang "Because".

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church dining-room, where the receiving line included the bridal party; the bride's mother wearing a gown of black silk crepe, sequin trimmed, matching hat and accessories. Her corsage was of Talisman roses. Mrs. Benway was assisted by the groom's mother in a gown of poudre blue, sequin trimmed, black accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

Three tables were prettily decorated with pink carnations and candles in silver candelabra, the centrepiece on the bride's table being a three-tier wedding cake. Refreshments were served by friends of the bride, Misses Helen McGhee, Hilda Roach, Dorothy Rullied and Irene Thompson.

After the cutting of the cake toasts were proposed by the toastmaster Rev. C. A. Perkins, to the bride, to which the groom responded and to the attendants to which Mr. Clarence Caulkin responded.

For travelling to Montreal, Quebec City and Lac Beauport Skiing Resort, the bride chose a suit of grey wool gabardine, with black top-coat, plastic bag and shoes, relieved by a blouse and gloves in fuchsia shade.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold locket; to the groomsman, a gold penknife, to the ushers, gold tie-pins. The bride's gift to the groom was a gold tie bar and clip, to the matron-of-honor and bridesmaid, earrings, to the junior bridesmaid, a pendant.

Guests from out-of-town were from Toronto and Sidney Township.

Mr. and Mrs. Beer will later take up residence in Belleville.

Wales Quads Born, All Are Under 4 Pounds Each

Bridgend, Wales, Jan. 7 (CP Cable)—First there were three Thomases in the Glamorgan County Hospital maternity ward then, all of a sudden, there were seven.

That was the story of the birth today of quadruplets—two boys and two girls—to slight, small Mrs. Idwal Thomas, 29-year-old wife of a Bridgend painter and army veteran. Only two 23-year-old nurses, Nora Thomas and Nesta Thomas, were in attendance at the multiple births which surprised everybody—including Mrs. Thomas. No doctor was in attendance when Mrs. Thomas walked unaided into the maternity ward.

"Good Heavens!... Quads?" cried the father when he was told of the event at work. He rushed to the hospital to see his wife and said later:

"We had no suspicion there would be quads. I am proud and pleased and very happy my wife is doing well."

But Mr. Jeffrey Jones, medical superintendent in the hospital, said the chances of the quadruplets are small. Each weighed slightly less than two pounds at birth and they now are fighting for life in individual oxygen tents from Bristol. They are being fed through pipettes with a few drops of glucise water at a time. Hospital authorities said the babies were born two months prematurely.

"We had the shock of our lives," said the nurses who delivered the babies. The nurses, incidently are not related to each other or to Mrs. Thomas.

The births bring the number of Thomas children to seven. Two others were killed three years ago in a car accident.

The quads are the first born to a British mother since Dec. 22, when Mrs. Charles Henn, of London, wife of a United States soldier, gave birth to quads in Baltimore, Md.

Churchill Memoirs Will Not Be Ready Until Late in 1949

By RONALD BEDFORD

London, Jan. 7 (Reuters).—The Second Great War memoirs of Winston Churchill, Britain's wartime Prime Minister, will not be completely committed to manuscript form for several years, it was learned from a well-informed source today.

Reports of an early publication of the Conservative Party leader's vast storehouse of political knowledge, which will include the history of the last decade as he knows it, were said to be incorrect.

The work of dictation, part of Churchill's intense daily routine, still is in progress. The work so far accomplished is partly in the notebooks of his secretary and partly on dictaphone roles.

Churchill has steadfastly refused to allow the writing of his memoirs to take up all his time since he relinquished the post of prime minister after his government was defeated in the 1945 general elections.

In addition to his duties as leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons his time is taken up by travels, his new interest in dairy farming, and his hobby of landscape painting.

Churchill's first volume of his memoirs of the First Great War was published in April, 1923. The sixth and last volume of the series appeared in 1931. If he adheres to a similar schedule this time, the first volume of his memoirs of the Second Great War period will not be available to the public until late in 1949.

Better Parenthood Subject of Talk At H. & S. Assoc.

"Better Parenthood" was the theme of an address given by Mrs. J. A. Layton at the regular meeting of the Collegiate Home and School Association on Monday evening in the school auditorium.

Stressing that the intellectual parent does not always make the best parent, Mrs. Layton stated that what was needed was intelligence in parents, rather than intellect.

"Sometimes we get so wrapped up in ideas, that we forget that children belong to a world of action, but not to a world of thought.

"If we, as parents, will have an eye to see, a mind to consider, and a heart to understand, then we will be good parents. We must do as well as think.

Cannot Change Life

"Your child is not your child," emphasized Mrs. Layton. "He is the result of the desire for life to express itself. You may aid his life, you may destroy it, but you cannot change it. Don't try to change your child into your own image, his life is his own."

Quoting a great Hindu philosopher Mrs. Layton continued, "Every child comes with the message that God is not discouraged with man.

"Sometimes we feel too self-important. We feel that our child's destiny is in our hands. Too many children are being driven to try to achieve something for which they are not fitted, and this attitude is partly responsible for the mental breakdowns that are becoming so numerous. Don't expect too much of your child, but expect the best.

Help The Children

"Let use help our children to take their part in the community, to take responsibility in the home and in school, and to become independent, self-respecting citizens. If you give of yourself and your time, that is far more important than money to a child."

Following Mrs. Layton's talk, a play called, "Growing Up Emotionally" was presented with the parts being read by Mrs. S. L. Joss, Mrs. H. Wray, Mrs. R. B. Morden and Mr. H. E. Payne. This dealt with a girl of high scholastic ability, but whose parents were possessive that she was emotionally immature. The play led to a discussion in which the audience participated.

Violin Solos Given

During the evening two violin solos were given by Dr. A. C. Locke, accompanied at the piano by Mr. W. E. Fletcher. With fine tonal effects, Dr. Locke presented the French composer, Jules Maisenet's "Meditation", and as an encore Victor Herbert's "Sweet Mystery of Life", with fine harmony featuring double stops on the violin.

The President, Mrs. G. G. Wright, was in the chair, and she graciously thanked Mrs. Layton and Dr. Locke for their contributions to the program.

Financial Report

Mr. C. J. Heard read the minutes of the previous meeting and Mr. W. C. Lockyer gave the financial report. The conveners of the various committees reported their activities.

Refreshments were served in the cafeteria by the social committee and a social half hour was enjoyed.

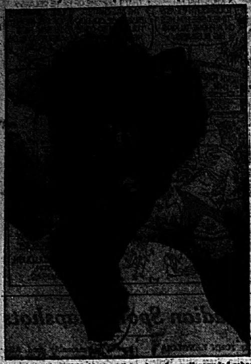
Beauty Sleep is Important



Movie star Vera-Ellen knows the value of a well-rounded schedule

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO you get your beauty sleep, or do you prowl around until all hours of the night, fall into bed feeling all washed up, drag out in the morning looking like a grand old wreck? That's the way with some of the sisters. Soon as the lights are on they think of things to do. It doesn't make sense. The human machine is not made of wire and fiddle strings. The nervous system, as well as the general body structure, must have a certain amount of rest to make up for wear and tear.

If one's mind is at ease and one's muscles are relaxed, it is likely that one will fall asleep like a baby. Worry and over-fatigue will keep the sandman at a distance. Some women fret because they can't get to sleep, can't sleep because they fret. No need of going over one's trouble; they'll be right with one in the morning, and somehow they never seem so big and frightened as they appear at night.

Exercise Before Retiring

Physical education instructors tell us that a few minutes of exercise before going to bed will often bring muscular relaxation. Now don't say you are too tired to exercise. Try it next time when your nerves are protesting and you feel that you are in for a restless night.

Lie flat on your back in bed. Stretch the arms up over your head, then stretch them downward. Stretch the entire body, sending your toes against the foot board of the bed, pulling yourself up from the waistline. Now for a little torso twisting. Turn the hips slowly from left to right and back again, endeavoring to keep the shoulders flat on the mattress. The idea is to make the blood streams flow through the entire body more freely, taking it away from the brain area. At all times keep the body stretched its full length.

Five minutes of this, then five minutes of slow, deep, regular breathing.

GOOD MANNERS

Correct Form For Introducing Her Husband

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been married only a short time, and I find myself "plagued by doubts" as to the correct form to use when I am introducing my husband. To friends and acquaintances I should introduce him as "Phil" or "Philip", shouldn't I? And when, as recently happened, I have occasion to introduce him to strangers at a meeting we attended, should I say "Mr. Robinson" or "Mr. Philip Robinson," or just "my husband?"

Bride

(1) It is only to relatives and friends that you would introduce your husband as "Phil" or "Philip." For example, "Aunt Margaret, this is Phil"; or "Emily, this is Phil."

(2) To a not-very-intimate friend and to an acquaintance, you would introduce your husband as "my husband". The most formal kind of introduction in this group would be: "Mrs. Crane, may I present (or 'introduce') my husband?" Then the forms: "Mrs. Foster, this is my husband," or "Mrs. Atwater..my husband."

(3) For the particular occasion you mention, when the stranger may not know the name of either you or your husband and you would like to give this information, you might say, "....this is my husband, Philip Robinson," or this form, "My name is Mrs. Philip Robinson..and this is my husband." As a matter of fact it sometimes is appropriate for a wife to mention her husband's name in an introduction: an example is when she has recently married a man whose name some of her friends or acquaintances don't know: "Miss Rowland, this is my husband, John Alexander."

Questions About Her Daughter's Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter is to have an afternoon church wedding. (1) Should she present a corsage or a gift to the girl friend who is to be soloist and the one who is to play the organ at the wedding? (2) She is wearing a wedding dress with a train. To this afternoon wedding would it be suitable for her to wear a velvet evening cape? (3) She and the bridegroom will receive relatives and friends at the rear of the church. Do the parents stand in the receiving-line with the bride and bridegroom?

A Mother

(1) If these friends are professionals, they should be given their customary professional fees. If they aren't professionals, or if they prefer not to accept fees from your daughter, she should give each a gift as well as sending each a corsage. (2) Yes, if it is necessary for her to wear a wrap to the church. She may leave it in the car that brings her to the church, or in a room adjoining the church entrance. (3) That depends. If there are many guests to be received and the vestibule is small, usually only the bride and bridegroom receive. But if they wish and if it can be conveniently arranged, the attendants and the parents also receive the guests.

Formal Dress for 'The Mothers'

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter is being married the last of next month: a formal church wedding in the morning. Her father, who is to give her in marriage, will wear formal day attire. I've been told that the groom's mother and I should also wear formal dress as we are going to be in the receiving-line at the reception after the ceremony. Which is proper for us, a sort of dinner dress, or a street-length dress?

O. V.

I imagine it is your daughter who has suggested that you and the groom's mother wear formal-length dresses at her wedding which she obviously wants to have a formal one! At a formal daytime wedding (morning or afternoon) the bride's mother (who is the hostess of the wedding) and the groom's mother (who is the woman guest of honor) wear dresses of formal length (dresses of simple dinner-type), with hat and accessories to match or contrast. Often for a daytime wedding, and particularly to a morning wedding, the mothers wear ensembles of long dress and bolero or short jacket.

Fashion Flashes

WE MIGHT HAVE KNOWN that something like this would come along! One designer shows a daytime dress of warm wool jersey with the coy touch of one quite bare shoulder. But there's a cover-up bolero too!

AIRY FAIRY confections are perched atross smart coiffures. Topping afternoon and informal evening clothes are charming hats of pale pink silk gauze or tulle bright with luscious pink silk and velvet roses.

WHY NOT promote dressy gloves of wool? One old-line American firm puts out beautiful gloves of handknit wool in intricate and interesting designs with such touches as contrasting lacing up the side or hand embroidered motifs in luscious colors and bright color contrasts. Expensive, but so good!

IT SEEMS that the male animal is registering objections to the eternal little black frock for after-five wear. And so there's a demand for frocks in brown, blue and gray satin. Steel gray satin is used for a beautifully draped afternoon frock that lends itself to brown, black or pink touches and accessories.

JUST AS MANY fabric evening wraps as fur are seen at smart events. Gold brocade with nutria, black wool with bright embroidery, crisply tailored coast of gold lame, all are part of the smart evening picture.

THE RETURN of travel has brought with it the fur-trimmed travel coat. Gray tweed, flecked with red, yellow and brown, is used for a handsome coat made rippling full in back and topped with a huge collar of gray fox. Easy cut for wear over a suit or wool dress.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Well shod; fleet of foot

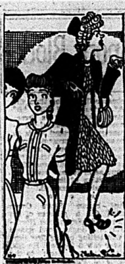
Think of it! Seven women among ten are afflicted with foot ills of a minor or major nature, and all because they don't treat their feet with ordinary consideration, usually packing them into cases that are not suitable. Such a lot of time and money is spent on coiffures, complexion care, manicures, and grand dry goods, and never a thought is given the feet that tote us around all the day long.

If the pedals are not in normal condition, it is good economy to go to a specialist for examination and treatments. One glance at the defects and deformities will tell the story. His keen eyes will know at once what is wrong and the proper shoe will be recommended. How many women know what shoe is suitable? They judge by style and appearance usually. There's a great difference in the formation of human feet, and the shoe should conform to the outline and proportions of the foot. Some of those girls who are hobbling along painfully with their svelte shapes encased in fur coats could have put their money to better use.

Cursed with aching feet, one hurts all over. The facial expression is tense, the body is out of balance, and the sweetest disposition curdles.

Women neglect their feet and also abuse them. If they are bothered with a corn, calloused spot or ingrowing nail, they fancy they can take care of it. They gouge the flesh with manicure scissors or eyebrow tweezers, often cause painful wounds that result in infections. The stories chiropodists could tell about cases like that would fill volumes. Keep one rule in mind; never use a steel instrument of any kind on your feet. If you have a corn, massage it with mineral oil after a good soaking. Next day friction it with a toilet pumice stone. But don't try to cut it.

Even if a corn is removed, the hardened flesh will bank up again if the same shoes are worn. Thickend cuticle is nature's way of protecting against injury. It is caused by pressure or friction.



Cursed with aching feet, one hurts all over

If proper shoes were worn, toes would be as straight and as flexible as fingers. If your little toe has done a disappearing act under its next door neighbor, it is proof that you have worn shoes much too narrow. Narrow shoes will also cause the big toe to slant inward. Then you must watch out. A bunion may be on the way, and you may be in for surgical attention. If often happens that a hammer toe has to be amputated.

No woman can move with lightness and grace unless her feet are in normal condition. That's why so many of the sisters hobble along or shuffle or take mincing steps.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Two Serious Problems are Too Many With Which to Begin a Marriage

There are probably few young couples about to be married who haven't at least one problem they will have to solve together. Sometimes it's a question of money: how they'll be able to live on what they have. Or, in these post-war days, it may be a health problem of a returned serviceman. Frequently there's the matter of different religions to be worked out, and most frequent of all, just now, is the one arising from the housing shortage. Will the bride and groom live with in-laws, and if so, how can they adjust to the situation?

When any two people decide to spend the rest of their lives together, there are bound to be things that will take a long time perhaps to iron out satisfactorily. That's only to be expected, and should be accepted sensibly and dealt with intelligently.

But when there's more than one major problem that will have to be solved, if a marriage is to be successful, one, it's another matter. And I think any young people who find that to be the case should think things over carefully before joining forces, and make definite decisions that each would promise to abide by after marriage. Unless they can agree on their joint course beforehand, and then stick to it, there is bound to be trouble.

Here, for instance, is a girl engaged to a man not only of a different faith, but who appears to be tied to his mother's apron strings as well:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I have been engaged for a year now, and would get married, but I am the one who is hesitating.

"My marriage would mean moving about three hundred miles to his home. This I wouldn't mind, but because we are of different faiths, I must get married in my church and bring the children up in my faith. To this he has agreed, but his mother has just visited me and told me, as cold as ice, that I cannot have her son unless the children are brought up in his faith. I told her that if her son loves me, I'm sure it wouldn't mean anything where we get married, and I told her also that I'm sure no grandmother would hate her grandchildren because their faith was different from hers. To this she replied that I should get it in my head once and for all that her son is boss and they will be his children.

"I'm deeply in love with this boy, but I wouldn't like to go three hundred miles from home. I'd be willing to go 200 miles, and then be 100 miles away from my in-laws. He told me I was selfish and he didn't think I took the right attitude. He said if anything were to happen to his mother, he would like to be near her.

"I was to be married in January, but now I feel I'd be walking into a mess. This boy went back home with his mother, and told me he is sure she would get to love me once I lived with her. It would mean living in the same house with her. But this business can be carried on in any other place and he doesn't need to hang on to Mom's apron strings."

I think that this girl is exactly right in her feeling that she'd be "walking into a mess" if she married this boy. Of course she must realize that what she says about it not making any difference where they were married, if this boy loves her, applies to her just as much as it does to him; that he could, with perfect logic, tell her that if she loved him, she wouldn't mind what church they were married in. Perhaps if "Mom" would leave her son alone, the two young people could work things out satisfactorily between themselves. But obviously 'Mom' isn't that kind, and intends to keep Sonny right where she can see what's going on all the time.

Unless this boy is ready to take a firm stand with his mother and tell her his marriage is his own affair; that he intends to have a home of his own and it will be at a good distance from her, and that he doesn't intend to permit her to interfere between his wife and himself, I think this girl had better call off her plans. For as matters now stands, she'll be simply asking for trouble, and plenty of it, if she marries into such a family.

This Doesn't Sound Like a Serious Problem. "Puzzled"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 19 and I care very much for a fellow who visits my house regularly. I used to go with his best friend, but I stopped seeing him when he told me he loved me, because I didn't feel the same way.

Now this fellow I care for has told my sister he would like very much to ask me out, but he thinks that some day I will go back with this boy friend of his. How can I make him understand I don't care for his friends at all?

"Puzzled"

If this young man in whom you are interested is already discussing you with your sister, I should think it would be a simple matter for him to explain the situation to him. Why not ask her to tell him, if he mentions to her again the matter of taking you out, that yould would like very much to go and that you have no idea of resuming your friendship with the other boy at any time. I should think your sister would be glad to help you out by doing this little favor for you.

If your young man visits you regularly, as you say, why should he hesitate to ask you to go out with him? That seems silly to me. If there is no other way out of the thing, can't you suggest, some night when he comes over, that the two of you go to a movie or something? I don't see that you have a difficult problem here. You should be able to give this boy a push in the right direction quite easily.

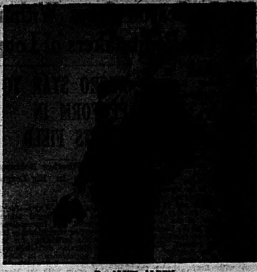
Satin Afternoon Suit



By ALICE ALDEN

FOR AFTERNOON-into-evening wear, the beautifully cut, finely detailed suit of black, brown or navy satin, has many devotees amongst fashion-wise women. Black with pink is always a striking color scheme, and Nicole de Paris uses it for this handsome afternoon suit of black satin worn with a blouses of cyclamen pink silk made with a frilly jabot, and a hat that is mostly matching pink ostrich. The long-line jacket has interesting touches of velvet on the collar and pockets and it was made to be teamed up with a matching evening skirt for after dark occasions.

Sugar

(From Thomas Richard Henry in Toronto Telegram)

R. O Woodruff from the 10th Congressional District in Michigan has dug into sugar statistics and sent the result of his tadies to the Washington Food Study Committee

He writes in part:

"I have repeatedly made inquiries into the reasons for the acute sugar shortage and the possibilities of relief for 1947. I find that the Philippines have sent no sugar to the United States in 1946 and will send very little in 1947 and 1948. Imports of sugar from Cuba in 1946 will approximate only 2,600,000 tons in 1945. Yet, the Cuban crop was larger this year. I also find that United States consumers have a supply not expected to exceed 5,610,000 tons which would be 430,000 tons less than 1945, and our domestic beet sugar production is expected to be at least 400,000 tons greater in 1946. Now, with our beet sugar production up and Cuba's production up, one may well ask why our sugar bowls are empty.

"The answer is the production carried out by the Combined Food Board, which has lately been expanded into the International Emergency Food Commission. The Combined Food Board was composed of the United States, Great Britain and Canada. The United States and its offshore territories make the greatest contribution to the pool as they furnish over 60 per cent of the sugar consumed in this country in addition to sharing with other nations the 3,768,000 tons which the United States bought from Cuba. In short, United States consumers get only the remaining 1,643,000 tons are 2,125,000 tons from Cuba and distributed to other nations by the commission. By comparison Britain wil provide less than 30 per cent of her sugar consumption, whereas Canada will produce only 18 per cent of its sugar needs.

"Canada is producing only 65 per cent of its beet sugar plant capacity with the largest beet sugar plant in Ontario standing idle for the past five years."

Mr. Woodruff doesn't sound very sweet on the sugar situation.

Slim Suit of Beige Gabardine

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

HERE'S a slim suit of gabardine in a caramel beige shade, a nice suit for now with furs and just right under a black or brown fur coat later in the year. Tiny pennant-like tabs parade down the front of the fitted jacket which closes with tiny gold buttons below a neat little turned-down collar. The armhole is easy and the sleeves straight. The jacket is of the longer length which is so much liked just now. The skirt is straight and pencil-slim.

Veteran Toe Blake in 12th N.H.L. Season Stays Within First Ten Pointmakers of Loop

Rocket Richard is First With Teeter Kennedy of Leafs in Second Position

Montreal, Jan. 7. (CP)—Veteran Toe Blake, enjoying his 12th successive season with the world champion Montreal Canadiens, continues to stay within the first 10 in the National Hockey League scoring race, League statistics released today revealed.

The 33-year-old left winger, winner of the Lady Byng and Hart trophies, is in seventh position in the individual scoring race with 10 goals and 14 assists for 24 points. Another veteran Sylvanus Apps of the League-leading Toronto Maple Leafs, has managed to stay up front in ninth place to offset rumors that he still isn't in the running. The pivot-man, completing his ninth season with Leafs, shares the ninth rung with Chicago's George Hamill and Boston's Woody Dumart.

Maurice "The Rocket" Richard of Canadiens shows promise of duplicating his 1944-45 season feat of scoring 50 goals in one season. Richard leads the goal-getting and total-point departments with 23 goals and 16 assists for 39 points.

Ted "Teeter" Kennedy, of Toronto, dropped from seven to nine points behind Richard this week. Kennedy has sunk 17 tallies and assisted in 13 others.

Taylor Third

Billy "The Kid" Taylor of Detroit, in third position, leads the assist department with 20 credits while he has also bulged the twine on nine occasions for 29 points. Boston's Milt Schmidt follows one point behind with 28 points made up of 12 goals and 16 assists.

Toronto with 20 wins, four ties and seven losses for 44 points continues to set the pace for the standings race. Canadiens in second place with 19 victories, three splits and seven defeats, are three points behind Leafs, but hold two games in hand over them. Rangers and Boston have entered a neck and neck race third position. Boston is presently in sole possession of third place with 28 points while Rangers, having won their last two outings via the shut-out route have moved within one point of the Bruins. Chicago remain the cellar-dwellers with 18 points.

Rayner Steals Show

New York's Chuck Rayner stole the hockey spotlight during the past week by turning in two shut-outs on successive nights against Toronto and Chicago. He shares the shut-out honors with Toronto's Turk Broda with three "goose-eggs" each. Bill Durnan of Canucks leads the net custodians, allowing only 61 goals in 29 games.

Pat "Bad" Egan of Boston, holds the dubious honor of having spent the most time in the penalty "cooler". Rearguard Egan amassed 30 minutes via a match misconduct in a game with Detroit to bring his grand total to 73 minutes spent in the "Sin Bin".

NEGRO STAR TO PERFORM IN EBBETS FIELD

Question Whether Robinson Will Play in Big League This Year

Brooklyn, Jan. 7—(AP)—Jackie Robinson, crack Negro athlete who captured the International League batting championship last season while infielding for the Montreal Royals, definitely will make an appearance in Ebbets Field this season but whether he will play again with the Montrealers or with the big league Dodgers remains to be seen.

Robinson and the "people's cherce" Dixie Walker were among the persons and things discussed at a press conference held yesterday by Branch Rickey, Dodger president.

Rickey announced that the Brooks and the Royals, a Dodger farm, will meet in exhibition games at Ebbets Field April 9 and 10 thus insuring Robinson's presence. The former three-sport U.C.L.A. athlete and first member of his race to play in organized ball since 1900, however, still in a member of the International Leaguers.

Robinson, a .349 clouter in '46 also may be called upon to play with an independent Panama nine in the event Montreal trains in Havana with the parent Dodgers. The haziness over the whole situation rests on the ability of the Dodgers to get suitable quarters for the combined groups in Havana.

If the Royals go to Havana then Robinson will play with a Panamanian nine which is scheduled to face Brooklyn March 10.

"We would like Robinson to train with the Panama team," Rickey explained, "so that when the Dodgers go there on March 10 he will play against us in exhibitions. He will not play with the Dodgers unless he is officially signed with Brooklyn."

Walker, regular rightfielder, will not be sold, traded or brushed aside by any rising rookie, Rickey said, adding:

"Right now, Dixie is a better ball player than at any time in his life. We have 122 other outfielders in our organization and I don't think there's one of them capable of taking Dixie's job."

They call him "Phantom Phil" Hergesheimer because of his will-'o-the-wisp style on the ice and he has been patrolling a lot of right wing for the Philadelphia Rockets in the American Hockey League.

Phil was unanimously elected captain of the Rockets by his teammates and it is a tribute to his "never say die" spirit whether his club is on top or the bottom. Last season, playing for the Cleveland Barons in the play-off series for the Calder Cup, Phil registered 16 points to tie for the play-off scoring championship. He has been playing in his old time style this season for the Rockets and has been steadily improving his position among the league's leading snipers.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Rome Taylor, convener of the Intermediate group which comprises Trenton Flyers, Bloomfield, Mountain View Airmen and Picton Combines dropped into the office yesterday afternoon and registered surprise at the Intermediate "A" Group playoffs as decided upon at the recent meeting in Kingston called by convener Lorne Cook.

• • •

At that meeting it was decided to have the teams finishing second and third place in the group standing playoff in home and home games with goals to count, the winner to meet the group leaders in a similar series.

• • •

According to Rome, the Trenton delegation to the meeting left before the play-off series were decided upon and they were surprised to note that such an arrangement had been made. And, we might add, it was far from satisfactory to the boys from the town east of here.

• • •

Trenton claims that since its intermediate squad and that of Queen's University were listed as "B" teams playing with the "A" squads from Kingston and Belleville that the "B" squads should play off for the right to enter their group playdowns ditto the "A's". Which seems like a logical idea.

• • •

The truth of the thing is that the matter of the Trenton and Queen's teams being "B" teams with the Kingston Lions and Belleville Veterans being "A" did not enter the minds of the conference that is, unless we and "Toots" Holway were out of the room when the matter was brought up. Playdown arrangements were made as though the four teams were of the same grouping. In fact the only one to mention a four-team playoff was Max Jackson of Kingston.

• • •

And the honorable Max wanted the four-team playoff set-up purely from a financial point of view. He figured that it takes money to operate a hockey club, (where, oh where, have we heard that plaint before?), and the more games played the more dinero for the clubs concerned, especially if the jousts are of a playoff nature. But Maxie was voted down. But of course that was in the junior "B" series, and did not affect the intermediate laddies.

• • •

However Trenton is up in arms over the present playoff system and the matter will be placed before Convener Lorne Cook. It seems only fair that since Trenton and Queen's U. Seconds have been grouped as Intermediate "B" with two "A" teams that one of the squads should represent the grouping in the OHA playdowns. Admittedly time is short as the present schedule stretches to Feb. 24 and according to the OHA edicts group winners must be declared by March 1st.

• • •

That doesn't give the clubs much time to indulge in play-off series, especially in view of the fact that Trenton and Belleville have natural ice rinks and there is always the possibility of games being postponed due to soft ice.

• • •

As a matter of fact, if the group decides to give Trenton what it wants, and if the schedule finishes on time, the "A" squads and the "B" teams could play a three-game series instead of the 2-game-goals-to-count as is in vogue at the present. True, there is only four days leeway between the official ending of the schedule and Mar. 1 but as in former years, an extenuation of three or four days could be granted.

• • •

Just before Steve Owen headed for a glimpse of the talent on display at the North-South and Sugar Bowl games he was telling of the first time he ever saw a football. He had ridden his cow pony to the campus at Phillips University from his Oklahoma ranch, had dismounted at the side of the gridiron and was idly watching various ball-carriers run the gauntlet of tacklers.

• • •

"I was a-standin' there," he recounted, "and the coach spotted me on the sidelines. He threw a ball at me and said: 'Let's see you run, sonny.' I gripped the dang thing and ran the full length of the gridiron without a single feller being able to tackle me. 'Very good, sonny,' he says. 'Now let's see you run it again. But this time I want you to take your spurs off.'"

• • •

• • •

Quotation of the Week—Shirley Povich, the Washington scribe, recently interviewed Clark Griffith and thereupon produced the prize quotation of the past week. Griff was asked if he expected trouble in signing that shrinking violet (?) Bobo Newsom. "Sure, I'll have a salary argument with Newsome," remarked the Old Fox. "Bobo will refuse to sign until I make him an offer. What he wants now, I think, is one of those lifetime fountain pens and contract to match."

• • •

Coach Doug Whillans red-shirted Junior "Bees" buzzed angrily around the Trenton nets after a one-goal set-back in the first period of last night's opening Junior "A" tilt at the Hume Arena, then suddenly flashing to scoring life, rode practically rough-shod over a fighting little town West o' here.

• • •

The early season crowd was somewhat surprised to see a well-balanced hard-shooting team of Belleville kids who put their gears into high, forgot the brakes and flew along the ice at top-speed for the full sixty minutes.

• • •

The red-sweatered beardless buckaroos from the banks of the Moira showed plenty of power for an opening game. They were deadly around the nets, showed plenty of what it takes on the defence and clearly out-skated the plucky Trenton team going both ways. They back-checked like veterans and their defence used the body unsparingly, in fact they were a little too ambitious at times and drew down the wrath of referee Speedy St. Louis on not a few occasions.

TWO-HOUR NECK OPERATION ON RUTH SUCCESSFUL

Former Sultan of Swat Operated on by Six Specialists

By MURRAY ROSE

New York, Jan. 7 — (AP)—Always a tough man to beat in the clutch, Babe Ruth today appeared to have licked temporarily an undisclosed ailment which necessitated a delicate two-hour neck operation yesterday.

At French hospital, where the operation was performed by Dr. Hippolyte Wertheim, condition of the fabulous home run king was described as "satisfactory."

That one-word report issued soon after the operation gladdened the hearts of millions of his admirers, and was used again and again until the late hours of the night when the last bulletin was given out.

When hospital authorities announced that the next report would be announced at 11 a.m. E.S.T. today, the last few of the many fans who had gathered outside the gates of the downtown hospital to hear the news first-hand drifted slowly away.

The condition of the Babe, who transformed baseball from a game of "hold that run" to slugging bees with his tremendous, crowd-pleasing, home-run wallops, still was considered serious, however.

But even up to the time he was wheeled into the surgery room for the operation deemed necessary by six specialists to relieve intractable (uncontrollable) neck pain, the Babe was cheery and maintained his bluff ways.

Nurses who have attended Ruth since he entered the hospital Nov. 26 said that he had been a "good patient". One said that he was "a very cheerful fellow" although he had suffered much pain.

Back in the summer of 1944 the Bambino was operated on for the removal of a knee cartilage.

"I've been in so many hospitals," he chuckled at the time, "that they ought to make me a doctor. Even when I get a hangnail, they say, 'get the big bum to a hospital.'"

The record books are packed with records established by this 51-year-old baseball great—he'll be 52 in February — but those most remembered are his 60 homers for the New York Yankees in 1927 and his $80,000 annual salary in 1930 and 1931 and even in these inflationary days the sum commands respect.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By JOHN LANGLOIS

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Halifax, Jan. 7 — (CP) — The fans stamp their feet and swing their arms and horses blow steam in possibly Canada's most novel regular harness racing feature — the Saturday overcoat meets of the Halifax Harness Horse Club on the broad North Common here.

Staged weekly throughout the winter on historic grounds that once felt the thud and precision of drilling garrison cavalry regiments, the meets draw hundreds of hardy sportsmen.

It is the most informal race meeting in these parts. Racing on the grounds started out a few years ago when a couple of horsemen challenged each other to a sprint along the uneven Common and laid $5 down for interest. The entries grew to three and four in succeeding weekends and now they are 25. The sponsored meets began three years ago.

There is no grandstand as such on the Common, and the semi-circular quarter-mile track is unfenced except at the finish point and at a turn that is as sharp as the famous Tattenham Corner at Epsom.

The lack of fencing sees spectators strolling across the track and often the last horse finishes hazardously into a milling crowd making for the one shack in the area — the pari-mutuel booth, right on the finish line. If the horses have too much speed they coast across adjacent Robie St. almost onto the lawn of Gordon Isnor, Liberal Member of Parliament for Halifax.

The condition of the track is regarded as reasonably good. After a heavy snow, a snow-plow clears a lane wide enough for the horses.

One of the difficulties in connection with the races is lack of accommodation for new entries. The traditional three heats in each event had to be pared to two because of early darkness.

Halifax formerly had a regular track, at the exhibition grounds. But it was taken over by the services during the war. Now a sorely-needed housing development has sprung up and the towering grandstand overlooks roof-tops.

The idea of fall and winter racing of course, is not new. Toronto fans get their share of it in the annual program at Dufferin Park which operates until Jan. 1.

In the Maritimes, ice races are staged at Dartmouth, just across the harbor from Halifax, and near Charlottetown. Other races are held at Sydney and Antigonish, N.S.

Some of the proceeds of the Halifax meets go to benevolent organizations in the city. A 10 per cent levy on the club's commission from the pari-mutuel machine is given over to the civic recreation fund. Last year, the club gave $300 to the Halifax Cancer Fund.

C. L. Dauphinee, president of the Harness Horse Club, sees a great future for the races on the Commons.

"Proof of the races' popularity is seen in the mounting attendance and entries," he said. "When 3,000 fans will stick out a cold winter afternoon, there can be no doubt about how the meets are going over."

Messrs Yawkey, Dyer and Musial Are Outstanding 1946 Men of Baseball

St. Louis, Mo.—Thomas Yawkey, president of the Boston Red Sox; Eddie Dyer, manager of the Cardinals, and first baseman Stanley Musial, also of the Cardinals, were named the outstanding men of the major leagues in their field for 1946 by the Sporting News in the baseball weekly's annual citations of the No. 1 men of the year.

In the minors, similarly honored, were Earl Mann, president of the Atlanta Southern Association Crackers; Clay Hopper, manager of the Montreal International League Royals, and Sebastion Sisti, shortstop of the Indianapolis American Association Indians, who is returning to the Boston Braves after leading the league with a batting average of .343.

Yawkey's untiring efforts and lavish investments in players and farms to give Boston a pennant winner, earned him the title of No. 1 executive of the year. The Sporting News also points out that he has built up an organization that promises to be a factory in pennant races for many years to come.

Outstanding Manager

The accolade of No. 1 manager of the year was bestowed on Dyer for his handling of the Cardinals in the strenuous closing days of the season, through the playoff for the National League pennant with the Dodgers and in the World's Series triumph over the highly-favored Red Sox. The Sporting News points out that his test as a freshman pilot came early, when, stepping into the shoes of Billy Southworth, he found himself faced with finding replacements for players traded during the winter and lost through raids by the Mexican League. His daring decision to move Stan Musial from the outfield to first base and his success in alternating 3 light-hitting outfielders, making Murry Dickson a winning starting pitcher, converting Red Schoendienst into a second baseman and in juggling his lineup and mound staff are cited as examples of his managerial genius. Credit for the spirit, courage and teamwork of the Redbirds that overcame many obstacles also is given Dyer. The Redbird manager won the 1942 award for the minors, when he piloted Columbus to an American Association pennant.

This Boy Musial

Musial was hailed as the outstanding player of the year, because, in addition to taking over an unfamiliar position at 1st place and playing it well, he not only led the National League in batting with an average of .365, but was first in the number of hits, runs, singles and doubles, topped the sluggers with a percentage of .587 and ranked third in runs batted in.

Ten years after winning the 1936 award as the No. 1 business executive in the minors, Earl Mann of Atlanta qualified again for the distinction for turning in an unprecedented record as an independent club operator. His club drew an attendance of 395,699, nearly a fourth of the Southern Association's record 1,831,236 and the Crackers won their sixth flag in the 12 years he has been in charge.

Clay Hopper's ability to perform near-miracles with an average pitching staff, his development of rookies and his knack of blending speed and power are credited with the triple success of the Montreal club in winning the International League championship, Shaughnessy playoffs and junior world's series title.

The comeback of Sibby Sisti at Indianapolis was hailed by the Sporting News. Accepting a demotion from the Braves with a determination to fight his way back to the majors, Sisti, shifted from the other side of the infield to second base, handled the most chances at the keystone sack and, although only a .240 hitter with the Braves, topped the American Association with a batting average of .343, led in triples, was second in doubles and total bases and tied for fourth in runs scored.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

In Horse Sense you really get cool proof for all of the best standard rules. In action they work almost foolproof unless you are playing with fools.

You may have noticed bidding systems that depend on inferences. Their bids require a new interpretation with each new set of hands. Users become result players, varying opinions to what happens.

Not so with Horse Sense. Every rule in it has a precise meaning. The advice it gives with one hand is the same as with every hand. If partner holds to rule, what he says is plainly understandable.

Comes a letter with the pair of hands shown here:

SOUTH
♠4
♥A Q J 5 4 3 2
♦7 4 2
♣Q 6
NORTH
♠A 8 5 2
♥K
♦A 6 5
♣A K 10 8 3

It seems the couple stopped at a contract of five diamonds. At the critical moment, one of them decided they did not have a slam. They ask me to go into detail with the correct bidding.

We would have bid the hands like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
Pass	1 C
1 H	2 C
3 H	3 NT
4 H	4 NT
5 D	6 H

Each bid shown here can prove its definite meaning. Not only with these hands. With all hands now and in the future. So it can.

That long and strong suit of throbs in the south hand is pretty to look at. The temptation is to show it. It lacks some stuff.

To open you should have four high cards with two sure ones in a total of five tricks. Otherwise, an opening gets off to an unsound partnership start. The woods are full of them.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Canadian film circles are buzzing over the possibility that the up-and-coming young Montreal company, Quebec Productions Corporation, may screen Hugh McLennan's best-selling "Two Solitudes." They have the inside track to bring the book of life before the cameras.

Chairman Paul Langlais dreams of building up an all-Canadian company and part of this centres on Canadian stories. The company's first productions French and English versions of the novel, "Whispering City," have had to rely on Hollywood for about 70 per cent of their technicians and cast. Canadian angles have included the setting Quebec City; the star of the French version, Paul Dupuis; Nicole Germaine as the French Heroine and a group of other Montreal actors who played small parts; John (You'll get used to it) Pratt, as the managing editor in the English picture; orchestra leader Jean Deslauriers, playing himself; an original concerto composed by 18-year-old Andre Mathieu.

Behind this array of native talent is an enthusiastic group of Canadian technical assistants who are training to take over key technical jobs themselves. Heading them is Dick Jarvis of Vancouver who cut his movie teeth producing the R. C. A. F.'s "New Faces," a documentary on plastic surgery.

The films now being cut and polished for spring release, won't be known by their working titles "The Stronghold," and "La Fortresse," but the new names have not yet been announced.

Currently the companys' six-acre studio and lot at the former naval barracks at St. Hyacinthe are snowed in.

The snow will be featured in the next picture "Sourire Dans La Tempete" (Smiling in the Now), if present plans take shape. European director Harry Sokal, who has specialized in snow pictures, will direct.

Future plans include the possibility of having Toronto-born Walter Huston make the screen version of the play, "Apple Of His Eye," in which he is starring.

Paul Dupuis, former Montreal CBC announcer who played the romantic lead in Johnny Frenchman," is reported to have turned in such an excellent performance in "La Fortresse" that the company tried to buy his contract from J. Arthur Rank, but without success. Instead they have made arrangements to borrow him for at least one one other film probably in English.

Three Guelph Youths Held

Buffalo, N.Y., Jan. 7 — (CP)—Three Guelph youths were held without charge today for questioning following their arrest yesterday when a liquor store owner became suspicious of their actions and called police.

The youths, one of whom was carrying a loaded revolver, police said, are George G. Roy, 21, Kenneth A. Amos, 19 (both of 213 Oxford St.) and Mike Zaduk, 17 (28 Stevenson St.).

William M. Flanigan, proprietor of the store, said the trio entered the store twice, acting in a manner which caused him alarm.

Betting Boys Preparing For Grand National

By VERNON MORGAN

London, Jan. 7. (Reuters) — Although it still is nearly three months off, the betting boys of Britain are preparing for their greatest event of year in horse racing—the Grand National.

Official figures show that the pari-mutuels here did a thriving business during 1946 to the tune of just under £20,000,000 ($60,000,000). When March 28—the date of the Grand National—rolls around, thousands of Britons again will be reaching in their pockets.

The great Irish steeplechaser, Prince Regent, which finished third in last year's Grand National over the tough Aintree course, so far has dominated the unofficial betting market here, but lately several new threats have appeared.

Hottest tip today is Bricett, a 10-year-old gelding, which looked a sure winner last year until he fell at a thorn obstacle six jumps from the finish. In his first outing this year at Cheltenham, Gloucestershire, Bricett breezed to an easy victory.

Lovely Cottage, winner of the 1946 National, came out last week and made a bad showing.

Two horses which once sold for less than £5 ($20) will be the "dark horses" this year. They are Colored Schoolboy and Boccaccio. Colored Schoolboy beat Lovely Cottage last week, and the railbirds predict he will be well-backed in March.

Only doubt about Colored Schoolboy is whether his owner will enter him in the National.

But one old-timer will be missing at Aintree on Grand National Day. Charlie Foy, who earned £62,500 ($250,000) as a jockey, died in the charity ward of a Cumberland hospital last week. He was once given a gold-mounted whip by King George V in 1914 he earned £7,500 and rode 60 winners.

England Battles To Tie With Australia

Melbourne, Jan. 7 —(CP)—England battled to a tie with Australia in the third test cricket match today as the six-day contest ended with the visitors still at bat in their second innings. The English team had scored 310 for seven wickets in the second innings when stumps were drawn.

Australia will retain the mythical "ashes," emblematic of the world cricket championship, since they one the first two games of the series. Two more tests remain to be played.

The British 11 worked stubbornly in an attempt to remain in throughout the day and force the draw. Had they taken on the virtually impossible task of trying to overtake Australia's lead with risky, fast-scoring strokes, the odds are that all of England's batsmen would have gone out and Austrlia would have won.

The Australians who went to bat first when the match began New Year's Day tallied 365 in their first innings and rolled up a 536 in their second. The British first inning total was 351.

When they resumed play after the luncheon interval, the British eleven lost three wickets for 57 runs. Denis Compton was run out at 186 and nine runs later Cyril Washbrook's fine innings came to an end when he missed the ball which struck the middle and off stumps.

Rain interrupted play for 16 minutes and at 211 John Ikin was caught by Hasset of Miller for five. Wally Hammond and Yardley played time out before tea.

Eddie Shore Becomes Part Owner of Team

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 7—(AP)—Eddie Shore, owner of hockey teams in Springfield, Mass., and Ft. Worth, Tex., has become half owner of the San Diego Skyhawks of the Pacific Coast Hockey League and Glacier Gardens, the Skyhawks skating rink, it was announced last night.

Details of the transaction were revealed by Al Leader, league managing director who sold his holdings to Shore in order to devote his full attention to the coast circuit's administrative duties.

Of his immediate plans for Glacier Gardens, Shore said he intends to spend more than $10,000 for new lighting. He said he would help in any way he can to see that San Diego always has a good team.

ST. MICHAEL'S PLASTER SZABOS

(By The Canadian Press)

Even the most loyal Hamilton supporter had to admit today that Toronto's St. Michael's College majors were just a bit better than the hometown Szabos—10 goals better in fact.

In four O.H.A. Junior "A" games between the two clubs this season, including last night's Hamilton fixture the scorers have been 12-2, 11-1, 10-0 and 12-2. Compared with 18-1 and 15-0 verdicts hung up in other league games this season it may not look too bad, but the 5-5 edge in goals over the four games is convincing enough.

Captain Ed Sandford and Flaming Fleming Mackell led the league-leading Irish to their lopsided triumph. Mackell, the league's scoring leader picked up four goals and five assists while his linemate had four and two. McLellan, Harrison, Costello and Paul were two other Irish marksmen while Hogany and Piasecki found the range for the losers.

The smooth-working Irish scored three of their goals while playing a man short.

BURNED FINGERS

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 38.

"Mollie! Dying? And you didn't tell me!"

"No. He got shot through the arm. They wouldn't let Dan see him." Mollie closed the firm big fingers of her left hand upon her right arm above the elbow.

"Oh no!" Jennifer had turned white.

"Jennifer, do you still care so much? I wish I hadn't told you," Mollie said, alarmed.

"Care so much! With every fiber of me," said Jennifer in a voice that thrilled like a bell. "Always—always—to the end of my life." Mollie looked at her guest and thought that never since the old days in the offices of Tyrell, Jenks, and Simons, since the long-ago night when she had loaned little Jennifer Richie slippers and a party dress, had she seen Jennifer looking so beautiful. In this moment of supreme emotion the younger woman's eyes were like stars, a flush of excitement had come into her cheeks, a blue curled ostrich feather came down from her caplike little hat to touch the shining waves of her hair and the curve of her cheek, the frills of delicate embroidery at her throat showed the soft line of her breast. More frills at her thin wrists enhanced the beauty of her hands. Her fingers were linked tightly together, her eyes never left Mollie's face.

"There will never be anyone for me, never anyone but Jim," she said. "Where is he, Mollie?"

"At Letterman Hospital in the Presidio. But he isn't allowed to see anyone, Jen. They wouldn't let Dan see him. You see, they thought they could save the arm when they brought him up from the Honolulu hospital—"

"Thought they could save it!"

"Yes. But it didn't behave so well on the trip," Mollie went on, watching Jennifer's face anxiously. "And at San Diego day before yesterday this doctor—what's-his-name, Emmets or Ebbets or something like that—saw it and he brought Jim straight up here to see Lindsay. You weren't to know—no one was to know, until they decide."

"You don't mean, Mollie. . . ." Jennifer was choking. "You don't mean that they might amputate?" she whispered, bringing out the terrible word with difficulty.

"Oh, certainly; of course that was it!" Mollie answered almost impatiently. "He's all right otherwise. Ah, Jennifer—pull yourself together," she added, alarmed. "Hundreds of men are going to face worse than that before this thing is over. Jim has a marvelous character; he can take it!"

"Marvelous character!" Jennifer stammered. "He'd rather be dead! He's a surgeon, Mollie! His right hand means his life. They mustn't do it. They can't do it! I won't—"

She got to her feet, went to the window. Mollie wiped small faces, lifted the babies to the floor.

"I won't let them do it!" she heard Jennifer say under her breath.

"I have to take these people upstairs," Mollie said apologetically.

"I know. Mollie, when are they going to do it?"

"I believe there's a consultation tonight, and then they're going to watch it or plug sulfa something into him," Mollie admitted unwillingly. "But I believe Lindsay—he was there all this morning—wasn't very hopeful. They'll do the best they can, Jen. They're not anxious to cut it off."

"Think of his life without his right hand!"

"I know. Dan was all broken up about it. But he said there's laboratory work, you know, and research."

"Oh, laboratory and research!" Jennifer said in a voice that was a sob. "Lindsay wasn't hopeful?"

"I believe he said—I think he told Jim. I think," Mollie said wretchedly, "that Jim had been hoping—at least that's the impression Dan got. It's terrible, isn't it? . . . Sheila," Mollie diverged to say, "let her have that; you have yours. Give it to her."

"Dan didn't see Jim?"

"No, they're keeping Jim very quiet, of course. He seemed—Dan looked through the door, I believe, and Dan said he seemed sort of drowsy, feverish maybe—darling, give that to Brenda," Mollie said, "and don't make me tell you again."

"Oh, Mollie, if I'd only married him last year!"

"If you only had," said Mollie dryly. "Why didn't you?"

"Then I could be with him. I'd be there! . . . . Mollie," Jennifer begged in passionate earnest, "pray for us, won't you? Pray that it comes out all right!"

"What do you think I have been doing?" Mollie demanded, shepherding her children toward the stairs.

Jennifer left her in the wide front hall, descended through the fog-drenched garden to the waiting car.

"Sisson," she said, "there are so many war weddings going on. . There might be an office open. . I might find someone. ."

"Yes, miss," said old Sisson patiently, holding the door open.

Jennifer got in.

"City Hall first," she said. The door was slammed and they were on their way back to the city, over which the fog was dropping its long white fingers.

It was only half an hour later that she entered the hospital, mounted in the elevator to the third floor. Here she talked to an intern, to another intern, to a doctor whose face was masked by a trimmed black beard.

Jennifer was in tears some of the time; controlled herself and stopped crying; she talked quickly and earnestly. A plump nurse joined the group; after a while Jennifer could softly push open the heavy door of Jim's room. A thick wide door that made no sound, a door with no lock and no knob on it.

Another nurse sitting in a subdued cone of light rose silently. Jennifer went to the bedside, was on her knees. Jim looked thin and long in bed, his face years older than she remembered it. His wounded arm, heavily wrapped and in a splint, was elevated on a pillow. He was asleep or half asleep, now muttering a few words, now snoring lightly.

Jennifer laid her hand on his left hand and he opened his eyes. Oh, he was very sick. . . . he was very sick. . . .

"Jim," she said. Instantly his look brightened.

"Jennifer." His lips formed the words, making no sound.

"Yes. We're going to be married, Jim. I went to the City Hall this afternoon to find out if our marriage license was still valid and was told it is. Will you marry me, darling, right now? Listen to me, Jim; you only have to nod your head. Don't talk. Do you think you can, 'I do'?"

"I know I can," he said hoarsely, distinctly, with a smile.

There were people already behind her; it was all very quick. The nurse looked completely stupefied, but the other nurse was there, and an old priest. Jennifer remained kneeling; her responses were less audible than were Jim's.

A moment came when she felt the older nurse press her shoulder and saw a plain gold ring in her fingers.

"Yes. . he can't. . I'll put it on," Jennifer murmured. But Jim took it from her with his left hand and she spread her fingers for him to slip it on her ring finger himself. Then he brought hand and ring to his lips, and Jennifer heard someone sob behind her and the brushing of feet; and she and Jim were alone.

He had dozed off again; she knelt motionless, her hand still in his, studying with anxious eyes the lines of the weary, pain-marked face. She looked long at the clumsy roll that was his right arm and at the swollen fingers that rested on the pillow. And it seemed to her shrinking spirit impossible that that could ever be a surgeon's useful hand again.

"But never mind, you're mine now!" she exulted in her heart.

As if he had heard some echo of the words in his own heart he opened his eyes.

"Jenny," he began thickly.

"Yes, here, taking care of you, and you're all right," she whispered back.

"Did they tell you? They're going to cut it off."

"Yes, I know. Take it easy, Jim. Go to sleep if you can."

"You going to stay here?"

"Yes." He dozed off again. Jennifer stayed until a nurse and two doctors came back into the room. One of the doctors helped her to her feet and followed her into the corridor.

"We are very much afraid. ." he said when they were out of hearing. "It is too bad. But if it is no clearer in the morning it will be dangerous to put it off any longer."

"Yes," she agreed quickly, nervously. "I understand, of course."

"We would have your consent to that, Mrs. Lippincott?"

"Why, I. . I. ." she floundered, taken entirely unawares. "I would have to leave that to you. Jim would know that you knew best."

"I am sure of it," the surgeon said.

She went down the steps and back to the hotel. In the spacious drawing room her grandmother was furiously finishing a hard rubber.

"And redoubled!" Jennifer heard the old lady say triumphantly. When she came into Jennifer's room a few minutes later it was to find the girl stretched on her bed, arms locked under her head, eyes on space. "My darling, Marian Catesworth will never forgive me that last hand," Mrs. Giddings exulted, sitting down breathless near the bed.

"Granny darling, I was married an hour ago."

"She holds two aces and I bid six spades without a club in my hand and the king of hearts once—What did you say?" demanded the older woman.

"I was married to Captain Jim Lippincott, Granny, about an hour ago."

"Oh. What'd you do that for?"

"He's ill; he's in the hospital. He may lose his arm."

A silence. Old Mrs. Giddings shook her head, with a long sigh.

"I suppose there'll be lots of 'em, Jennifer. But look here, isn't this the man you're so cracked about?"

"Oh well," said the old lady in relief, "that's all right then. You had me scared for a minute; I didn't know what you'd done. Sick, is he, poor boy?"

"He was injured—his right arm was all torn up with shrapnel. They fixed it down there; they thought it was all right. And then it began to poison again, and they sent him up to Lindsay."

"No better man than Lindsay. So you married him, eh? . . Those people'll be here," murmured Mrs. Giddings. "I ought to dress. So you got married? Who did it?"

"An old priest who happened to be in the hospital."

There was another brief silence. Then the old woman said:

"Well, the sooner you get him over to Giddings the better. Now I've got to go change. You'll be wanting to go back to the hospital? Call room service and have them bring you up something to eat."

She waddled away, to Jennifer's half-laughing, half-crying, "I adore you, Granny!"

Seven days later Jennifer sat knitting composedly in Jim's hospital room. The shades were drawn against too bright a light; the cell-like place was in immaculate order; a covered glass, a tiny bowl of primroses were on the bedside table; the bureau mirror reflected a very sunburst of flowers, delphinium, lilacs, stock, tulips, a climbing rose on a green wooden fan.

Outside wild flashes of an angry sun were alternating with slanting onslaughts of rain. But within all was comfort and warm peace. Jennifer looked up from her eternal gray wool to find Jim's eyes wide open and fixed upon her, and she knew the moment had come. He had spoken before during these terrifying days, he had even recognized her as on that first evening, but this was the first time his eyes had told her that he was cool and collected, once more himself.

"Still there," he said quietly.

"Don't move it, Jim. Don't stir it up." She looked anxiously at the arm he had slightly moved as he spoke of it.

"You're telling me." His smile had the old pleasant, deliberate quality. "Are they going to leave it on?" he asked.

"They think so. In fact, Lindsay told me definitely this morning—but no, I'll not believe it yet. But they think so, Jim."

"Do you know what's heaven?" he asked after a moment during which he had shut his eyes again.

"No. Having that arm back?"

"No. Just having you around, Jennifer. Jennifer, if I get well, and when I get well, and the war's over, and when I'm fixed in some sort of job, will you marry me?"

"I have always considered myself engaged to you, Jim," she answered composedly.

"But you may have a long wait, darling."

"I don't mind that."

"We'll have darned little to start on. It may take me weeks—months to get over this."

"We'll manage."

He lay still for a while, his eyes closed. Jennifer reflected upon what had been taking place at Giddings, the roomy, old-fashioned mansion on the top of the hill under its crown of eucalptus and oak trees.

Truman Likely To Receive Wide Congress Backing

Washington, Jan. 7 (AP) — Democrats concluded with relief today that President Truman held to a middle course in his state of the Union message and thus consolidated his party's support at the outset of the Republican-controlled Congress.

Praise for the President's legislative recommendations came from both wings of the party.

It was accompanied by indications that if Mr. Truman keeps to the course he charted yesterday he may enjoy greater democratic support than he previously has been able to muster in Congress. All agreed that such support would strengthen his position if he bids for renomination in 1948.

The President covered only generally or omitted entirely some of the things he was more specific about in previous recommendations to Congress, such as higher minimum wage standards, fair employment practice legislation and other measures that the new deal wing has plugged.

But if he disappointed this group somewhat on that point, he apparently pleased those who say they hold more conservative views.

Republicans in Congress figured that Mr. Truman has adopted enough of their program to assure himself a fancy legislative batting average.

The way Republican leaders and committee chairmen size things up, the Truman record may look considerably better on the books than when the Democrats were running Congress—and discarding of changing more presidential proposals than they accepted.

But the prospective new laws on taxes, labor, housing and on down the line will be what the Republicans think they should be—not necessarily what Mr. Truman wants, observers said.

The President's labor program drew loud applause, yet many Republicans said it didn't go far enough. But both the Republican party and the White House agree it must not be "punitive."

On taxes, the chief executive recommended only that Congress retain for another year the wartime exercise rates on luxury items now due to end June 30. Republicans have been considering ending them immediately. And they have introduced a bill to trim 20 per cent from personal taxes on incomes up to $300,000.

AMONG FIRST IN SUMMER HOME DISTRICT

Toronto, Jan. 7 — (CP) — Mr. and Mrs. Musgrave, who celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary here Monday, were among the first people to make the Muskoka district their summer home. In the first year they went to Port Carling — 1896 — it was incorporated a village. Last summer, in celebration of 50 summers' residence, a section of Port Carling was named "Musgrave Point" for them.

Belleville "Bees" Win Junior Opener, Beating Trenton 15-4 In Thrilling Tussle at Arena

Local Kids Flash Plenty of Scoring Power, Speed and Ability; Trenton Will Improve With Practice

And many who came to scoff remained to cheer.

The 1947 edition of the Belleville Junior Bees will do, if their first game of the season played in the Hume Arena last night is any criterion. Stung by a sudden Trenton goal in the first five minutes of play, the Bees flashed to collective life and for practically the rest of the game swarmed all over the fighting kids from the east. The final score was 15-4.

Paced by speedy young "Huck" Reeves, who got himself five goals, the red-sweatered crew from the city unleashed a consisten attack throughout the game after thrusting off the Trenton threat in the first ten minutes. They showed plenty of speed and checked like fiends both coming and going. Their defence was good and they used the body with telling effect at times.

The Bees proved opportunists. They charged in and swept in and around the Trenton defence and once in scoring position seldom missed either scoring or bouncing the biscuit off Thompson, the Trenton goalie who was the hardest worked man on the ice.

Fought Back

The Trenton kids, in all fairness to them showed lack of condition and practice, but they never gave up trying and fought back tenaciously even with the score mounting steadily against them. They were battling furiously when the final whistle blew. The score by no means indicated the margin of difference between the two squads and by the time the blue-clad kids from the east get more practice and a game or two under their collective belts they should prove dangerous contenders for a play-off berth. They have plenty of speed, are fast skaters and in the Barr brothers and the LaMoores have stars in the making.

The game was five minutes old with both squads uncorking flashy forays down the ice when Istead raced in and whipped the rubber behind "Moe" Rollins in the Belleville goal for the first counter of the night, and the season. Five minutes later Don Semark flanked by brother Jack and Johnny Green swept in on the Trenton defence and snapped home the rubber from a difficult angle.

Huck Reeves, who starred on the offensive scored the second goal with linemate Wardhaugh assisting and Murney Green, husky son of Murney senior rammed home the biscuit on a neat passing play from brother Johnny.

The Bees swept to the attack in the second period and dominated the play through scoring four times with the "Huck" smashing home three goals and Johnny Green the fourth. D. Barr tallied for Trenton at the seven minute mark.

Score 8 in 3rd.

The Belleville kids went all out in a furious third period flashing uncanny speed and showing a marked tendency team play. They swept down the ice in two and three-man attacks that seldom missed and before the final whistle blew had scored eight goals. Trenton fought back stubbornly and scored twice in a valiant but futile effort to stem the charging attacks of the red-shirts.

It is hard to pick an individual star on the Red squad although if any accolades are to be passed out Reeves, Day, the Greens and Seamarks should get a margin. Hurst and Milligan proved a stalwart hard hitting defence with Moe Rollins turning back a number of labelled Trenton shots.

The Barr brothers and the LaMorres looked the best for Trenton. The game was clean despite the fact that seven penalties were handed out. Johnny Green and G. Barr squared away at one another in the second period and drew major penalties. The other sins were of a minor nature. The game was well handled by Referee Speedy St Louis and linesman Bruce Robinson. The teams:

Belleville: Goal, Rollins; defence, Milligan, Hurst; centre, Wardhaugh; wings, Reeves, Day; subs, Utman, M. Green, J. Green, Lyle, D. Semark, J. Semark, Haggis.

Fans Spill to Ice As Cable Snaps, Woman Killed

Goderich, Jan. 7 (CP)—A woman was killed and two others injured last night when a half-inch cable serving as a guard rail for the balcony of the local arena snapped and caused 11 spectators of a hockey game to spill to the ice 15 feet below.

Too much strain was put on the cable when the fans crowded forward on the balcony to get a better view of a free-for-all among the players. It whipped to the ice with a loud snap. Mrs. Frank Wood of Goderich, taken to hospital with a fractured skull, died soon after admission. Her brother, M. M MacDonald, broke both wrists in the fall and 11-year-old Bobby Gardner of Goderich suffered concussion.

The game, in which Luzon Flyers beat Clinton Radar School 7-2, was one of the roughest ever seen here. During the second period a fight developed which led to the tragedy. As the players used their fists and sticks amid the uproar of the fans, the 11 people were seen to sail forward through the air and down on to the ice.

The players ceased their fighting and hurried to aid the injured with rink officials and other spectators joining in.

FOOTBALL CZAR PLANS HEARING AFTER TRIAL

Will Determine the Future Careers of Filchock and Hapes

By SID FEDER

New York, Jan. 7. AP)—Bert Bell, National Football League czar, doesn't know yet which side—if any—will call him to testify in the "fix" trial of Alvin Paris, but he already is planning to hold a hearing of his own to determine the future football careers of the players mentioned in the case.

Just as soon as this court case is over, and we've heard the whole story, I'll call a hearing from all the players brought into it," Bell revealed today as the second session began of the trial in which Paris is accused of attempting to bribe halfback passer Frank Filchock and fullback Merle Hapes of the New York Giants to "throw" the championship playoff game against the Chicago Bears December 15.

Several days ago the Commissioner said he would regard withholding of guilty knowledge of a fix attempt as conduct detrimental to football. He would not say today what punishment might be handed out, as he indicated at the time the case broke that the penalty could be banishment from pro football for life.

Trial proceedings got underway yesterday.

In addition to Hapes and Filchock, Howie Livingston, a back formerly of Fullerton Junior College of California and Vic Carroll, former University of Nevada tackle, also were summoned to appear. While the jury was being selected yesterday, they were kept in an anteroom, along with Bell and Ida McGuire, a petite blonde movie extra who is said to have been at one of Paris' parties at which football players were entertained.

Of the 700 attending the game about 200 were in the balcony which ran along one side of arena and overhung the ice. Those who fell were among those occupying front seats on the balcony.

Two Goderick doctors in the crowd gave first aid. After the injured had been removed the ice was cleared and the game resumed, having been delayed half an hour.

PROTEST OF FOUL DISALLOWED BY SAM LUFTSPRING

Toronto, Jan. 7—(CP)—A protest of foul was disallowed by referee Sammy Luftspring last night and he counted out police constable Henry George of Port Colborne, Ontario amateur boxing champion, as the main bout in Jack Allen's weekly amateur boxing show went to Wilf Sauve of Sudbury.

Near the end of the opening round of the "grudge fight" re-match, George fell to the canvas out of a clinch, holding his groin. Dragged to his corner by his seconds when the bell ended the referee's count of six, George fell off his stool and lay partially outside the ring.

After warning the seconds to get the fighter off the floor, Luftspring counted George out after the bell rang for the start of the second round.

It was a dramatic ending to an affair that began three months ago when Sauve, an unorthodox slugger, had been disqualified in a fight against George. The referee ruled then that George, who fell to the floor clutching his throat, had been butted by Sauve. The Ontario Athletic Commission suspended Sauve and last night was his first bout after lifting the ban.

Out-of-town fighters took most of the decisions in the preliminaries. Harold Jones of Peterboro was awarded a technical knockout in the second round over Johnny Keller of Toronto Athletic Club after cutting his right eye in the first stanza.

Larry Simmons of Brantford took a split decision from Pete Kolaski of Toronto Classic in a hard-fought five-rounder. Ray Levers of Port Colborne lasted to best Ernie Majury of Toronto Diamond A. C. in another split decision.

Sports Roundup

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Jan. 7—(CP)— All the players are named Pomerleau on the team Quebec-born Fred Pomerleau coaches in the Young Men's Christian Association basketball league in Bath, Me.—They're his six sons . . . Organization of the team had, to wait until the war ended, though, because three of the boys, Fernand, Jean-Noel and Julien, served in the armed forces . . . Papa Pomerleau came to the United States from Quebec 33 years ago and is a shoe repair man when he isn't coaching the "boys."

Waltzing Maulers.

New York sport fans, who seldom see a professional wrestling bout, got a loud laugh at a newsreel short depicting Montreal's pride, Yvon Robert, in action against the bald-headed badman, Freddie von Schacht, at the Montreal Forum . . . The exhibition was doctored for the screen with a few animal roars superimposed on a lilting Viennese waltz background . . . A couple of New York sports writers, discussing the newsreel, described Montreal as the "wrestling centre of the world." . . . Whether they meant it or not we don't know.

Sock Exchange.

There's a Dempsey-Tunney battle in the United States West Coast — but it concerns hockey, not boxing . . . The contestants are Jack Dempsey, general manager of Hollywood Wolves in the Pacific Coast League, and Bill Tunney, president and owner of Los Angeles Monarchs in the same league . . . The hockey Dempsey is not related to the former boxer . . . Incidentally, Jack Sharkey, a former opponent of Dempsey (the boxer, this time) said in Buffalo, N.Y., this week that modern young heavyweights aren't up to much because they shirk training-camp hardships . . . "In my time a man training for a big fight would do 10 rounds a day plus roadwork," said the former world's heavyweight champion. "That's something few present-day heavyweights seem willing to do."

Around the Circuit.

Enos (Country) Slaughter, recently announced as the National League's leader in the runs-batted-in- department, isn't fond of the popular song, "June is Bustin' Out All Over," reports Arthur Daley of the N. Y. Times . . . Despite his fat batting averages down through the years, Slaughter can't seem to connect in the month of June . . . Last season his average slumped from well above .300 to a meagre .260 in June and in 1940 he plummeted from .371 to a wretched .220 in the jinx month . . . The United States Ski Association has embarked on a new "nickel-a-night" plan designed to defray part of the expenses of sending an American ski team to the Olympics in 1948 . . . The plan involves a five-cent "tax" on every skier for each night spent at a hotel, lodge or tourist home in a ski area . . . Sounds lucrative, considering the estimated 3,000,000 United States ski addicts.

FLYERS DEFEAT BLOOMFIELD 4-2 IN "B" OPENER

Trenton Flyers in a first period splurge that netted them three goals held off the fighting Bloomfield Sky Chiefs in the opening game of the Intermediate "B" group in the Wellington Arena last night and skated off the ice winners by a 4-2 score after a game that held all the thrills of hockey.

The Flyers launched a furious third period attack after Pike had taken Cork's pass at the four-minute mark in the first period and given the Chiefs a one goal lead. The service team swept in time and time again with their fast plays clicking and by the end of the period had notched three markers to give them a two goal margin.

The second period was productive of fast, exciting play with both goalies standing out with some spectacular work. The period was scoreless.

The teams battled on even terms in the third period with Bloomfield coming within striking distance of the 18 minute mark when Platford rammed home Cork's pass to make the score 3-2. Flyers, however, surged back to the attack and with mere seconds to go "Brack" Brackenbury, veteran Flyer player scored the goal that put the game "on ice."

ORTIZ LOSES BOXING CROWN

By RUSS NEWLAND

San Francisco, Jan. 7. (AP)—Scoring with a whirlwind boxing attack, Harold Dade, slim young Negro from Chicago, won the world batamweight championship, National Boxing Association version, with a 15-round unanimous decision over Manuel Ortiz, California Mexican from El Centro, at the Civic Auditorium here last night. Each weighed 117 3-4 pounds.

Dade, who had won 21 of his 22 fights as a professional after starring in the amateur ranks in the middlewest, outsped and threw more punches than his rugged rival. It was Ortiz' 16th title defence and the 31-year-old California-born fighter appeared much slower than previously.

MONARCHS HOLD 3-POINT LEAD OVER BRANDON

Manitoba's Junior Race Warming Up as Teams Hit Mid-Season Form

Winnipeg, Jan. 7—(CP)—Winnipeg Monarchs, staggering from a 8-6 New Year's Day hangover poured by Winnipeg Rangers, rallied in their last outing to win 7-3 over Portage La Prairie Terriers and hold a three-point lead over Brandon Eis in the current standings of the Manitoba junior "A" Hockey League.

Elks, following a double-switch of coaches, won their last two league games and two exhibition contests at Minneapolis against the University of Minnesota.

The Brandon club's front office, disappointed with the team's showing, bouncel coach Ross Nicholson in favor of Dan Raleigh, last season's captain and star. Informed sources said hte players rallied around Nicholson, who was returned as coach and Raleigh remained as his assistant.

The third-place Rangers, two points back of Elks, are the most improved squad in the loop and coach Harry Neil, well-known for his Dominion championship teams said his club could easily upset both Monarchs and Brandon.

Winnipeg Canadiens, formerly St. James Canadians, now sponsored by the National Hockey League's Montreal Canadiens, have turned in three wins, all at the expense of the cellar-dwelling and winless Portage club.

Flyers Hold Lead

Winnipeg Flyers continue to hold top spot in the three-team Manitoba Senior League, four points up on Winnipeg Stylists. Injuries have hampered Stylists in recent games.

The winless Selkirk Fishermen, third entry in the league, showed great improvement in their last encounter against Stylists, losing 6-4 after a bitter struggle. Fishermen strengthened their line-up by the addition of Jackie Gibson, goal-keeper last season with the Dominion champion Monarch juniors, Eddie Steinhauer, defenceman and former professional with Tulsa Oilers, and a complete forward line brought up from the Winnipeg commercial league.

The intercollegiate series between the University of Manitoba and the University of Toronto provided Winniueggers with the best hockey performances to date. The Torontonians held the Westerners to a 2-2 tie in the first encounter but the strong-skating Manitobans came back in the 2nd game to win 8-4.

Port Arthur in Front

Port Arthur Bearcats, current leaders in the three-team International Senior League, hold a slim one-point margin over Fort William Legionnaires. Duluth other entry in the league, are 3 points behind Legionnaires.

The Bearcats also made things miserable for the touring University of Toronto team by bouncing them 7-4 and 9-4 in two exhibition tilts at Port Arthur.

In the lakehead junior circuit, Fort William Hurricane Rangers have won two starts in league play and tied the third. The other Fort William entry, Columbus Club, holds second place with a win and a tie in the two games played. Port Arthur Bruins lost their only start, and Port Arthur juniors dropped both their contests. Columbus Club won the pre-season Rory McLeod Memorial series between the four clubs.

"SNOWY OWL" by T. M. Shortt, Ornithologist.

The above illustration shows the snowy owl in his southern surroundings.

Down from the icy wastes of the Arctic, the Snowy Owl glides into a farmyard. Driven from his northern home by the periodic scarcity of lemmings, his favourite rodent food, the valuable bird seeks rats, mice and other despoilers of food and grain. Thus the snowy owl earns protection from us by helping to conserve our food supplies.

* "The people of Canada can perform a useful service to birds by providing food and shelter . . . when their food becomes temporarily inaccessible."

Eighteen Jews Arrested in Search By Military Police

Five Believed Prominent In Jewish Underground

By CARTER L. DAVIDSON

Jerusalem, Jan. 8. (AP)—Eighteen Jews were officially reported arrested in a police-military search of Rishon le Zion early today and reliable sources said five were prominent in Irgun Zvai Leumi, Jewish underground organization.

Seven others, these informants said, were members of Irgun Zvai Leumi. There was no immediate identification from police.

Rishon le Zion was the scene of ten days ago of one of three flogging incidents in which a British major and three sergeants were whipped by persons who said they were Irgun Zvai Leumi members.

The arrests came within hours of unconfirmed reports that the two most extreme Jewish underground groups had declared a 60-day truce in their campaign of violence in order to ease tension surrounding continued negotiations for a peaceful solution of Palestine's problems.

A Jewish agency spokesman said that "all-out efforts to bring an end of terrorism have been made in recent weeks and all kinds of efforts are continuing now."

There were widespread rumors in Jewish circles in both Jerusalem and Tel Aviv that Irgun Zvai Leumi and the so-called stern gang had acceded to a demand from Hagana, the more moderate underground group, that violence cease while the possibility of a peaceful, diplomatic solution remained in the Jewish quest for a national home in Palestine.

Consider Recommendation

In London a government source said the British Cabinet would consider at a meeting tomorrow a recommendation from Foreign Secretary Bevin and Colonial Secretary Jones that Palestine be devided into independent Arab and Jewish states.

The Cabinet also is expected to consider whether to order British troops to smash the underground groups which have kidnapped, flogged and killed British troops in their attacks.

The underground organizations, however, have been comparatively quiet since Thursday night, when they launched one of their biggest simultaneous attacks on British military installations, using home-made flame throwers, mines, automatic weapons and grenades. The assault cost the live of a British officer and wounded a score or more other persons.

Despite the rumored truce and the recent lull, however, Irgun Zvai Leumi served notice last night, by a manifesto posted in Tel Aviv, that confirmation of the death sentence pronounced on Dov Gruner, convicted of terrorist activities, would bring retaliation.

Three Years' Term Penal Servitude

London, Jan. 8. (CP Cable)—John Frederick Wilkinson, 26, of Leamington, today was sentenced to three years' servitude after he had pleaded guilty to three charges of larceny and one of forgery and has asked that 93 other offences, including one of bigamy, be taken into consideration.

The prosecution said Wilkinson was serving a two-year court-martial sentence for being absent without leave from the Canadian army when he escaped detention in May, 1945, and "embarked on a life of crime".

MALAYA RUBBER EXPORTS DOWN IN DECEMBER

Singapore, Jan. 8 (AP).—Malaya during December exported 60,162 long tons rubber, 10,487 less than in November. The United States got 43,061 tons and only 4,796 tons went to the United Kingdom.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Jan. 8—(CP)—Synopsis: Cooler weather prevails over the province this morning. Temperatures in Northern Ontario have dropped 30 degrees or more in 24 hours. In Southern Ontario the change is quite slight, but a more marked drop is expected tonight. A disturbance over Lake Michigan is moving rapidly east-southeastward and will cause some light snow in southern forecast regions today. Snowflurries are occurring in the Lake Huron and Georgian Bay regions but these are expected to end this afternoon.

Abbott, Costello In High Bracket Of Money Earners

Washington, Jan. 8 —(AP)—The film industry got its usual top billing today on a treasury list of 122 leading money-makers of 1944 and of business fiscal years ending in 1945.

Movie people held more than one out of every four spots in the partial list of those earning more than $75,000, and led it with the comedy team of Bud Abbott and Lou Costello. They took in $469,170 jointly — $234,585 each if they split it evenly.

Hollywood also furnished eight of the 12 persons on the list who received more than $200,000, but yielded top individual place to a businessman, Thomas J. Watson of New York, president of International Business Machines Corp.

Watson's gross was $425,548. Even so, he was a far second to movie producer-director Leo McCarey, whose $1,133,035 earnings, set out in an earlier listing of 393 persons, kept him high money-maker for the 1944 and into 1945 period.

Still unreported and presumably slated for a later list was movie magnate Louis B. Mayer, the list leader for seven consecutive years.

The listings cover only compensation for personal services, excluding income from investments or other sources.

Second to Watson on the new list and leader among the women for 1944 earnings thus far reported was Winnipeg-born Deanna Durbin, who got $310,728 singing and acting in movies. Her husband and picture director, Felix Jackson, also made the list with earnings of $114,875.

The third individual spot, and last in the over-$300,000 bracket, went to Walter Wanger, Universal Pictures producer and husband of movie actress Joan Bennett. He took $301,127. Fourth was Harry Cohn, president of Columbia Pictures, with $278,900.

Tied for fifth were two executives of the Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, President Andrew Jergens and Executive Vice President Joseph D. Jergens.

Movie actress Irene Dunne finished just behind them and second among the women with $245,000.

MARSHALL WILL LIKELY ENDORSE BYRNES' POLICY

Former Army Chief Of Staff Will Replace Secretary of State James F. Byrnes

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Jan. 8 — (AP) — Gen. George C. Marshall was considered certain today to endorse and support United States Secretary of State Byrnes' foreign policy — including the "firm" stand toward Russia — when he replaces Byrnes in the top-ranking cabinet post next week.

Both diplomats and Congressional leaders agreed that Marshall will "carry on" with the task of constructing world peace where Byrnes leaves off.

Interest in his future policies was equalled if not exceeded by the fact that as Secretary of State the general will become first in line for succession to the presidency and — whether he likes it or not — a leading figure among the 1948 Democratic presidential possibilities.

At 66, Marshall is stepping into one of his most difficult and critical tasks. As army chief of staff he did much to design the strategy of Allied victory. As secretary of state he will have possibly a greater responsibility — that of working with the foreign ministers of other major powers to complete the structure of peace.

Byrnes, only little more than a year older than Marshall, attributed his resignation to doctors' advice early last year that he had to "slow down." He said he could not remain secretary of state and do that.

Wanted to Resign

Byrnes first asked last April 16 to be allowed to resign July 1, expecting the European satellite peace treaties would be complete by then.

When the treaties were not finished in mid-1946 Byrnes agreed with Mr. Truman to see the job through. It was finished in early December and on the 19th Byrnes restated his desire to quit effective Jan. 10 or as soon as his successor was qualified.

Accepting the resignation, the president gave his old friend a "well done" and "the thanks of the nation" for the achievements of his long public career.

The only one of the central figures who had nothing whatever to say for the moment was Marshall himself. He was somewhere over the Western Pacific, flying home from 13 arduous months in China, where he had been trying in vain to promote peace between the Nationalists and Communists.

Marshall planned a three-day stop in Honolulu, then a flight to Washington late next week.

Meantime Mr. Truman was expected to send his nomination to the Senate promptly. The chorus of approving comment from that quarter assured its speedy and enthusiastic approval.

Marshall's first major task, all authorities agreed, will be to equip himself through intensive work over the next few weeks for the Big Four foreign ministers meetings at Moscow March 10 to begin work on the German and Austrian peace settlements.

Flying Constable Rescued After Being Forced Down On Lonely Lake in North

Kirkland Lake, Ont., Jan. 8 (CP).—Found alive and well today on a tiny bush country lake, Provincial Constable Lee Walker was flown to his home at nearby Larder Lake. He had been missing since he set out from Larder Lake Monday on a mercy flight.

Constable Walker said he had been forced down by engine trouble but landed safely on the lake, 30 miles northwest of Larder Lake, and in a district hardly touched by the intensive air search carried out Monday and Tuesday.

When found, Constable Walker had hiked to another lake. Jack Lamont, operations chief of the Leavens Northern Limited Air Service, spotted him from the air.

"I was just flying along when black smoke started to pour out of the engine," Constable Walker said in an interview. "It was pretty misty but I could just make out Lake Cheminis on the horizon. I picked out the closest lake and made an approach for a quick landing. Just as I came down over the treetops, the engine conked out. It was a powerless landing but everything went along smoothly.

"During the first night I stuck by the plane. It was pretty cold so I had to use my knife to rip up the cushions. I tore the kapok filler out and wrapped it around me to keep from freezing. It made an awful mess of the aircraft but I'm sure it was all that kept me alive."

The second day, the officer decided to leave the little red monoplane and explore the area. He walked five miles to another lake and came across an abandoned trapper's cabin.

The only food he found in the cabin was a mouldy loaf of bread. But it provided sustenance for the husky, 230-pound officer for nearly two days.

Also in the shack was a battery operated radio left behind by the trapper. He took the radio off the shelf, flipped the switch and found the set was in working order.

But the radio, besides keeping him entertained, added to his worries. Through its loudspeaker at 15-minute intervals, came a series of appeals to residents of the area to notify police if they heard an aircraft flying north of Larder Lake.

Walker knew he was northwest of the mining town. The search was going the wrong way!

But the flying policeman bedded down for the night, more comfortable in the cabin than he had been the previous night among the torn cushions of his aircraft.

"That second night wasn't too bad," he said. "I slept in the cabin and started a fire to keep him warm. I was plenty hungry, though."

At ten o'clock this morning, Jack Lamont, who had searched almost continuously through the daylight hours since Walker disappeared, took off for another low sweep over the rocky, tree-studded terrain around Larder Lake. Near Lake Clarice he saw a small red plane in the middle of a lake and he knew his search was over.

As Lamont circled low over the aircraft, he saw that it was empty. There were no tracks in the snow but that didn't worry Lamont because he knew a storm had drifted the snow.

Five miles beyond the grounded plane, Lamont spied a man on the shore of a lake. He had found Walker even before the constable heard the throb of the rescue plane's engine.

Lamont set his ski-equipped Aeronca down on the ice of the lake picked up Walker and whisked him back to Larder Lake.

Walker took off from Larder Lake, his post in search of an aircraft which had failed to return Monday from a bush trip. Thirty minutes after Walker left the missing plane arrived safely. Later the hunt began for Walker.

Walker, who held a private pilot's licence, was offered a plane by the Leavens Brothers Northern Airways Ltd., for his rescue mission, a plane whose red covering would make it an easy target in the bush.

Jack Lamont, operators chief for Leavens, was organizer of the air search which yesterday was hampered by low visibility and high winds. Lamont himself was the object of some anxiety before he returned late from a wide circling of the territory.

Truman Outlines Program To Keep Country Prosperous In Message to Congress

Wants Tax Rate and Rent Controls Maintained

Washington, Jan 8 — (AP) — President Truman told the United States Congress today the way to keep the country prosperous in 1947 is to leave taxes alone, raise minimum wages, increase social security benefits, broaden coverage of the wage-hour law and maintain rent controls.

It would be "unsound fiscal policy" to cut wartime income taxes, the chief executive declared in his first annual economic report to the legislative branch.

Labor should "refrain from demands for excessive wage increases that would require price increases or prevent price reductions," he said.

In effect, that appeared to be clear notice that the White House has swung away from the support it was giving a year ago for general, industry-wide patterns of wage boosts.

Wage changes were necessary, however, and management must recognize that greater productivity in some cases will permit bigger pay cheques as well as lower price tags; also that pay should go up where it has lagged behind living costs or where wage rates are substandard.

Taxes should be kept at present levels, Mr. Truman asserted, because of "the rule of sound public finance that calls for surplus in government revenues over expenditures while employment is high and the total income is large."

He conceded the tax burden is great and should be lightened "as soon as possible", but he cautioned:

"When reductions come, it will be important that they be fairly and equitably distributed, that they contribute to the maintenance of purchasing power by reducing the burden on the mass of consumers, and that they help provide the work and business incentives essential for a high level of production."

Mr. Truman said he and the American people reject "the notion we must have another depression."

For a long range program, the chief executive suggested:

1. Enactment of legislation to prevent discrimination against racial and other minority groups and to bring about efficient coordination of the employment services of the 48 states.
2. Production incentives for business to expand.
3. Encouragement of "free enterprise" by (a) amendment of the anti-trust laws to prohibit mergers through acquisition of assets or stock control, and (b) easier long-term credit to "small and promising business enterprises."
4. Reciprocal reduction of trade barriers.
5. A well-integrated program of employment stabilization.

As an argument for keeping rent ceilings, Mr. Truman said "a large increase in rents would substantially reduce consumer purchasing power."

CARS COLLIDE HEAD-ON

Whitby, Jan. 8 —(CP)—Two persons were injured one seriously when a truck and an automobile collided head-on one mile west of here on highway No. 2 last night.

Lorne Bradley of Ajax, driver of the automobile was taken to hospital in serious condition suffering head injuries and a possible fractured skull. A passenger in the Bradley car, Angus Green also of Ajax, received facial lacerations.

Public Hospitals Need 42,700 Beds Right Now

Toronto, Jan. 8 —(CP)— The Canadian Hospital Association today presented an estimate that 42,700 more beds are needed right now in public hospitals across Canada, and an additional 30,000 beds will be needed in the next 10 years.

The association said there were 119,150 beds available in Canadian hospitals in 1945. These figures, which do not include private hospitals, Department of Veterans Affairs hospitals or Dominion Government hospitals, included only 51,913 beds for active patients.

The remainder of the 1945 bed total included 3,185 for chronically ill, 900 convalescent, 42,500 mental, 12,060 tuberculosis, 7,417 bassinets and 1,175 in isolation wards.

Of the 42,700 beds which it is estimated are needed right now 13,500 would be for the chronically ill, 8,000 for active patients, 8,500 for mental and 7,500 for tuberculosis.

In Ontario alone, said an accompanying estimate by C. J. Telfer, hospital inspector for Ontario, there is a need for 4,000 more active patient beds and 3,000 more for those chronically ill, leaving out the larger totals required for the mental hospital and tuberculosis hospital overcrowding.

1,025 in Sight in Ontario.

But of the 4,000 new active patient beds needed in Ontario only 1,025 are in sight, including 150 at St. Joseph's in Hamilton, 100 at Kingston General, 105 at Port Arthur General, 50 at Parry Sound General, 80 at Sturgeon Falls and 30 at Wingham. Rest of the new beds already provided for are in Toronto hospitals.

And part of the new-bed programs already allocated are being held up by lack of labor and materials.

Across Canada, Dr. Harvey Agnew of the Canadian Hospital Association said that the present 51,913 beds for active patients should be increased by 8,000 and another 9,000 in the next 10 years, giving a total then of 68,913.

Beds for chronically ill, now 3,185, should be increased to 13,500 now and to 19,185 in 10 years, he said.

Similarly he listed these objects for other classes: Convalescent beds, 900 now; 300 more immediately; a total of 3,600 in 10 years.

Mental hospital beds: 42,500 at present; 8,500 more needed now; 7,000 additional in 10 years.

Tuberculosis: 12,060 now; another 7,500 needed now and during the next 10 years.

"Don't Blush, Girls" Show Owner Fined

Worcester, Eng., Jan. 8 (CP). — The show "Don't Blush, Girls" has been running at Worcester's Theatre Royal for eight years, but the police just got around to it this week.

Result: Owner Don Ross was fined £20 ($80) plus £6 6s costs today because one of the jokes had not been submitted to Britain's chief censor, the Lord Chamberlain, and in one scene the principal actress "displayed a large portion of her thighs".

Will Quit Mining Says Winner Of $180,000

London, Jan. 8 (Reuters)—A Lancashire coal miner hit the jackpot today when he won about $180,390 from a football pool bet of a penny (2 cents). The sum said to be the largest ever won in a British football pool.

The miner James Davis, who supports a wife and two young daughters on a $36 weekly salary, will get his bonanza in time for his 34th birthday next Friday.

Asked if he would remain a miner, Davis replied: "Not if I can help it."

Governor Dewey Advocates Seaway Power Project

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 8 —(CP)— Governor Thomas Dewey, long an advocate of the St. Lawrence Seaway and Power Development gave no flat endorsement of the seaway phase of this controversial issue in his annual message to the New York States Legislature today.

He placed heavy emphasis on what he called the need for developing the power resources of the river.

An aide said, however, that Dewey still favored both the deepening of the waterway and use of the river's power resources.

Dewey told the legislature:

"Once again the matter of the development of the St. Lawrence for the benefit of the people of this and neighboring states will be before the federal congress. For many years I have held the view and advocated that the development of hydro-electric power from that great natural resource should go forward. During these years the proposal for the development of hydro-electric power and the seaway has steadily gained strength and supporters.

"Dependence of so much of our electric power production on coal makes clearer the need for alternative sources for electric power production. However, the great cost of replacement of capital equipment and of expanded capital equipment in the electric power field threatens to terminate or even reverse the uniformly decreasing cost of electricity to the consumers of this state in future.

"A partial solution to all these needs is provided by utilizing to the full the water power of the state for the production of hydro-electric power."

Govt. Cancels 2 Clauses in Vets Rehab Act

Ottawa, Jan. 8 (CP)—Two clauses in the Veterans Rehabilitation Act now costing the government about $30,000,000 annually have been discontinued by an Order-in-Council declaring the war over for those particular purposes as at Dec. 31, 1946.

The two clauses affected are the Veterans Vocational Training and Awaiting Returns Benefits. Through a misunderstanding, The Canadian Press erroneously reported yesterday that the effective date in question was Dec. 31, 1947.

Vocational training now embraces 35,000 veterans, at a cost of $1,500,000 monthly, while the awaiting returns benefits has been costing $1,000,000 monthly for 15,000 veterans.

Officials said the move will give the labor department a definite termination date on which to gear its administration arising from those clauses.

Icebreaker Laden With Food to Smash Thru Icefields to Feed 16 Villages

Quebec, Jan. 8 — (CP) — The 1,100-ton government icebreaker Ernest Lapointe sailed from here this morning to smash through the ice fields to get supplies into 16 villages isolated along the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Newest of the Dominion's icebreaker fleet, the Lapointe was to pick up the supply-laden Clarke Steamship Company freighter North Voyageur at Murray Bay and then break a path into the ice-bound communities stretching from the estuary of the Saguenay to Havre St. Pierre, some 350 miles downstream from this ancient capital.

The villages have been unvisited by a supply ship since the first week in December due to abnormal ice and storm conditions, and had gone without anticipated Christmas fare. The Voyageur had aboard 1,800 bags of Christmas mail for the lonely settlements as well as food, medical supplies, and general merchandise.

The Lapointe's mission was announced late last night in Ottawa by Transport Minister Chevrier, who had just received word from this city that the icebreaker was in shape to make the trip

It was the third time in two weeks that the sturdy icebreakers of the St. Laurence had undertaken emergency dashes in the icy waters of the gulf.

Christmas week the veteran ice-breaker Lady Grey participated in the search for the party of lumberjacks adrift on ice floes off the Gaspe Peninsula after the plane in which they were flying home from the north shore for Christmas was forced down in the river.

Last week the icebreaker Sorel made a dash from Prince Edward Island to get supplies into the isolated north shore community of Natashquan.

No information was available as to how hard pressed the settlers were. Efforts to get through to Baie Comeau, which normally can be reached by telephone through Rimouski, were unsuccessful.

The Lapointe itself made the voyage light, the Voyageur having 500 tons of supplies for the settlements. On arriving at the scene, the icebreaker will attempt to cut a path in toward shore so the Voyageur can land its supplies.

In addition to the north shore villages, a settlement on Anticosti Islands was without supplies and it was not known whether the Lapointe would be able to reach it.

TWO SNOW PLOWS BATTLE WAY TO ISOLATED HAMLET

Tobermory, on Tip of Bruce Peninsula, Stormbound for Past 13 Days

Tobermory, Ont., Jan. 8 (CP)—Their operators weary after battling their way through snowdrifts continuously for 21 hours, two Ontario Department of Highways plows reached this snowbound village on the tip of the Bruce Peninsula at 5 a.m. today.

After a brief rest the operators started back down the highway to complete the job, as they said high wind during the night had drifted snow into the road opened by their equipment.

Arrival of the snowplows ended 13 days of virtual isolation for Tobermory, which guards the southern end of the water passage from Lake Huron into Georgian Bay. The 12-mile gateway has the tip of Manitoulin Island on its northern edge.

Drifts 12 to 15 weet high had blocked the road from Wiarton, 40 miles to the south. A fresh snowstorm last night added to snow-clearing difficulties.

All other Owen Sound district roads were passable this morning except the road from Owen Sound to Wiarton, which was expected to be clear by noon.

"The word that the trucks had got here was the biggest news in town this morning," Barney Hopkins told The Canadian Press over the single telephone line which had linked the community with the outside world during the stormstayed period. "The bus company people stayed up for the plows to get here but the rest of the people heard about it when they got up. It didn't take long for the news to get around."

Two Tobermory truck drivers were ready to leave at 10 a.m. to bring supplies. They were Aaron Dean and Martin Golden, who planned to go the entire 65 miles to Owen Sound if it appeared they

MEAT SHORTAGE BECOMES ACUTE IN SOME CENTRES

Toronto Meat Dealers Have Less Than One-Third Normal Supply

Toronto, Jan. 8 (CP).—There was a new meat shortage in Toronto and some other Ontario centres today and no one agreed as to the cause.

There was no doubt that the shortage was serious. Retail meat dealers here said they had less than one-third normal supplies. Housewives were taking anything available before noon; in the afternoon most butcher shops had bare shelves.

Butchers blamed it on farmers withholding livestock from the market. Others said that snow-blocked roads prevented normal shipments. Still others said that the big meat packing chains were cutting down on purchases and that cattle killed in the Toronto yards were going to outside purchasers.

On the Toronto livestock market yesterday however there were receipts of 1,100 cattle, 320 calves, 1,000 hogs and 400 sheep and lambs. All but 100 head of cattle were sold.

A break-down of cattle purchases showed Canada Packers taking 268, Swift Canadian 211, Hunnisett's, large local firm, 73. Local butchers purchased 284. That accounted for 836 of the 1,000 sold. The rest went to out-of-town buyers who paid from half a cent to three-quarters of a cent more per 100 pounds than the big packers.

Spokesmen for the Prices Board at Ottawa said they thought the situation arose from the seasonal practice of farmers keeping livestock off the market during the Christmas and New Year's holiday period when poultry sales are high. A Toronto butcher said that farmers had nothing to lose by keeping their livestock until later in the month.

All seemed to be agreed that the shortage was temporary. But in the meantime it was a problem not only here but at such places as Windsor, where the same conditions existed, and at scattered communities all over the province.

Convict on Parole and Companion Slain After Shooting Detective

Toledo, O., Jan. 8 —(AP)— A convict on parole less than a year from a 15-to-25-year sentence for armed robbery shot a policeman to death here last night and then, with a companion, fell dead before the gunfire of other officers.

He was Edward Monnett, 45, of Toledo. He killed veteran Detective John McCarthy, 53, and wounded Detective John Connors in the leg before Connors and Detective Floyd Cartlidge fatally shot him and John F. Quirk, 30, Toledo.

Quirk carried a registration card issued in London, Ont.

The gun battle occurred while Monnett, Quirk and a woman police identified as Miss La Rue Burd, 23, Toledo, were sitting in the back of a police car in which they were being taken to headquarters from a bar. They were taken into custody after the Civic Centre Restaurant operators told police they had attempted to pass a bad cheque.

The woman was found after the shooting, which occurred near the police station, huddled in a doorway.

As the automobile headed down Jackson Street, Cartlidge related, Monnett suddenly said

"You guys stop this car or I'll shoot all of you."

Connors stopped the car and jumped out along with Cartlidge, but McCarthy reached for his pistol, turned and was shot in the chest.

Connors, from the left side of the vehicle, and Cartlidge, from behind a car in a gasoline station, opened fire, killing both Monnett and Quirk. Connors was wounded in the exchange.

Police said an empty German type automatic was found in Monnett's hand. Quirk had no gun.

An official of the Belleville Hotel Proprietors Association stated today that his association was strongly in favor of the proposed change in beverage room hours from 12 noon to 12 midnight to 10.30 a.m. to 10.30 p.m.

Eastern branches of the Hotel Proprietors Association have lodged protests with the Ontario Liquor Control Board protesting against the present hours of beverage operation. It is expected that a general protest from all Ontario branches will shortly be forwarded to the L.C.B., he said.

Two-Alarm Fire Razes Pier Three Of N.Y. Railroad

Weehawken, N.J., Jan. 8 (AP) —A two-alarm fire of undetermined origin razed pier three of the New York Central Railroad early today and then, swept by a high wind, spread north to the railroad's pier four.

Police said the blaze on pier four was being brough under control. Both are freight piers.

A number of railroad cars stationed in the pier three ferry terminal and some boats, all belonging to the New York Central, were destroyed. No injuries were reported.

Weehawken fire department officials said almost all available fire apparatus from Weehawken had been sent to the scene. In addition, fireboats from the New York fire department were sped to the blaze which is opposite the West 42nd St., New York City, ferry slip.

A railroad official said no estimate of damages was available.

Earlier, police reported the fire was so intense that fireboats were unable to get between pier three and four to fight the blaze.

Tojo Admits Ordering Court Martial of U.S. Fliers for Bombing

Tokyo, Jan. 8 —(AP)—Hideki Tojo himself ordered that the eight American fliers captured following Tokyo's first bombing in 1942 be court martialed but said he saved five of them from the ensuing death sentence because he knew Emperor Hirohito's benevlence the international War Crimes Tribunal was told today.

Col. Gilbert S. Woolworth, associate prosecutor, read into the record statements taken from the former premier at Sugamo prison last March in which he said Hirohito knew nothing about the matter until Tojo asked him to issue clemency for the five.

Tojo argued that the raid, carried out from a United States aircraft carrier, was not against troops, but against "non-combatants, primary school students and so forth."

Since this was not permitted by International Law, it was homicide," his statement went on.

Tojo said after the eighth Americans were condemned the chief of staff demanded the deaths of all eight but he knew "of the Emperor's benevolence."

"Therefore it was decided that only the three who had killed primary school students could receive the death penalty."

Judge Reserves Judgment After Evidence Adduced On Cattle Conspiracy Charges

One Case Adjourned Till Friday and Two Others to be Heard in Picton

Judgment was reserved here Tuesday by Judge W. S. Lane of Picton on a charge of conspiracy against Dr. George L. Brown, Selby veterinarian, involving violation of the Contagious Diseases of Animals Act.

The Crown alleged that Dr. Brown had conspired with M. Levine, Belleville cattle drover, to substitute ear tags on ineligible cattle to enable them to be exported to the United States.

Malcolm Robb acted as special prosecutor for the case, while W. L. Rowntree, Toronto, acted as defence counsel. The charge was one of several which have been laid against Canadian and American cattle dealers and against two Belleville district veterinarians, all charges concerning the violation of cattle export regulations. Mr. Levine has also been charged with conspiracy but after starting his trial Tuesday evening it was adjourned until Friday afternoon. Charges of forgery and conspiracy against Fred Scott, Belleville cattle dealer, and Dr. Shipsides, Wellington veterinarian, were scheduled to commence Wednesday morning in Picton.

Five Witnesses Called.

Five witnesses were called by the Crown in their effort to prove that Dr. Brown had conspired with Mr. Levine in the matter of substitution of ear tags in the latter's cattle, while the defence called no witnesses and moved for non-suit at the completion of the Crown's case.

As first witness called, Cpl. H. Greaves, investigator for the R.C.M.P., told of investigating irregularities in cattle exports and of finding a document in Mr. Levine's file at the Belleville office of the Health of Animals branch which contained two sets of ear tag numbers. One set of numbers had represented ear tag numbers of cattle eligible for export, while the other list were numbers ineligible for export. The document was in the handwriting of Dr. Brown, stated the witness.

Visited Dr. Brown.

"The document indicated that Dr. Brown had been involved in the switching of ear tags on cattle," stated Cpl. Greaves.

Continuing, the witness told of visiting Dr. Brown at his home in Selby in May, 1946 for the purpose of obtaining information regarding irregularities in the export of cattle. Dr. Brown had stated that he had no definite knowledge of irregularities but when confronted with the document found in Mr. Levine's file had volunteered information and had given a written statement admitting that in November, 1945, he had taken blood samples from 24 cows at Mr. Levine's farm in Prince Edward county. The cows had been mostly without ear tags.

Witness continued by quoting Dr. Brown as saying Mr. Levine had wanted him to ear tag the cows as natural additions and as "lost" tags. Dr. Brown had refused to do this claiming there were too many cows and that he "could not get away with it." The cows then had been lined up with ear tags which were from cows eligible for export.

Never Switched in Presence

In his statement to police Dr. Brown stated that he had often suspected that cows tested for Levine had had substitute ear tags but they had never been switched in his presence.

Dr. Harold Younghusband, supervisor of the Belleville office of the health of animals branch, told of visiting Dr. Brown's home with Cpl. Greaves and of the work of his office. He stated that the department's entire work of identification of cattle centred in the ear tags and if these ear tags were changed proper identification of the animals was lost.

He stated that Dr. Brown was an accredited veterinarian and as such he was entitled to test cattle for export. Papers for export cattle were countersigned by the witness on the signature of the veterinarian that everything was in order.

Tells of Shipment

James Allin, local freight agent, testified as to Mr. Levine making a shipment of 21 cattle to the United States in November, 1945, while Joseph McKeown, also a former railroad employee corroborated that this shipment of cattle had been consigned to Norman Smith and Sons of Maine.

Miss Doris Waddell, secretary in Dr. Younghusband's office, told of office procedure in checking forms and records of export cattle.

Dr. William Moynihan, senior veterinary inspector for Ontario, told of the system of distribution of ear tags through district offices to accredited veterinarians who used them when registering natural additions to herds or in replacing "lost" tags. He knew of no way by which Mr. Levine could legally have a supply of loose tags.

Witness declared that it was only through a close check being kept by the department on the health of export cattle that the present export trade to the United States had been built up and maintained. The ear tags were stated to be "tamper-proof" but witness admitted they could be taken out and replaced in another cow's ear although when this was done examination would show the tags had been tampered with.

Should Inspect Tags

"It is the veterinarian's duty when testing cattle to inspect the tags to see that they have not been tampered with," concluded the witness.

In moving for non-suit Defence Counsel Rowntree claimed that the charge of conspiracy against his client was unjustified stating there had been no evidence of the meeting of two minds which formed the essence of conspiracy. He admitted there had been a breach of the regulations and even went so far as to term his client a "delinquent" civil servant.

Only one witness, Cpl. Greaves, was called in the conspiracy charge against Mr Levine when Defence Counsel R. A. Pringle objected to the introduction of a signed statement which his client had given to police at the time of the investigation early last summer.

The court then went into a "trial within a trial" to determine the issue as to whether promise or threat had been given by Cpl. Greaves to induce the accused into given the statement.

Then with no possibility of completing the case, the hearing was adjourned until Friday afternoon.

Beverage Rooms Increase Price Of Beer in Quarts

The price of beer in quart bottles in hotel beverage rooms has been increased from 36 cents to 41 cents, it was announced today. The price of pints remains unchanged at 21 cents.

It was explained that 41 cents was the maximum price which could be charged for quarts under the new Ontario Liquor Control regulations. Faced with higher operating costs due to the beer gallonage tax under new regulations, hotels have moved their prices up to the maximum. Previously the tax was a straight eight cents but now it increases with each 10,000 gallons sold, resulting in a doubling or even tripling of the levy.

There is no increase in the price of beer from Brewer's Retail outlets.

It is understood that no hotel in Belleville sells beer in quart bottles.

OBSERVE GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Shelley Anderson who celebrated 50th wedding anniversary on December 29th.

Groom of Fifty Years Ago Never Had Any Worry About Number "13"

"There is nothing unlucky about the number "13", don't let people tell you there is," smiled seventy-three-year-old Shelley J. Anderson, 221 Albert Street, who with Mrs. Anderson celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on December 29th.

"Look at me," he went on. "I was born on April 13, at one o'clock in the afternoon, the thirteenth hour and was the youngest of a family of 13. I have been very happily married for fifty years and have never been arrested. Don't tell me I have been unlucky."

Member of one of the best known families in Prince Edward County, Mr. Anderson recalled at one time he had 47 first cousins in Ameliasburg township alone. Born in Prince Edward County he has been a farmer there and in the west and for 15 years represented farming machinery companies in this district and in Toronto.

Married in City

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were married at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Grass at 181 Charles Street fifty years ago December 29th. They recall going to the station by horse-drawn vehicle to meet a bridesmaid when the horse became frightened at a street car and upset the young couple in a large pile of tin cans where the Cenotaph now stands on Station Street.

They were the guests of honor at their golden wedding anniversary at a dinner tendered them by a daughter Mrs. O. C. Owen, at 219 Albert Street Eighteen members of the family and friends were present and special tribute was paid to the bride and groom of a half century over the local radio station.

The table was centred with a lovely wedding cake and beautifully decorated with flowers and yellow tapers. A son-in-law Edwin B. White, Toronto, proposed the toast to the guests of honor while Mrs. White and a brother William Anderson acted for the bride and groom's attendants of 50 years ago, Mrs. S. Wartman, Kingston and Morley Anderson, Detroit, who were unable to be present.

The wedding cake was made and decorated by a grand-daughter, Shirley, while baskets of yellow mums and golden candle sticks were the gifts of a daughter Mrs. O. C. Owen. An outstanding gift, one that Mrs. Anderson treasures, was a handsome table lamp given her by the Prince Edward Women's Club of which she is a member. Another beautiful gift was a pair of golden pheasants, presented to Mr. and Mrs. Anderson by a daughter Mrs. Edwin White, Toronto and which flanked the wedding cake on the banquet table.

Grandchildren of the couple presented them with another beautiful table lamp while numerous cards and telegrams were received during the day. In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were at home to their many friends of the city and district and upwards of sixty dropped in to offer felicitations. They received tributes from Bridge Street United Church and the Women's Association of that congregation. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson have been faithful members of Bridge Street for upwards of fifty years. Mr. Harry Rollins in a brief address brought the greetings of the church and added his own congratulations.

Master Robert Owen, a grandson, received the guests at the door while a cousin of Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. George Bush served. The wedding cake was cut and served from a gold and silver cake-plate an heirloom of the bride's family.

Giant Corn Drier At Chatham Burns, Loss is $75,000

Chatham, Jan. 8 —(CP)— For the second time in two days fire struck the Chatham area late yesterday, this time destroying the giant corn drier recently installed by Kellogg Company of Canada and causing loss of $75,000.

As did the fire at Chatco Steel Products Monday, when loss was upwards of $200,000, Tuesday's corn plant blaze halted a new industry here.

It was believed the fire began in the heating plant which supplies blasts of hot air to the drier, which has a capacity of 30,000 bushels of corn, and which was two-thirds full.

Harold Webster, head of the firm, said plans were already under way to rebuild the plant. He said no loss would be felt by farmers who had carefully nurtured their corn crop through one of the most disastrous seasons in the history of this area last summer.

The corn lost was grown for processing into cereal, and was the remainder of the hybrid white corn crop harvested a few months ago.

Mr. Webster said deliveries of corn would be accepted from contract growers in a week's time and the corn would be dried at plants in Blenheim, Dover and Sarnia.

Every available fireman in the community was called to duty for the Kellogg fire as they had been for the Chatco blaze a day earlier. Two men remained at the fire hall, Ald. Garnet Newkirk and City Manager T. M. S. Kingston, to answer telephone calls.

During the Chatco fire, eight alarms were turned in, five of them false. One alarm was caused by a small blaze on the wooden ramp leading to a feed store which is believed to have been the work of arsonists, police said.

A recommendation by the Fire Marshal's Office for an addition of personnel to the Chatham fire department was not met by city council when it was forwarded last year.

FOUR PERISH IN FIRE

'Monty' Given Prominence In Soviet Press

Moscow, Jan. 8 — (AP)—Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, chief of the British Imperial Staff, visited further Soviet military academies today while Russian newspapers featured his activities.

All leading newspapers printed prominently an account of his attendance last night at a performance of the ballet, Romeo and Juliet, in the Bolshoi Theatre with Marshal Alexander M. Vasilevsky, chief of the Soviet general staff; Marshal Ivan S. Konev, commander of Soviet ground forces; and Marshal V. D. Sokolovsky.

Referring to Montgomery's visit yesterday to the Voroshilov Higher Military Academy, newspaper accounts said he had a lengthy talk with Gen. M. V. Zakharov, head of the academy He attended class sessions and spoke on his experiences in Africa, where he won the Battle of El Alamein and reversed the German drive on Cairo and Suez.

Press accounts stressed the friendly atmosphere surrounding Montgomery's six-day visit. The reports said Montgomery, in his first talk with Vasilevsky Monday, paid his official respects "in a friendly spirit."

Seldom has a foreigner received such prominence in Russian newspapers.

J. C. Anderson Sworn in As County Judge

Former mayor of Oshawa and member of the Bar in that city, Judge J. Carrol Anderson on Tuesday afternoon was officially sworn in as local judge of the Supreme Court and as Surrogate Judge for the County of Hastings.

The brief ceremony was held in the county court room with the swearing in ceremonies and the oath of allegiance being taken by Judge Anderson before Judge W. S. Lane, county judge for Prince Edward County. Members of the local Bar Assocation and other county officials were present at the ceremony following which Judge Anderson was escorted to the judge's chair by Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn.

"It is a particular pleasure for me to welcome you as the county judge for Hastings," stated Judge Lane, "and I assure you that district judges will extend every co-operation."

Well Qualified.

Continuing Judge Lane read a letter from Mr. Justice C. A. Cameron, former Hastings county judge, expressing regret at his inability to be present at the ceremony. "I extend warmest greetings to my successor in office," wrote Mr. Justice Cameron. "Judge Anderson is well qualified for his new office."

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan also welcomed Judge Anderson and as deputy judge for the county assured he would be ready for service at any time.

Also extending greetings were A. B. Collins, K.C., senior member of the local Bar Association; W. C. Mikel, K.C., local master, and E. Ormonde Butler, past president of the local Bar Association.

Utmost Co-Operation.

"I am particularly delighted with the reception which I have received thus far in this grand old county of Hastings and in Belleville," assured Judge Anderson, as he briefly addressed county officials and members of the local Bar Association. "I have had the utmost co-operation from Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan and from other county officials."

Continuing, Judge Anderson stated he had the highest regard for his predecessors in office, Mr. Justice Cameron and Judge G. E. Deroche. "They are hard men to follow, but I will try to follow in the traditions of these excellent gentlemen," he stated.

Referring to the historic past of both the county of Hastings and of Belleville, Judge Anderson stated that few counties had the wealth of Hastings with its industrial, agricultural and mineral resources. He stated he was a native of Hastings county, having been born at Bancroft, while his father was once a United Church minister at Frankford and his mother had been educated at Stirling.

Following the swearing in ceremony, Judge Anderson met county officals and members of the local Bar Association in the court library.

Now the government plans to sell its vessels to private owners and Swiss companies will buy them. One One Geneva firm has ordered a 9,300-ton motor freighter from a British yard.

The era of large private companies—Is it vanishing?

Regrettable though it is, the impact of taxation in recent years has placed so great a burden upon owners of private companies as to compel them to seek relief by rearranging their capital structures and becoming publicly owned enterprises.

All private companies are not able to do this because they are not of sufficient size to warrant the offering of shares to investors. Fortunate indeed, therefore, are those whose business is of sufficient size and character to merit public financing. Moreover, in setting up a new capital structure it is possible to reflect more adequately the real asset value and earning power of a business.

Each situation, however, varies and must be dealt with according to the prevailing conditions. The experience we have gained in discussions with principals with whom we have worked in solving re-financing problems and preparing securities for public acceptance, we place at the service of others.

At this season, when past operations and future plans are under review, it is an appropriate time to consider this matter.

Britain's Exports

Last month the total of exports from the United Kingdom reached a new peak of $368,400,000 — $800,000 above the previous record figure of July and a $4,800,000 increase on October. Taking the commercial exports alone (i.e. excluding shipments made under U.N.R.R.A. and to Britain's Forces abroad) statistics are still more favorable since these exports totalled $351,200,000 during November, $4,800,000 higher than the corresponding figure for October and $6,800,000 higher than July.

Calculating on the basis of 26 normal working days in a month, the total exports in November stand at $368,000,000 compared with $350,000,000 in October and $354,000,000 in July. Owing to the rising prices, however, the volume of exports last month is officially estimated to be only 17% greater than the 1938 average. The July volume was 20% of prewar.

Britain's two leading groups of exports, machinery and vehicles, both achieved record figures in November, and together accounted for 28% of the total of all goods sent abroad in that month. The exports of agricultural machinery regained a high July total and were more than four times the 1938 average. The tonnage of electrical machinery exported was the highest this year, and two-fifths above that of 1938. Shipments to Rusisa, which were negligible before the war, represented one-quarter of the total in October and November. On the other hand, the exports of textile machinery which in October exceeded the 1938 average for the first time since the end of the war fell off by one-fifth compared with October. The number of motorcars exported (9,607) reached a new high record of two and a half times the 1938 average.

Among other metal groups, record figures were also established for cutlery, hardware, etc., which passed the $12,000,000 mark for the first time, and for electrical goods and apparatus, which just exceeds the October figure of $16,000,000. There was an offsetting decrease of over 500,000 tons for iron and steel, this tonnage being the second lowest this year, and non-ferrous metal goods, each of which was below the third quarter averages. The number of radios exported from Britain was 47,700. Though this was 6,800 less than in October it was much higher than in any other month this year and nearly 7 times the prewar number.

The exports of textiles at $78,000,000 were the highest since the end of the war. The increase was general but was comparatively small for cotton, silk and artificial silk goods. Exports of woollen and worsted materials were the highest by value since 1929.

Britain's imports during November had a total value of $497,720,000 a fall of just over $12,000,000 on October. Apart from October, however, imports for the last month were the highest both by value and by volume since the end of the war, and exceeded the average for the third quarter by 14%. With the exception of the August exports at $19,200,000, these were the highest for over a year.

Resigns V.O.N. Post

Chief Superintendent of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada Miss Elizabeth Smellie is resigning the post she has held since 1924. She has given the Canadian people outstanding service in her career as nurse and humanitarian. She has been decorated by various governments and has been the recipient of other honors. Twelve years ago she received the tribute of being appointed a Commander of the British Empire. She has held the rank of colonel in the Canadian Army, an honor she alone among women has enjoyed. She is now starting on a tour of Western Canada in the interest of the Victorian Order.

As she resigns she carries the affection of the Canadian people for the wholehearted and devoted service she has rendered in so many ways. The service the Victorian Order has been able to render the people of Canada owes a great deal to the inspiration of this devoted woman.

Social Workers

The expansion of social services and increased attention to child care, following the publication of the Curtis report, have so broadened the scope of the "Women's Voluntary Services" that they are to be converted to a permanent peacetime organization. Under the capable chairmanship of Lady Reading, this million-strong army of women gave magnificent service to their country during the war. Now they will be the first women's organization to act on the Curtis Report. It is decided to set up a corps of "godmothers" to look after uncared for children and it is hoped eventually to provide a "godmother" for every child in every institution in Britain. "Godmothers" will take personal interest in the children, invite them to their homes, and generally give them personal attention and love to compensate in some measure for the loss of their mothers.

Janus for January

The month of January opens our calendar this year for the 21 hundredth time. It was in 153 B. C. that the first of January was proclaimed the official beginning of the new year, and naturally enough, since it was the festival of Janus, the Roman god who presided over all beginnings. On the first day of the year he was invoked as the bod of good beginnings and was honored with cakes called januae. Quarrels and disturbances, even all unnecessary work, were avoided on that day; good wishes were exchanged and presents of sweets were made as an omen that the new year might bring nothing but that which was sweet and pleasant.

Janus attended to many other beginnings. He opened the gates of heaven as he set out in the morning and closed them again when he returned in the evening. Through the gates of his temple the Consul marched to war and those gates stood open until peace was declared. Janus saw to the start of life of all kinds. Of human beings, of animals and seeds, of springs, wells and streams. It was natural therefore that he should start the series of coinage, and his head does appear on the as, the unit of Roman currency. Good examples may be seen in the large collection of Roman coins in the Royal Ontario Museum. Most impressive is a 2,200 year old coin, a bronze piece nearly 3 inches in diameter and weighing 1 Roman pound. From its face Janus looks out: a double head, huge and bearded, with one face looking forward to the new; the other turned back to the old.

Makes World More Friendly

Ordinarily we aren't much influenced by tradition as such, says Detroit Free Press. However, we can't go along with this Chicago fellow who wants to drop the polite salutation with which letters customarily are begun. We have too few gracious amenities as it is.

When a man takes pen in hand to tell somebody that he is a lying, cheating turncoat and cutthroat whom a self-respecting skunk would not give den room, we believe he can afford to start out with a "My Dear Mr. Dracula" instead of just a stark, blunt "Mr. Dracula." The practice costs nothing and in its small way makes the world a more friendly place.

The bewildering behavior of a four and one-half-year-old Victoria child, who has flirted with death by throwing himself in front of streetcars near his home, will have shocked citizens into a realization of the needless dangers incurred by immaturity and thoughtlessness in connection with traffic. Presumably the practice was a game to the little boy, who knew no better, the Victoria (B.C.) Times remarks.

NO BUSINESS MAN

They told me business is business, and clever a man must be To buy and to sell at a profit. But something is wrong with me,
For the ways of the market fright me;
too eager am I to buy;
And the seller's side of the counter I've had wish to try.

I never could haggle and dicker, as business so often requires.
I haven't the knack of the salesman;
my patience too suddenly tires.
I buy at the first price mentioned; then flee from the crowded store,
Glad to possess what I needed and be out in the air once more.

I envy the buyers and sellers their skill
in the marts of trade,
For buying and selling must follow as soon as the things are made.
But I never could balance a ledger or follow a chart or a plan;
And I am the son of a father who had hoped for a business man.

In the municipal elections Charles N. Sulman was re-elected Mayor over ex. Ald. D. V. Sinclair by a majority of 185 votes. The total vote for Sinclair. Total vote for mafor Sinclair. Total vite for mayor 1487. Five members of last year's council were returned and five new members were elected.

The three defeated candidates who served in last year's council, are Knox, Paterson and Robinson. The new members are S. Burrows, who headed the poll, Thompson, Starling Ackerman and Butler. The following will compose the council for this year, named in the order at the polls: Burrows, Green, Panter, Marsh Thompson, Starling, Ackerman, Vermilyea, Butler and McCrodan. There were two contests for school trustees In Murney ward Phil Harrison defeated Diamond and Hicks by a handsome majority and J. H. Anderson defeated R. Bogle in Coleman Ward. The first hockey match in the series between clubs representing the Bay of Quinte League in competition for the Corby Cup took place last evening in this city between Picton and Belleville. It proved an easy victory for our boys who scored 12 goals to their opponents 1. There was a large attendance of spectators. The following composed the teams: Belleville, Mack Jamieson, Glencoe Hulme, Bud Bogart, Harry Hamilton, Ernest Lang, Harry Kelso and Russell Weller Picton, B. R. Hepburn, J. Hepburn, A. Despard, D. J. Barker, J. Wright, F. Ferris and L. Gilbert. Goal Umpires, H. P. Thomas and M. Branscombe; referee, M. Moore of Trenton.

TWO SNOW PLOWS

could reach that city before warehouses closed. Otherwise, they would go as far as Wiarton.

What supplies did Tobermory need most?

"Bread and butter are the big items," Hopkins said. "Then general groceries."

Plenty of Meat

Tobermory has plenty of meat because farmers of the district usually kill at this time of year. And it has milk, and flour. Tobermory has been cut off from the world before, several times, inevitably because of its isolated position But this time it's been cut off since Dec. 27 and there was only one break when the road was temporarily open January 3.

Two buses arrived from Wiarton in that brief interval, taking more than 20 hours for a trip normally taking 2½ hours.

Barney Hopkins, whose wife is the village telephone operator, said last night that the village had just missed a birth because the prospective mother got out to hospital on the only day the roads were open since Christmas.

Since the blockade started there have been no deaths in Tobermory, but a baby was reported seriously ill at a lumber camp 10 miles from the village, cut off from doctors by the snow drifts.

Four Feet of Snow

Township clerk Cecil Davis also said last night that basic food supplies are adequate for the time being, but there was almost four feet of snow on level ground.

Continued snow since Dec. 27 has resulted in the worst drifts in years on the highway which is Tobermory's only link with the outside, apart from the telephone. And there's only one outside telephone line. Tobermory depends on a physician at Wiarton for medical aid, and in the meantime two local registered nurses, both married women, are doing their best to care for illness

Ontario Highways Department officials at Owen Sound, 63 miles southeast of here, said the department has been working on the road to Tobermory ever since the big snow started Dec. 27. Plows have been on the job continuously. But as fast as they have cleared a stretch of highway more snow and wind has drifted it up. Only one piece of equipment can work on the narrow highway at one time.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

SORRY! NO GAS!

Just why any doctor would make the assertion that you do, that gas in the stomach or intestine "cannot" press against the heart, when one's personal experience proves the abject falsity of it, goes beyond comprehension, yet other doctors do. (D.I.H.)

(Other doctors do what go beyond comprehension Sir, that is a privilege we doctors must retain at all costs.)

In the interest of sanity and health, I repeat what I said in the article:

"A lot of poor geeks take straight soda or various nostrums containing bicarbonate of soda, generate their own gas, belch some of the gas, and imagine the medicine is driving off something that might otherwise cause serious trouble — 'press on the heart,' for example.

We can't turn aside here to explain how ridiculous that notion is—'gas pressing on the heart'—except to state that there is no reason to imagine it ever happens"

We mercifully omit what you say about flutter, heave, palpitation, etc., my dear D. D. H., because that's all in your morbid imagination—not the sensations you so interpret but the idea that gas pressing on the heart can account for the sensations.

I hate to frighten or even alarm anybody unless I believe it is necessary for his or her own safety or continued health. So let's settle for this compromise:

Formation or accumulation of much more than the usual or normal volume of gas in stomach or intestine may make one feel uncomfortable for a while—till the gas is absorbed or belched or passed along the canal But if genuine distress, pain or serious disturbance of heart action or breathing occurs, it certainly is not due to gas. Anyway you are foolhardy indeed if you fail to have medical care in such an "attack." I refuse to suggest here any of the acute or chronic troubles that may produce such "attacks," but once more urge you, don't, for goodness sake, don't trifle with your health or life fooling with medicine, diet or other measures purporting to stop "that gas." Get the "gas" out of your head, tell the doctor what you feel, but let the doctor determine the nature and cause of your trouble, even if you think you know all the nostrum mongers and quacks can tell about it.

Yes, indeed, you have gas, all right, my dear geek, but so have we all, so why make all the fuss about it?

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Pale But Not Anemic

My daughter, 12, seems pale and always tired. She must be anemic. (Mrs. C. H. W.)

Answer—Not necessarily. Pallor and anemia do not always go together. You do not mention whether your physician has examined your daughter—she deserves the benefit of a medical examination at least. I hate to alarm you, but it is always wise to think of the possibility of incipient tuberculosis when a child in the early 'teens seems pale, listless and always tired. If the doctor finds the child has only simple anemia, there is little to worry about. Anyway it can do no harm to study the booklets "V-I-T-E Spells Youth" and "Blood and Health"—for either send ten cents and stamped envelope bearing your address.

Wheat to Eat

After washing wheat for table use I dry it in the sun for easier grinding. Does this harm it in any way? (Mrs. H. S.)

Answer—No. Your family is lucky—if you serve plain wheat in one way or another every day they will have better nutrition and better health and be free of many common complaints due to nutritional deficiency. On written request (a clipping is not sufficient) I'll mail the pamphlet "Wheat to Eat" to any correspondent who provides stamped envelope bearing his address.

Nutritional Deficiency

Relative has taken mineral oil nightly for many years. She is rapidly losing her eyesight and, although not more than 55 years of age she now looks, acts and feels like a woman 75. (Mrs. C. M.)

Answer—Her physician would be the best judge as to what ails her. Frequent use of mineral oil interferes with assimilation of what vitamins and mineral elements the ordinary inadequate refined diet provides. Your relative may still be teachable—ask her to send me a clean dime—you know, not all stuck up with messy stuff—and a stamped envelope bearing her address, for the booklet "The Constipation Habit and Colon Hygiene."

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why is a watch called a turnip?

"Turnip" as a facetious name for a watch was probably suggested by an old English nursery rhyme usually included in the collection attributed to Mother Goose.

If wishes were horses, beggars would ride;
If turnips were watches, I would wear one by my side.

The earliest use of "turnip" as a slang term for a watch recorded by the Oxford dictionary is dated 1840. It was more apt in the days of old-fashioned thick silver watches than it is today. Huge watches of the turnip variety are now seldom seen.

For some unexplainable reason the turnip has been treated for centuries as if it were a joke. Even Samuel Johnson joined in ridiculing this garden and field vegetable that has contributed its share of food to man and beast. In Burlesque of Lopez de Vega" the Great Cham of English Literature" wrote:

If the man who turnips cries,
Cray not when his father dies,
'Tis a proof that he had rather
Have a turnip than his father.

A nonsense verse, persistently attributed to Henry Wadsworth Longfellow but the authorship of which was denied by him, runs:

Mr. Finney had a turnip
And it grew behind the barn;
And it grew and it grew,
And that turnip did no harm.

In "Japhet in Search of a Father" (1836) Captain Frederick Marryat wrote: "There's no getting blood out of a turnip." This was merely an English version of a Latin proverb translated, "You can't get blood out of a stone."

Samuel Butler, author of "Hudibras," said: "A degenerate nobleman, or one that is proud of his birth, is like a turnip. There is nothing good of him but that which is underground." But Sir Thomas Overbury had 50 years earlier made a similar observation about the potato. Notwithstanding Butler's observation, turnip tops, prepared like spinach or kale, are a delicacy, and "turnip greens" are a common ingredient of "pot likker." In "David Copperfield" Dickens has Barkis say, "It was true . . . as turnips is."

"Nip" in "turnip," as well as in "parsnip," is from Old English "naep," tap-root. The turnip ("turn-naep") was so called because when the root was pulled from the ground it looked as if it had turned around or spun.

Turnips belong to the same plant family as the cabbages and have long been cultivated. The common garden variety or white turnip is often called the English turnip in America. Under date of August 15, 1761, George Washington at Mt. Vernon noted in his diary: "Sow'd abt. half an Acre of English Turnip Seed." It is estimated that there are from 160,000 to 190,000 turnip seeds in a pound. Turnips weighing more than 20 pounds have been grown.

A variety of large turnip introduced into England about 1780 from Sweden is variously called "yellow turnip," "Swedish turnip," "swede," "Russian turnip" and "rutabaga," the last term being a modification of the Swedish name of the vegetable. It has a long, yellow-fleshed root and smooth cabbage-like leaves.

Some weeks ago two women reached their 98th and 99th birthdays within a few days. Mrs. W. R. Thickson marked her 100th year from a hospital bed Monday, and tomorrow Mrs. Elizabeth Ann Harris, of Tynside, celebrates her 100th birthday.

60-Cycle Power In Hamilton Cut Off Four Hours

Hamilton, Jan. 8 — (CP)—All 60-cycle electric power was cut off for four hours during the night to aid task of large repair crews striving to restore full transmission facilities to Hamilton from the power plant at DeCew Falls.

Hamilton's power shortages began with the big storms of New Year's Day and returned intermittently until yesterday only one of the four 60-cycle circuits from DeCew was operating.

There was an eight-mile break in normal transmission lines, as ice-laden poles and wires toppled into badly-tangled wreckage. Holes were being blasted in frozen earth for wooden poles to carry a double-circuit emergency line around the big break. But for more than a mile the crews encountered solid rock and had to use dynamite and pneumatic drills.

The shortage had many large industrial plants on a curtailed schedule, among those closing for a time being the big east-end plant of Canadian Westinghouse.

Supply of illuminating gas was not considered in danger, as the United Gas and Fuel Company announced they had sufficient power to keep coke ovens operating eight or nine hours a day. The electric supply was also intact on 25-cycle circuits which serve the residential districts.

Fish Research Board's Plans Made for 1947

Ottawa, Jan. 8 — (CP)—New plans for Canadian fisheries studies from the Grand Banks of Nova Scotia to the blue Pacific are on the agenda for 1947

The Federal Fisheries Research Board, which ended its annual meeting here yesterday, heard extensive outlines of the work accomplished and planned in its various experimental stations from Halifax to Vancouver.

Among points of interest disclosed at the meeting were these:

1. Studies are continuing aimed at keeping tab on the population of cod and other groundfish off the Grand Banks, which the Board describes as an industry which should prosper indefinitely if care is taken to recognize and correct over-fishing.

2. A special research vessel will be put into service this year to study where herring may be found when not within reach of seasonal inshore fisheries and thus lengthen the herring season.

3. The Board cited the successful establishment several years ago of underwater oyster farming in the Maritimes and suggested that a new industry — clam farming — might soon be possible on a commercial scale.

4. The Board will visit various northern lakes, including Lake Athabasca and Lake Claire, during 1947 for the famed Winnipeg goldeye in the hope of finding new sources.

Studies of Inconnu and Halibut

5. Board scientists also will make a study of the inconnu a fish which in Canada occurs only in some of the waters of the Northwest and Yukon

6. Research showed the flesh of the halibut possesses a higher protein content than beef, although its content of vitamin B is lower.

7. Research on artificial fish driers by the Halifax station has resulted in 26 driers, enough to take care of the entire industry in the Maritimes, being placed in commercial use.

8. The Vancouver station is completing development of a new railway refrigerator car which will maintain a below-zero temperature under all conditions.

Dr. A. T. Cameron of the University of Manitoba was re-appointed chairman of the board. Pending his recovery from a recurrent illness, Prof J. R. Dymond, director of the Royal Ontario Museum of Zoology, Toronto, and Dr. G. B. Reed of Queen's University, Kingston, were named as co-alternate chairmen.

SIX PHILLIES SIGN

Philadelphia, Jan. 8 — (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies of the National League report that six players have already signed 1947 baseball contracts

General manager Herb Pennock said pitchers Kenny Raffensberger and Charley Stanceu, catcher Andy Seminick, 3rd baseman Jim Tabor, outfielder Johnny Wyrostek and shortstop Ralph Lapointe have agreed to terms.

Pennock said he expects little contract trouble from his players, including outfielder Del Ennis, who was generally referred to as the 1946 "rookie of the year."

Consumption of Beer And Hard Liquor Hits All-Time High

Ottawa, Jan. 8 (CP)—Although some rationing restrictions on beer and liquor remained in most provinces, the cup of the Canadian drinker really ran over in the year ended last March 31.

In that 12-month period—the latest for which figures are available—he tossed off enough of the stuff to provide every man, woman and child in the country with approximately half a proof gallon of spirits, 12 gallons of beer and nearly a half gallon of wine.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics, which has just issued these findings, says the apparent consumption of beer and hard liquor hit an all-time high during the period.

Spirits amounting to 5,864,000 proof gallons were disposed of by liquor devotees while beer guzzlers had a picnic on 130,088,000 gallons. Previous peaks were 4,729,000 proof gallons of liquor in 1942-43 and about 110,000,000 gallons of beer in 1944-45.

Wine drinkers tapered off to a mere 4,756,000 gallons from their record of 4,812,000 in 1942-43.

As usual, the elbow-bender paid off handsomely, to the tune of about $186,300,000 in taxes alone.

Excise taxes and import duties, validation fees and licences cost him $70,000,000. Levies on malt and malt products were $48,228,000 and on wine $2,607,000. Sales taxes and other excise taxes and duties paid to Dominion and Provincial Governments on the output of the brewing industry totted up to another $65,000,000.

WEDDINGS

WONNACOTT—PUTMAN

In an attractive setting of giant white 'mums and baby 'mums with the greenery of fern, Christ Church was the scene, at eleven o'clock on the morning of Dec. 28th., for the marriage of Emily Joy Putman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Putman, Herchimer Ave., and George Spence Wonnacott, son of Mr and Mrs. Albert Wonnacott, Green Street, with Rev. J. Grant Sparling officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride made a charming picture in a gown of white slipper satin, fashioned with dropped shoulders, completed with net, a high neckline and floor-length skirt, her long veil falling from a coronet of lace. She wore the family pearls and carried a white prayer-book with a shower of gardenias.

Miss Jean Gazley acted as maid-of-honor, wearing a gown of pink taffeta, with contrasting blue feathered cap and shoulder-veil, the bridesmaid being Miss Ann Putman, sister of the bride, in a gown of blue taffeta, with pink feathered cap. Both attendants carried nosegays of white 'mums and pink roses.

The groom was assisted by Mr. Douglas Freeman, of Freeman, Ont., and the ushers were Mr. George Powers, of Picton and Mr. George Wonnacott, of this city.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Herchimer Ave., where the bride's mother received in a gown of rose crepe with black lace, a hat trimmed with ostrich feathers, and black accessories. She was assisted by the mother of the groom, who wore a gown of grey crepe with matching hat and black accessories.

For travelling to Montreal and points in the United States, the bride chose a lime green dress, with muskrat coat and brown accessories.

Out-of-town guests were from Napanee, Deseronto, Pembroke, Picton and Northport.

Mr. and Mrs. Wonnacott have taken up residence at 180A Moira Street West.

KELLAR—GIBSON

A quiet, but very pretty wedding took place on Christmas Day at eleven o'clock in the parsonage of the Thomasburg United Church, when Miss Dora May Marie Gibson, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Gibson, of Trenton, become the bride of Mr. Francis Kinnear Kellar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Kellar, of Thomasburg, with the Rev. H. B. Heywood officiating, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

The bride, who was attired in a dress of pearl grey wool with brown accessories, was attended by Miss Ruby Kellar, sister of the groom, in a dress of turquoise blue crepe and cut velvet, with black accessories.

Mr. Robert Reid, of Ivanhoe, assisted the groom.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the groom, where his mother received the guests wearing a gown of mauve crepe. She was assisted by her mother, attired in mauve figured silk jersey. Dinner was served to about forty guests, the dining room being decorated in a color scheme of mauve and pink, the bride's table centred with a three-tier wedding cake. The serviteurs were Mesdames Gordon Mitts and Alton Switzer, Misses Madeline Kellar and Fern Kellar.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold locket; to the bridesmaid the same and to the groomsman, a billfold.

Mr. and Mrs. Kellar will reside on a farm near Thomasburg.

RAWDON

Family Tendered Farewell Party Before Departure

Rawdon. (Special.)— Despite the unusually cold weather about one hundred people gathered at Mount Pleasant Church Hall and tendered Mrs. Morris Rose and family a farewell party prior to their departure to reside in Stirling.

Mr. Lindsay McKeown was Master of Ceremonies for the occasion. All present enjoyed community singing led by Mr. Don Campbell, with Miss Lois Weaver at the piano. Mrs. Malcolm Sharp and Miss Ruth Sharp contributed a piano duet and piano solos were given by Miss Betty McConnell, Mrs. Mac. Sharp and Miss Shirley McKeown, while readings were given by Mrs. Percy MacMullen, "A Message for the New Year", and "Neighbors".

An address of appreciation to the Rose family was read by Mr. Kenneth Weaver on behalf of the Mount Pleasant Community, as well as the patrons of Central Cheese Company and Mrs. Rose was presented with a well filled purse. The family have resided at Mount Pleasant for seventeen years and have assisted with W.M.S. in the church choir, and with social gatherings of all kinds, so they will be greatly missed, but it is hoped they will soon make many new friends in Stirling.

Mrs. Rose graciously replied to the address saying she was deeply grateful to her many friends for their kindness to her and to the family. Refreshments were served by the committee in charge and an enjoyable evening brought to a close.

Bone Corset Back From Grandma's Day

Washington, Jan. 8. (AP)—Grandma's bone corset is coming back into fashion, but the new style would make the dear old lady color like a red, red rose.

For that intimate Victorian garment, in sleek golden satin and laced up the back in black, was worn in full view yesterday as the basis for one of the outstanding gowns of the Transworld Style Show, sponsored by the Women's National Press Club. The golden rib-hugger had a full skirt of black tulle, and was edged on top with the same material and jet beading.

Wives of British, Canadian, French, Australian and New Zealand diplomats were among the honor guests at the premiere. The new fashions were flown here by designers in London, Paris, New York, California and South America.

Only One of Wales Quads Now Lives

Bridgend, Wales Jan. 8 (CP)—A tiny, unnamed girl, first born and last survivor of quadruplets born yesterday to Mrs. Peggy Thomas, lay in an oxygen-supplied incubator today, her life still in the balance.

Her two brothers and a sister died last night, several hours after two 23-year-old nurses delivered the babies in the absence of a doctor.

Each of the quads weighed only about two pounds and doctors had given them only a slight chance to survive.

Mrs. Thomas, who had previously borne five children, gave birth to the quads after she had walked into the hospital from the ambulance in the snow before dawn yesterday, expecting a baby two months prematurely.

The nurses, Nora and Nesta Thomas, then received "the shock of our lives" as the babies arrived before doctors reached the hospital.

Rushed to incubators, the babies were given oxygen and fed with glucose-water through a pipette but as the day wore on hope for their survival waned.

110 Millions in Backlog Of Orders Facing Canada's Shipbuilding Industry

By JOHN LeBLANC
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Jan. 8 (CP)—Canada's shipbuilding industry, thriving as never before in peacetime, started off 1947 with a backlog of orders totalling around $110,000,000, a survey showed today.

Steel-ship yards in the west and east and on the Great Lakes are still humming busily, and authorities in the industry look for little diminution in that pace for two or three years to come.

Foreign orders bulk largest in the current program. France alone has about $70,000,000 worth of ships — of many types — on the stocks in this country. The Netherlands and Brazil have a number of craft under construction.

A big potential order is one of about $12,750,000 from China. The Ming Sung Industrial Company, which operates a big fleet of vessels on the Yangtse river, has negotiations in progress for 12 vessels, 40 lighters and loading equipment.

A sizeable fleet of ships is called for in the French order alone. The latest group contracts, placed late last year, are for 13 cargo-carriers and 140 barges of various types.

The Canadian Government, through the Commercial Credit Corporation, is financing the French orders.

Other foreign orders in hand include the construction of four 7,500-ton express cargo liners for Brazil, while in prospect are orders from Argentina and Chile. However, no deals have been closed with the latter two countries.

Merchant Fleet.

Besides the foreign business a considerable amount of shipbuilding is under way for Canada's own merchant fleet. Canadian National Steamships have a $3,000,000 freighter building at North Vancouver for the West Indies run, a 7,500-ton motorship on the stocks at Lauzon, Que., and other Canadian firms have smaller contracts.

A major Canadian job on hand is that of a new train-carrying ferry for the run between New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, which the Canadian Government is having built at Sorel, Que. It is expected to cost about $4,500,000.

Still under construction at Halifax are two tribal class destroyers, remainder of the four-ship program started in Canada during the war. It is not known when they will be completed.

Of these and other jobs in about 15 steel yards, about 35,000 workers are employed, as compared with the 90,000 who sent ships splashing off the ways at a record clip during the war. This total is expected by men in the industry to level off at about 25,000 in the next year and remain at that figure for perhaps three years.

MARMORA

Deloro Election First in 27 Yrs.

Marmora (Special)—The Deloro municipal election held on Monday and first in twenty-seven years created little stir amongst the residents of this small Ontario village. Returned as councillors for the ensuing year are H. O. Loveless, A. W. Drew, J. A. Paquet and F. Wiley.

Eighty-three of the one hundred and thirty voters went to the polls to register votes as follows:

Elected—H. O. Loveless 82; A. W. Drew 47; J. A. Paquet 47; F. Wiley 41.

Unsuccessful candidates — W. Mumby 35; F. Everard 28.

The poll presided over by returning officer Clifford R. Quinn with his daughter Shirley as clerk opened at 9 a.m. and closed at 5 p.m. By noon only fourteen had registered their vote. An hour later this number was almost doubled. The voting was heaviest around 4 p.m. time of change of shifts at the plant.

Oldest Employee

H. O. Loveless who headed the poll, while a newcomer in the council is one of the oldest employees of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company. A. W. Drew and J. A. Paquet who came next are members of last year's council, while F. Wiley, lowest man of those elected, was voted into his first year of office. Of the defeated candidates W. Mumby served eight years as councillor, but F. Everard was an aspirant to office for the first time. H. A. McNally of last year's council did not qualify as a candidate at the recent nomination meeting, since recently he became a resident of Marmora.

Reeve C. H. Buskard will head the council, having been given acclamation at the nomination meeting.

Ross "Terribly Disappointed" Over Failure of Boston Bruins To Make Better Showing in NHL

Veterans Have Not Lived Up to Pre-Training Camp Performance

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Over the stumbling Boston Bruins the threat of a general shakeup hung today on the word of their own Art Ross, but you could hardly blame at least three other National Hockey League clubs for wondering, "where's he going to get the new players?"

As of tonight, when the Bruins defend their third position against New York Rangers in one of three scheduled NHL games, they will be starting a three-game trial stretch, manager Ross said in Boston last night.

He added that he was "terribly disappointed" over the failure of eight veterans to live up to pre-season training camp performance.

"We now have completed half of our 60-game schedule," Ross pointed out. "We have been patient but unless the boys involved play up to our expectations, some of them can get ready to move on."

When they heard it, that last statement must have brought a few choking gasps from managers Frankie Boucher of New York's Rangers, Jack Adams of Detroit and Johnny Gottselig of Chicago Black Hawks.

Picked up Players

The Rangers, dangerously close to their old cellar position most of the season, plucked a player here and there until they finally seem to have struck a winning combination, as evidenced by their twin wins last weekend over Chicago and Toronto Maple Leafs. The Hawks and the Red Wings still are juggling.

Owner Bill Tobin, who found no takers for the $100,000 he offered for new players for his last-place Hawks, at present is on a scouting trip looking over players in the United States Eastern League.

It may be that the inventive Ross, who introduced such diverse innovations as the Ross "non-rolling" puck and the Ross "butterfly nets" to the NHL, may have better luck than his rivals. The Bruins' American Hockey League farm club, Hershey Bears, leads the Eastern Division of their circuit and boasts several young players.

Play Leafs Saturday

The Bruins go into tonight's game at New York with a one-point margin over the fourth-place Rangers and as winners of only one of their last eight games. They play the leading Maple Leafs at Toronto Saturday. Detroit on Sunday and those three games will decide whether changes are to be made before they return for a home stand against Chicago Jan. 15.

Although off-season deals brought veterans Babe Pratt and Joe Carveth to the team, Boston presented one of the least-changed clubs in the league this season. The only rookie they introduced was Norm McAttee, who later gave way to Bill Shill, replaced in turn by another rookie, Johnny Pierson.

In tonight's other two games, Toronto's Leafs and Montreal Canadiens will continue their battle for first place against the tail-end opponents

The Leafs, who saw their margin over Canadiens fall to three points when Rangers beat them 2-0 the last time out, meet Chicago at home. The Canadiens also are scheduled at home, against the fifth-place Red Wings.

GALT DEFEATS MARLIES 4-1

(By The Canadian Press)

The Galt Red Wings boomed into a three-way tie for second place in the Ontario Hockey Association's junior "A" circuit today after their smashing 4-1 victory at home against Toronto Marlboros in Tuesday's only game. That put the Wings on even terms with Oshawa Generals and the Marlboros — all jammed up six points behind the league-leading Toronto St. Michaels.

The game at Galt was the season's first encounter between Marlboros and the Wings. Bert Giesbrecht got Galt's first goal in the first period and both teams scored in the second, Tkachuk for Galt and Timgren for Marlies. Then in the last frame Bert Giesbrecht got his second goal and Anderson wound up the scoring for Galt.

Timgren looked best of the Toronto forwards and Bruce Philby former Wing, played a stellar game in the Toronto nets although his defence couldn't cope with the Wings' attack.

MEL OTT SAYS GIANTS OF 1947 WILL BE SPEEDY

Manager Claims Team Will be One of the Best in Good Many Years

By JOE REICHLER

New York, Jan. 8—(AP)—The 1947 edition of the New York Giants will be the speediest, hustlingest outfit since the days of John McGraw, manager Mel Ott said today as the former boy wonder prepared to start his sixth year at the helm of the club.

Ott, who succeeded Bill Terry in 1942 and landed the Giants in the first division only once in 5 years, predicted a pleasant surprise for Giant followers, long accustomed to a drab, colorless club.

"Our purchases during the past summer and fall were designed to bring speed and youth to the club. We looked for fellows who can run," said Ott. "We have acquired some of the fastest minor league players to bolster our outfield which was the weakest part of the club last year. Lack of speed and hustle in the outfield lost more games for us than the best of the team combined, including pitchers

"I expect Lloyd Gearhart, a 23-year-old speed merchant from Atlanta to plug the gap in centrefield. Gearhart led the Southern League in hits, runs, triples and stolen bases. Another speedster is Al White whom we drafted from Toledo. White, a .300 hitter, paced the American Association in stolen bases.

"Then we have Carroll (Whitey) Lockman back. Whitey batted .345 for us in about 50 games in 1944 before he left for the service. Together with Will Marshall from last year's picket line, they should form the fastest and perhaps the best outfield the Giants have had in years."

The National League's all-time home run king, who said he was undecided whether he would continue as an active player next season, expects Walker Cooper, who cost the Giants $175,000 last year but was of little use because of broken fingers, to regain his old form behind the plate He was dubious about the return of big Ernie Lombardi, who more than once hinted he might retire after 16 years in the big leagues.

TAMI MAURIELLO TRIES COMEBACK

Chicago, Jan 8 (AP)—Tami Mauriello, 26-year-old New York heavyweight, starts a campaign for a return bout with champion Joe Louis tonight in a 10-round go with James (Shamus) O'Brien, Philadelphia Negro, in the International Amphitheatre.

Maueriello, who shook up Louis with a right to the head before the Bomber dropped him in the first round in their title bout in Yankee Stadium last September, will enter the ring tonight with a $10,000 guarantee.

"Shamus," a stablemate of Ray Robinson, the welterweight champion, was stopped in two rounds last September by Archie Moore, St. Louis light heavyweight.

RUTH WINNING FIGHT FOR LIFE

New York, Jan. 8 (AP)—With his condition reported as continuing "satisfactory" Babe Ruth appeared early today to be winning his fight for life at French Hospital.

Ruth, idol of millions of baseball fans, underwent a serious two-hour neck operation Monday "for the relief of intractable (uncontrollable) pain."

The hospital switchboard has been swamped with telephone calls inquiring about the former slugger's condition. Only two visitors, his wife and an unidentified "close friend" were permitted to visit the former Sultan of Swat.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

The story of the Goderich Arena fatality when one woman was killed and two men seriously injured when a railing in the balcony gave way precipitating a number of people to the ice fifteen feet below, recalls a similar incident which occurred here years ago in the old skating arena then located on Turnbull Street.

• • •

It happened on February 7, 1916 during a hockey game between the Belleville and Picton Intermediates. Five or six people crashed to the ice some twelve feet below when a railing in the balcony gave way during a tense moment in the game.

• • •

As a result of the crash, the late E. H. (Ted) Harris was seriously injured as was the late George N. Bennett, then a traveller with J. E. Walmsley and Company. Miss Gladys Riggs, West Bridge Street, Michael Bawden and Mr. Deleng also were injured.

• • •

The accident occurred when a scantling gave way during a face-off at the south side of the rink. Mr. Bennett landed on his feet but Mr. Harris who was a heavy man fell forward striking his head with resounding force on the ice. He was also struck by the other spectators as he lay on the ice. Miss Riggs was carried out and placed in a car and sent home. Mr. Harris was found lying in a pool of blood, unconscious. He was taken out and rushed home in an ambulance.

• • •

Bill Green, former hockey star of this city, recalling the incident related that the owner of the arena, the late Dick Arnott, was in Lindsay that night with the Belleville Junior Hockey Team of which Green was a member. "We did not know anything about the rink accident until we got off the train at Belleville the next morning. When Dick heard of it, he toppled to the ground with a heart seizure. He later recovered."

• • •

The rampaging Belleville "Bees" fresh from their overwhelming victory over the Trenton Juniors on Monday night will likely meet some new blood before engaging in their next group joust. It appears that the Trenton kids are unable to secure the ice on January 13, the next scheduled game, and Prexy Dennis is scouting around looking for an exhibition tilt.

• • •

At the present moment the classy Gananoque junior team management is being contacted and arrangements are pending regarding a game with the younkers from Gerald Woodley's hamlet on the banks of the St. Lawrence. The Gans are reputed to be a powerful young squad which has beaten the best of 'em around Kingston way and a tilt between them and the Bees would draw a large crowd. However, more about that later.

• • •

Trenton Flyers and the Bloomfield Sky Chiefs staged a hectic battle in the Wellington Arena on Monday night when they pried the lid off the Intermediate "B" group series. Flyers swept into an early first period lead but were forced to go all out to protect their margin when the Chiefs led by the veteran Kitty Abbott of Bloomfield surged to the attack in a spirited display of hockey. In fact the Chiefs drew within one goal of the Flyers total late in the third period but the veteran "Brack" Brackenburg rammed home the biscuit with seconds to go to give the Flyers the game

• • •

From all reports from the former home town, the teams were evenly matched and that brings up the fact that both of these teams will be seen in action here tonight. Flyers will tangle with the strong Picton Combines while the Chiefs mix matters with the strong Mountain View Bombers squad. The feature is a double-header with the first game scheduled to start at 7:30.

• • •

The Mountain View Bombers will ice a strong squad here tomorrow night according to Sports Officer "Doc" Lyon. The amiable "Doc" who looks after athletics at the station told this desk that he has no less than three goalkeepers in the refrigerator, four solid defence huskies and two snappy lines up front.

• • •

In the nets, "Doc" can call on, or rather the coach, who is Squadron Leader "Nick" Nickserson, who with Sarge Jim Botting master-minds the squad, Johnny Driscoll who played with the squad last year; a gent named Weistead who braced the poles for an Ottawa squad and another named Ebell who is said to have played with the Stratford Kroehlers.

• • •

Behind the blue lines the Bombers have Maurice Elliott, formerly with Collingwood Shipbuilders; Paul Naden, Joe Sherman and a starry checker named Marietta. In the attacking divisions first line is Mac McNab, who starred with the Bombers last year and other seasons; "Doc" Murray who played with the pre-war edition of the Flyers and has five years experience in junior hockey in Toronto and Dickie Dunning, a former Pacific coast star.

• • •

The second string line is composed of Hammy Hammond formerly with the Montreal juniors, a centre named Gilson, record unknown and Joe Castleton, another player with Pacific experience. All-in-all "Doc" thinks he has a fairly powerful team which should make the other squads in the group travel to make them say "uncle". However, tonight will tell the tale and local fans should see two outstanding games in the scheduled double-bill. Trenton Flyers meet Picton in the first game.

• • •

The successful slug-fest held at Mountain View a short while back was greeted with so much acclaim that the lads in the service are clamoring for more leather-pushing. So without ado 'Doc' Lyon is moving the sticks to produce another outstanding boxing card which, he expects, will be staged at the station between February 20 and 27.

• • •

"This card will top even the good one which inaugurated our entry into fistiana, and we expect the beak-busting fans will get more than their money's worth. Right now I can say there will be eight outstanding bouts, five three-rounders and three five rounders and all of them will see the class of the district in action."

• • •

Headlining the main attraction will be the "Cement-Mixer" Mancuso of Toronto who has been laying the lads low with his lethal rights and lefts and who has earned his sobriquet in the ring. He works methodically, like his moniker would infer, and after mixing the opposition firmly but not gently, generally lays him on the floor to set. An opponent has yet to be selected for the "Mixer" but he will have to be a good one. Also on the card is Don Mogart, pride of Vic Bagnato's Toronto Diamond Athletic Club stable who made such a hit in his last appearance at the station

• • •

So if "Doc's" plans work out, and there is no reason why they shouldn't there should be one of the best boxing attractions ever offered the fistic fans of these parts in many a moon at Mountain View come late February.

TRENTON FLIERS SCORE 4-2 WIN OVER BLOOMFIELD

Game Cleanly Played With Only Four Penalties Being Handed Out

Picton, Jan. 8: —Nine hundred fans saw the opening game of the Intermediate B O.H.A. League at Wellington arena, Monday night. Trenton Fliers scored a 4-2 win over Bloomfield Sky Chiefs. Tonight (Wednesday) sees a double-header at Belleville arena, Picton vs Trenton and Bloomfield vs Mt. View Bombers.

Bloomfield opened the scoring when Cork drove in Abbott's pass. Seconds later, the Fliers tied it up. Norris scoring unassisted. Stojan made it 2-1 for Fliers on a nice passing play, Martell to Norris to Stojan.

Second period was scoreless. This was mainly due to the fine work of Parks in Bloomfield net. He stopped shots from all angles.

The Fliers forged ahead in the third when Martell scored unassisted. Bloomfield came back to make it 3-2 as Platford drove home Cork's pass. With a minute of play left, Blackenbury scored on a pass from Nickey Sargent to make the final score 4-2 for Fliers.

Referees—Ben Bowen of Trenton, and M. Finnegan, Picton, gave satisfactory service. Each team had four penalties.

"FBI" AGENCY TO POLICE ATHLETICS WANTED BY ASSOC.

Seek More Stringent Laws in an Effort to Stop Gambling

New York, Jan. 8 (AP) — A recommendation that all sports, amateur and professional, co-operate in the formation of an "FBI" agency to police athletics in an effort to curb gambling went before the National Collegiate Athletic Association today.

Another proposal suggests the association seek more stringent statutes on gambling and specifically recommends that the United States Congress be asked to enact a law making attempted bribe of a player a federal offence.

The post-war betting mania, one of the prime topics at the meeting of the college athletic leaders as a result of the alleged attempt to "fix" the National Football League championship playoff, brought warnings from two speakers at yesterday's sessions.

First, Dr. J. L. Morrill, President of the University of Minnesota, told the delegates "intercollegiate football is ripe for the kill." Later, Earl Yeomans of Temple University tackled the subject by advocating the "FBI" setup to which he gave the label "clean sports foundation."

Under Yeomans' plan, the foundation would include all sports governing bodies in the country with the President of the United States or J. Edgar Hoover of the F.B.I. as honorary president.

Yeomans' proposals, adopted by the athletic directors, would bar gamblers from the scene of contests, keep college athletic information out of the hands of illegal agencies and prevent coaches from speculating on the outcome of games.

The athletic directors, in discussing the gambling subject, acknowledged the human desire to bet and said they were aware that gambling will "always be with us" but they did express a desperate desire to halt the inroads into the sport of the fixer.

They called the press and radio "hypocritical" because they published or broadcast odds and predictions.

In the ensuing discussion, which was joined in by reporters present, it was generally agreed that the publishing of such odds was not the root of the evil.

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Regina, Jan. 8 —(CP)— Sound a fanfare for an 18-year-old hockey brilliant who will make the leap from junior ranks to the National Hockey League, perhaps before the end of the current season.

Metro Prystal, 170-pound centre and captain of the Moose Jaw Canucks of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League, will "pretty definitely" play for Chicago Black Hawks next season and if the Canucks finish up their current schedule before the Hawks, he may play a few games with the presently tail-end N.H.L. team.

A product of hockey-conscious Yorkton, Sask., the burly Prystal has piled up more than 50 points this season and has led his team almost single-handedly to first place.

Canucks' coach, Ken (Mighty Mite) Doraty, pre-war N.H.L. star, says the modest youngster will be the first player still of junior age to take the long jump since the days of Harold (Mush) March, Charlie Conacher and Busher Jackson. Doraty says the boy is the best amateur prospect anywhere for immediate entry into the N.H.L., "and that covers a lot of ground."

You don't have to take Doraty's words — "scientific" is one of them — for the sensational play of the highly-esteemed high school student. Scouts and sports writers who have seen him are deafening in their praises.

Al Ritchie, long-time New York Rangers' scout, casts a longing but hopeless eye towards Prystal and enthuses: "He's got everything and would star in the N.H.L. tomorrow."

Prystal is shifty, strong on his skates despite a broken leg two years ago which slowed his game last year, carries a stick seemingly covered with glue and is no slouch in competitive spirit.

An indication of the legend that is already growing around him is the recent rumor that he signed a contract with Chicago which called for $15,000 to cover the balance of the current season plus next season.

Doraty said the rumor was unfounded but that Prystal would sign a contract with Hawks when he received the right terms.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

The game would be tame if we tried hard to purge the few who are born with the urges to splurge. They shake us awake with their vigorous feats to bid'em too high and then sleep in the streets.

Sit thee doon in the south seat of this pair:

SOUTH
♠4
♥A Q J 5 4 3 2
♦7 4 2
♣Q 6
NORTH
♠A 6 5 2
♥K
♦A 6 5
♣A K 10 8 3

You should pass. When you open the bidding, partner depends on you for better than average in big card values. Rule has figured out for him the bids that will safely fit such a basis.

Your partner in the north opens with one club. He promises a minimum of five tricks, four high cards, two sure tricks, a biddable suit. He has more in each of these departments.

Actually, north has a rebiddable club suit, four sure tricks, five high cards, seven tricks. What happens with the surplus of two tricks, one high card, two sure tricks, rebid value of the suit?

With extra stuff like this, some players start with a bid that is higher than one. This would be wrong here. A two bid promises nine tricks; three and four bids promise longer suits.

What is wrong with a bid that contains less than it promises? Partner gets a distorted vision of your values. He will use a wrong set of responses. He is likely to go too high.

It is better to have a surplus than a shortage of what your bid shows. A surplus can always be shown in later bids, if necessary. A good system of bidding provides for this very thing.

With an opportunity to bid again, additional values are stated. In this manner, neither partner is misinformed or put to a guess.

What if partner lacks enough to keep your one bid alive? No material harm is done. It means your pair has not enough for a game. So, you are glad to stop as quickly as possible.

No use to stick your neck out to knock yourself the heck out.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN

With twelfth night over, the Christmas trees and the mistletoe discarded, a few notable sayings by film celebrities during the year just past deserve tabulation before the 1946 cinema year makes way for the new .....and better. Human nature being what it is, Howard Barnes of the New York Herald Tribune says he still "feels belligerently optimistic about a medium too rarely justifies high hopes."

It is too much to hope that Hollywood cares much for artistic integrity, except verbally, but there seems to be a pretty good chance that top-ranking foreign productions shown in 1946 are hitting were it hurts most....in the box office.
fice.

This may snap Hollywood out of its lethargy of trying to find the successful entertainment formula and wise them up to the fact that the only successful formula is to keep their films fresh, new and different. There is nothing so boring as the same picture repeated and the odor of moth balls has been strong in the past year.

Last Words for 1946

During the year Charles Boyer observed that he was "getting too old for Kasbah stuff." .... Ingrid Bergman confided that "Nowadays I find it verree easy to smile."...Jimmy Durante asked, "When ya play to a quarter admission, what do ya get for an audience? People!" ...Orson Wells who had a bad year, counterattacked his critic with "When I don't roll my eyes, quote Shakespeare and glow in the dark people : , disappointed."

Olivia De Havilland played twins and an unmarried mother and remarks, "Ordinarily, no one whistles at me."...

Alfred Hitchcock explained that a McGuffin is secret papers or jewels or "A weapon for shooting tigers in the Adirondacks."... Gabriel Pascal quoted George Bernard Shaw as saying "Gabriel, if you don't make money nobody will believe in your genius." ...

Fred Astaire: "I've been in show business since I was 4 1-2 years old, and I can't follow myself on for ever." ... Charles Laughton: "I'm a professional actor who's worked all his life to maintain his amateur standing.. and Edmund Goulding: "I can't stand to see pictures—all that noise up there on the screen makes me nervous."

Harrison Stays

Rex Harrison probably will stay in California for some time following the completion of "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir," in which he co-stars with Gene Tierney. He has made no announcement but the tip-off is that he has sent to Britain for his collection of paintings and it seems likely he will provide a more or less permanent residence to house them.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

Cyril Tolley, Britain's foremost amateur golfer has asked the Professional Golfers' Association to adopt the American system of allowing topflight amateurs to play in tournaments with the pros as a step in improving Britain's suffering fairway reputation.

L. T. (Buck) Shaw, coach of the San Francisco Forty Niners of the All-America Conference Professional Football Association, announced yesterday the suspension and fining of two of his players who participated as ringers in a game with a rival league last Sunday. The two are John Woudenberg and Eddie Balatti.

Harry Plant, trainer of Berborough, said the champion Australian race horse would be taken to the United States in the near future to be retired to stud.

Army and Stanford University, which have not met on a football gridiron for 19 years, will engage in a home-and-home series in 1948, it was announced yesterday.

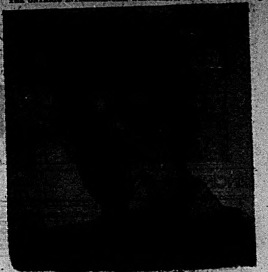
AT THE CAPITOL — Star Leo Gorcey and Huntz Hall are not very happy with a vicious ape at their necks in Monogram's riotous "Spook Busters," Bowery Boys comedy next at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program "Moon Over Montana" with Jimmy Wakely.



AT THE BELLE — Voted the outstanding new star of 1946 in the Motion Picture Heralds Exhibitor poll, Dane Clark has a chance to prove his versatility in an unusual role in Warner Bros. "A Stolen Life," tale of twin sisters and their romantic rivalry. Bette Davis and Glenn Ford are co-starred.

MINNEAPOLIS NOW COMMANDS FIRST PLACE IN LOOP

Houston Lucky to Win Fourth Game of Season From Fort Worth

(By The Canadian Press)

The worm has turned. Minneapolis now commands the northern division of the United States Hockey League after a month-long attempt to end its tie with Omaha and in the southern division renovated Houston has won its fourth game of the season.

Minneapolis went right to work on Omaha ice last night scoring five-times in the first frame to down the Knights 7-3. M. Vaillancourt, Walt Melnyk, Robertson, Leo Gasparini and Trigg staged the Millers' first-period spree with a tally apiece.

After Vaillancourt's second tally and one by Tom Forgie brought the Millers' count to seven in the second period, Minneapolis coasted scoreless through the third frame. George Homenuke and Frank Melong counted for the losers in the second and McNab added the third Omaha marker in the third.

Houston, brought to life by the addition of some new blood recently, also got off to an early start to edge Fort Worth 4-3 and win its fourth game of the season. Houston scored four times in the first two frames while holding the Rangers to one point.

In the third frame, Fort Worth got off a near-rally Roy Sawyer, three-time visitor to the penalty box during the game, rammed through a goal. Then Wally Kilrea notched his second goal of the evening. The stage was set for a game-winning rally but the Ranger attack collapsed.

Goals by Johnny Horeck, Moe White, Arley Carlson and Agar brought the skippers their first victory since Dec. 5—a victory which also was at the expense of Fort Worth. Houston won that game 3-1.

Today Omaha visits Minneapolis in a return engagement and may again tie things up in the northern division. Other games tonight are St. Paul at Kansas City, and a chance to get even for Fort Worth at Houston.

Six Rinks Reach 16's in Main Event

Nipawin, Sask., Jan. 8 (CP)—Two former Canadian champions, Leo Johnson of Winnipeg Strathconas and Cliff Manahan of Edmonton Royals posted their third and second victories respectively last night at the end of the second day of the 11-day $12,000 Nipawin curling bonspiel.

Johnson conquered H. H. Henschel of Rosthern, Sask., 14-3 in the 9 p.m. draw of the No. 1 event and Manahan came from behind to post a 12-8 decision over R. C. Aitken of Boissevain, Man.

But as these two favorites advanced, a [illegible], Dalt Henderson of Saskatoon [illegible], was the victim of a 12-11 upset at the hands of F. Schell of Love, Sask.

At the end of the day six rinks had reached the 16's of the main event. They were those of Leo Johnson, Bill Dunbar, of Kinley, Sask., Williard McDonald of Love, W. C. Dunstan of Tisdale, Sask., G. Mitchell of Arborfield, Sask., and Manahan.

A third former Canadian champion, Howard Wood of Winnipeg Granite, did not see action during the day but will meet J. M. Lavery of Newdale, Man., tomorrow.

Johnston's next opponent will be the winner of the Aubrey Cochrane of Shaunavon vs W. A. Young of Carlyle match while Manahan will meet the winner of the J. M. Cook of Flin Flon 13-8 and Johnson had beaten G. Simmer of Vancouver 11-2.

Professor Explains Billiard Shots During Game

Ann Arbor, Mich, Jan. 8 —(AP)—Billiard player Willie Hoppe and trickshot artist Charles Peterson, who've played on more tables than one could shake a cue at, put on one of the most unusual exhibitions last night while a college professor read a 41-page treatise explaining their shots.

The match, played before the exclusive University of Michigan Science and Research Club was interspersed with Prof. A. D. More's comments on the behavior of the billiard balls.

His language was a bit more academic than that generally heard in pool rooms, but he explained to his colleagues such technical things as:

1. The relationship of cue velocity to ballspin and velocity in terms of how far from centre the ball is cued; the fraction of cue energy lost at impact and the fraction delivered to the ball, in terms of the position of the cueing spot.

2. The sidewise drift of the ball in the break shot.

3. Determination of "cushion factors" or relative loss of ball velocity due to cushion contact under various conditions.

BURNED FINGERS

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 46.

Her grandmother had kept the place in an uproar for a week, getting ready for "the captain." He was to have a suite of rooms in a downstairs wing so that he could walk out of his sitting room into the pleasant shelter of the southwest garden where the first lilacs bloomed and where a spaced row of slender birches framed faraway bay views as if they were panels in a wall. Hilda, the big middle-aged maid, was to have charge of these quarters. The finest linens and blankets the house could boast must be assembled for "the captain's" use. There was a tiny kitchen in this suite with shelves and a sink in it; here a gas plate and a small icebox were placed, and Jennifer's grandmother herself made out a list of the supplies that were to stock it. Hot-water bottles and staple medical supplies were all in readiness; a very special bedcover that old Mrs. Giddings had brought home from Pekin, a beautiful affair of soft brown fur and tribute silk, was folded over the foot of the deep, luxurious couch.

In a few days now Jim could be moved to all this comfort. Jennifer watched him, wondering how she was to break to him one piece of information he had apparently forgotten and one or two others that might prove something of a shock.

"Never run away from me again, Jenny," he said, opening his eyes.

"I never will."

"What scared you?"

"You mean that Saturday, Jim, the day before we were to have been married? Do you remember?"

"Do I remember!" he echoed in faint scorn.

"That day I met someone, quite by accident. Someone I never wanted to see again, Jim. It brought it all back to me." She was silent for a moment. "I couldn't—it wasn't as if I had told you all the sad, stupid, mistaken things I'd ever done. That would have been different. But I couldn't, there on the day before my wedding, know that he was alive in the world, friendly and cheerful and not touched at all, and that I knew and he knew and you didn't!"

"Fool," the man said mildly. "You put us both through all this—for that? You've better sense than that, Jennifer."

"Ordinarily, maybe. I went sort of crazy, Jim. I was in a panic... It seemed to me I had to escape—just to get away! I ran out on you and myself and everyone."

"You being the only person who ever made a mistake, Jen?"

"I think I felt so, that night. I couldn't go on—go on to all the bridal things. But now," Jennifer said, "I feel as if I had been through a great bath of flame and come out—well, different. Purified maybe."

"I'd have won after all," said Jim. "You'd have married me, not him. The laugh would have been on him."

"I didn't see any laugh to it at all. These have been agonizing months to me, Jim. But he's dead now, the man I met that day."

"War?"

"Training at an air base down south. Betty saw it in the paper, and a few months ago I met his mother," Jennifer said. "She was at a luncheon at the Burlingame Club, and Granny and I were She was talking of him — how smart he wa. and how when the Navy refused him he got into the Air Corps. I didn't say I knew him."

"But you were glad."

"Yes, I was glad. I wouldn't have killed him," Jennifer said musingly, "but I was glad when Betty told me that he was dead."

"So you won't run away again?"

"Never again. Jim, you know I'm living with my grandmother now," Jennifer said as if by afterthought.

"She helps you?" he said a little anxiously.

"Oh, I never do any housework at all!"

"Mollie was in for a minute yesterday, you know," he said, "and I asked her if she thought everything was all right with you, if you were working too hard or anything, and she said no, that your grandmother helped out a lot. But she sort of laughed when she said it. Is your grandmother a good deal of a responsibility?"

"No, she really isn't. She's terrible nice. Good old Mollie, she kept her word and didn't give anything away," Jennifer said, the last phrase audible to her thoughts only. "You'll like Granny," she added aloud. "You're coming to us, of course, as soon as they'll let you move."

"But gosh—no, darling, I can't let you assume the responsibility for me," Jim said. "I may have to lie around for weeks. Much better leave me here or in any one of the base hospitals. You and I can see each other often and plan, but I'm not going to drag you down if I can help it."

"Jim, do I look dragged down?"

"You look especially wonderful, Jenny. And no man ever wanted his wife," Jim said, his eyes watering, "as I want mine. But we have to wait a little longer, sweetheart."

At this she came over and knelt beside his bed, covering his left hand with both of hers.

"Jim, do you remember the day you came here, when all the doctors were here, and you were filled up with sulfa drugs and tired and dazed and they were going to cut off your arm?"

"I remember every instant of it. I was sort of dopey. I thought my mother was here in the hospital and I kept trying to have her come in. And she's been dead so many years!"

"If you thought your mother was here, perhaps she did come to get you Jim and I held back! Don't you remember the nurses and the doctors—and the old priest—and my borrowing Mrs. Stewart's ring? Don't you remember saying 'I do'?"

A long silence. Their eyes riveted together.

"That was a dream,' he whispered then. His lips trembled and he said impatiently, "I'm so darned weak! That was a dream," he repeated. "I'd forgotten it, but I remember now. All sorts of vague dreams kept coming and going, Jenniefr, and that was one of them?"

Jennifer did not speak. But her brimming eyes were smiling.

"That—that didn't happen, Jenny?"

"But it did hapen, Jim. I'm your wife." she drew a hand free and showed him a plain gold ring.

"Oh no, darling, we're not not married!"

"But we are. You didn't think I'd let you get away again?"

"Oh, my God,' Jim said beneath his breath. He closed his slip from under the lids. His one big thin hand gripped both of hers so tightly that the bones hurt; she stooped over and laid her head beside his on the pillow.

"It's the two of us together now, Jim, forever and ever!'

"And Granny!" he said with a shaky laugh. And then in a tone that held more of his vitality and power than any she had heard from him since his return he aded, "We'll get away with this, Jenny!"

"Get away with it! Why, we'll be the big people, Jim. We'll go to doctors' conventions, leaving the little girls at home but taking the boys and the baby and dear old Annie—"

"Oh, hush!" he said. "I'm—you're hitting a man when he's down. I may have to go back, you know, Jenny. This thing isn't over."

"Of course you'll go back! And meanwhile I'll be picking out some nice old roomy place not to far from the city, with a view—"

"Three rooms, you mean. Maybe in Eddy Street."

"Oh," she said longingly, "how I'd love three rooms in Eddy Street with you coming home to me every night!"

"Oh, Jenny, Jenny, what years are ahead of us!"

"Don't move that hand that way! It scares me to death. Calm down now, or your temperature will go up and Stewart will throw me out." Jennifer got to her feet, kissed his forehead, returned to her chair by the window.

"My grandmother, you know," she said presently, "has some money. So we don't have to worry immediately."

"But good God, we can't use the old lady's money!"

"Well, perhaps we won't have to.'

"You'll still have your job?"

"With the Red Cross—oh yes."

"I didnt know they paid salaries."

"They have to —a few. We'll get along all right, Jim," Jennifer assured him confidently.

"My good wife," he said contentedly, closing his eyes, "I have no doubt that you will support me in a manner to which I have been accustomed tor the remainder of my life."

"You need have none," Jennifer answered serenely.

In a few minutes she knew that he was asleep. Her busy hands stopped moving and she watched for a while the strong lean, brown face with the lines of pain etched on it and the deep hollows for the kind eyes. That face was her world now; the long years had brought her safe to this harbor; this hospital room flooded on an early summer afternoon with stormy intermittent light and shadow, and filled with flowers. For the sun had come out from behind the clouds and was blazing against the blinds on the western windows.

The tipped mirror reflected a background of blossoms, flowering small trees in pots, a pink baby rose spread on a green wooden fan, pale blue delphinium and pink roses, white tulips and gold narcissus—the room was paneled in bloom.

And against the blooms he saw herself, a slender little figure and a brown-and-white checked wool frock with brown pumps on her slender feet, brown hair turning gold at the tips and hanging loosely about her suntanned face in which the eyes shone very blue and the wide mouth wore a wise and disciplined half smile.

Yes, it had been a long road to this place of peace and security from the dingy flat and the dull, grimy loft office. Jennifer thought of Betty's dining room with the drophead sewing machine and the dirty red walls the gloomy shadows of a rainy afternoon, the smells of grease and dust and the children's stuffy school clothes. She remembered that first dance at Mollie's and the borrowed dress, and her own dreadful underwear and grimy fingernails, and poor Eugene dead these long years. And the first trip across the grit and soot of the dark roofs and the studio windows pouring dim light across the bricks. Monty—who had been so kind to her; she had had many a happy hour with him now, in talk of the old studio lessons and the parties, and passionate, furious Stan with his offer of a beautiful coat! And all the time in those old years there had been the gnawing pain and shame at her heart, the burning need to see Sidney Borrows, to have one more talk. For months, for years she had dreamed of meeting him at every street corner; she had hoped for his voice every time the telephone rang. She had wanted to hurt him, humiliate him, send him down into the valley of suffering to which he had banished her.

All gone now like a dream. Vogelsang's gone with the odorous dressing room and the slippers, the list of rules. "The model must never take her eyes from the customer. She must assume a look of pleasant concern. She must never address the customer unless asked a question." Vogelsang's gone, and the packing room smelling of excelsior and tar, and the alley dripping dark with rain or shining dustily under a summer sun.

Lunches from paper bags—peanut butter and cream cheese sandwiches! She could smell them still!

Then halcyon summers at the lake—well, they would have those again. Perhaps this very summer she and Jim would go for a week or two with the Evanses. Ah, what heaven to be all together again—with Jim hers hers! Jennifer gave a faint involuntary laugh and Jim opened his eyes.

"I wish you knew what you looked like against all those flowers," he said.

"I do. I can see myself in the mirror. I look like a cover girl."

He studied her for some time with deep satisfaction. Then somewhat timidly he said:

"Jenny, I didn't dream—what we were just talking about: that wasn't a dream was it?"

She sent him a long slow smile shaking her head.

"No Jim. That wasn't a dream. This is real."

KISSING DANGEROUS IN WINTER

Boston, Jan. 8 —(AP)— Kissing in the winter can be dangerous, Boston's deputy health commissioner, Dr. Frederick J. Bailey, said today.

"At a time when influenza and grippe commonly have been prevalent, it is safest for osculating persons to kiss one another upon the cheek," he said.

Seven New Faces Will Be Seen At County Council

Seven new faces will appear in Shire Hall on January 21, when Hastings County Council opens its regular January session, due to results of county elections held in December and January.

By far the most important change is that in the township of Elzevir, where the veteran reeve of that municipality, James A. Moore retired from active municipal life after a tenure of office of 35 years. His seat will be occupied by the new reeve, Carman Kleinsteuber.

Fred Campbell, Foxboro, is the new reeve of Sidney Township, replacing former Reeve James Nicolson, a veteran of nine years' service.

Percy Moore, Shannonville, will occupy the deputy reeve seat for Tyendinaga. He will take former Deputy Reeve Bartley Welsh's place when Mr. Welsh stepped up to the reeveship on the retirement of former Reeve Ken Vivian.

Arthur Jones, the new reeve of Huntingdon, will be seen in the seat formerly occupied by Ex-Reeve Elmer Post, while Reeve Fred Moorecroft will represent the interests of Madoc Township on the retirement of Warden James Nickle who served his township faithfully for 13 years.

Selden Homan is the new deputy-reeve of Thurlow and will take the place of former Deputy-Reeve Harry Harrison, who was elevated to the reeveship of the township on retirement of George MacDonald.

Wollaston has a new reeve, Mr. Clark Rollins, son of the late Warden Charles B. Rollins, who was well known in county council circles. He replaces Ex-Reeve Lee Gordon who retired last year.

Union's Demands Closes Factory

Connellsville, Pa., Jan. 8—(AP)— Because of demands by C.I.O. workmen which company officials said "cannot even be discussed," the United Refrigerator Manufacturing Company today ordered immediate closing of its local plant. One hundred and sixty employees are affected by the order, which followed a one-day strike over the company's selection of a superintendent. After the return to work, Harry Blakeman, vice-president, said the union submitted demands to be embraced in a new contract.

The demands, according to Blakeman, included 15-minute rest periods in the forenoon and afternoon, plus the usual lunch period, to be paid for by the company, the same wage scale paid steelworkers, together with a bonus and pension provisions and an insurance plan.

The company said unfinished work would be shipped to the main plant at Hudson, Wis.

2 New Members For Kiwanis Club

Two new members were initiated into the Kiwanis Club and a most interesting New Year's message was delivered by Padre Swan of Trenton Air Station at the first club meeting under President Jack White at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday. Padre Swan was an exceptionally fine speaker and if Len Dandeno provides that class of addresses throughout the year the members will have no cause for complaint.

Introduced to the club were Hubert Turley of the Ontario Hydro Staff and Frank Bolus, accountant for the Bank of Montreal. Mr. Turley was introduced by Stafford McKenna and Bruce Lattimer introduced Frank Bolus and both were initiated by Past Lieutenant Governor Cliff Baragar. Chairman of Membership, Jack McIntosh is starting where he left off last year, the Belleville Club having the largest increase of membership of any club in the O/O-M. district.

The speaker was introduced by Lawrence Kells and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Ray Roblin. The speaker stated there had to be better relationships in the International field and it was entirely up to the common people of the world to bring this about. He also stated that we could learn something useful and helpful by rebuilding in ourselves a new philosophy of life. "Some" he said, "may believe material things are the success of life but we all must have more thought of God in our relations and that everyone should use the best they have to the best of their ability."

Interspersed were many stories both witty and serious to illustrate the points brought out and the members gave hearty approval of a worthwhile talk which had in it something to think about in the days ahead of this New Year.

Millinery Stylists Seek to Improve Back View of Hats

By DENISE DALTROFF

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Jan. 8. (CP)—The back of a hat is as important as any other part—this is the word from the millinery information centre, which released its 1947 millinery styles.

Centre experts say it's the rear view that damns many hats in the eyes of men, particularly when perched hats are the rage.

Samples showed the use of draped ribbon or taffeta to finish off the back or perhaps a spray of flowers across the neckline. Another model had two long quills through the back of the crown and shooting across the shoulders. In this way they don't get in the way of the wearer or anyone else.

As for the front view, stylists are concentrating on off-the-face, hair revealing hats. Trimmings show a tendency to drape down one or both sides leaving the lines of the crown and brim distinct and sharp—a complete swing away from the heavily ornamented crowns and brims of last year.

Palestine Decisions Now Apparent Says British Official

Cabinet Agrees Peace With Germany is More Important

By GLENN WILLIAMS

London, Jan. 9—(AP)—A British cabinet session on Palestine was cancelled today and sources close to Prime Minister Attlee said decisions already taken about the Holy Land would "gradually become apparent."

The cabinet has had international issues, including Palestine, under review for two weeks and was reported to have decided that peace with Germany was the most important problem to be faced.

The cabinet was reported to have granted Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham, high commissioner for Palestine, wider powers to deal with violence but there was no indication of any decision on partition or appeal to the United Nations for settlement.

There was speculation in government circles that rumors of a 60-day suspension of violence by underground groups in Palestine had allowed Mr. Attlee and his labor government colleagues to delay urgent decisions until after the Palestine conference which is to resume here Jan. 21.

Decide Against Martial Law

Government sources said the ministers already had decided against imposing martial law to stamp out violent tactics of some extreme Jewish underground organizations.

Nevertheless, these sources said Sir Alan already has been given wider authority to act in putting down violence.

Relative peace has been the rule in Palestine since the outburst of last Thursday night.

Irgun Zvai Leumi and the so-called Stern gang, the two most extreme underground groups, yesterday were reported to have declared a truce pending continued negotiations. But Jerusalem police last night received unconfirmed reports that a Jewish-Arab clash had occurred in the nearby town of Tubas in which an Arab was killed and another Arab and two Jews wounded.

Recommend Partition

Government sources in London said earlier that Bevin and Creech Jones would recommend a partition of Palestine to the cabinet, having decided the only hope of peace lay in the creation of separate Jewish and Arab states.

Under this solution Jerusalem, Haifa and possibly other territory in Palestine would be reserved as "neutral" areas under British trusteeship, a government informant said.

Two such partition plans already have been circulated. One, by Nahum Goldman, a prominent Zionist, would give the Jews about 60 per cent of Palestine. The other, by deputy prime minister Morrison, outlined a federalization scheme, dividing palestine into four districts under British tutelage.

The Goldman plan at one time was reported to have the backing of President Truman. Moshe Shertok, political head of the Jewish agency has stated world Jewry would not be satisfied with anything less than making all of Palestine a Jewish state.

Thirty Arrested

Jerusalem, Jan. 9 — (AP)—Police announced the arrest of 30 Jews from a communal settlement near Beisan before dawn today "as a result of last night's incident at the Arab town of Tubas," where two Arabs and three Jews were hurt in a clash.

There still were no complete details of the affair, but police flatly denied earlier reports that Jews had raided the town and also withdrew an earlier statement that one had been killed during a fight in which sticks, stones and knives were used as weapons.

In Jerusalem the opinion was that the clash resulted from a dispute over the ownership of land or some similar domestic issue. Beisan is north of Tubas, near the Jordan.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Jan. 9 (CP).—A slight disturbance over Southwestern Ontario this morning is causing some snow over this region. This will pass rapidly into New York State by noon. Otherwise the weather is fair and quite cold over the forecast regions. Quite warm air has moved over the Canadian Rockies for the Pacific. A storm centre at the boundary of this warm air and colder air to the north and east is moving rapidly southeastward and by Friday morning will be centred west of Lake Superior. The precipitation associated with this storm will move into the White River region and Southwestern Ontario early in the day and moderate snowfalls are expected.

Moscow newspapers continued to front-page his doings, which included lunch this noon at the French Embassy with Gen. Georges Catroux and Mme. Catroux and an entertainment tonight at the British Embassy, with Ambassador Sir Maurice Peterson and his lady as host and hostess.

Weather permitting, he expects to leave Moscow homeward bound Saturday.

Lewis Promises Support to Miners In Glace Bay Area

Glace Bay, N.S., Jan. 9. (CP)—John L. Lewis, International president of the United Mine Workers, has promised all-out assistance to District 26 in its wage contract negotiations with Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation.

This was announced here last night by Adam Scott, District secretary-treasurer, who said President Freeman Jenkins had been in telephonic communication with the International Secretary-Treasurer, William Kennedy, of Washington, D.C., yesterday.

Following breakdown of wage talks here, Jenkins wired Kennedy Tuesday asking him to seek a meeting with Federal authorities. This Kennedy was arranging and intending going to Ottawa for the expected conference.

District 26, which comprises the Maritime Provinces, has been asking a basic pay increase of $2.50 a day for its 13,000 miners.

Vancouver, Jan. 9 (CP).—Police yesterday placed a 14-year-old boy in juvenile detention home here after he had admitted he threatened to murder an eight-year-old girl at his home Tuesday. "I don't know why I did it," he told police.

UNITED BACKING SHOWN FOR U.S. FOREIGN POLICY

Growing Legislative Demand Heard For Marshall to Speak To Joint Session

By ALEX H. SINGLETON

Washington, Jan. 9 (AP)—The dominantly Republican Congress of the United States put the world on notice today that American foreign policy has the same united backing in peace as it had in war.

The chorus of Senate unanimity with which Gen. George C. Marshall won his sensationally swift confirmation as successor to Secretary of State James F. Byrnes demonstrated not only congressional confidence in his ability, but also solidified bi-partisan agreement on the necessity for an unbroken foreign-policy.

The support for Marshall, bridging party differences, apparently rested on two bases: (1) His record during and since the war, and (2) The conviction that he not only will pursue the "patient but firm" policies of Byrnes but also will carry on his predecessor's practice of working closely with Congress.

This was reflected in a growing legislative demand for Marshall to address a joint congressional session before he leaves for the March 10 meeting of the Foreign Ministers' Council in Moscow and the task of seeking Big-Four agreements on Germany and Austria.

Vandenberg and Connally

It raised, too, the likelihood that Marshall will seek to have Senators Vandenberg, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Connally, its ranking Democratic member, at his side for that meeting.

Both Vandenberg and Connally have indicated strong reluctance to abandon their legislative chores for future international conferences, but Marshall may prevail upon them to change their minds on the grounds that he will need their background.

It will be the problem of assimilating that background which may prove the most pressing for Marshall in the brief period between now and his scheduled huddle with the diplomatic chiefs of Britain, France and Russia.

But others, also of grave international import await his attention. Among them:

1. Methods for speeding Germany's economic recovery to make it self-supporting, and thus less of a burden on American taxpayers.

2. A review of this government's policy toward Argentina.

3. Action on strife-torn China's request of $500,000,000 credit from the export-import bank in the face of congressional demands for iron-clad assurances that any loan will be used for rehabilitation—not for civil war.

Infantile Paralysis Causes Boy's Death

Toronto, Jan. 9. (CP)— Infantile paralysis, on the wane in Toronto for several months, yesterday caused the death of six-year-old Tommy Halsall, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Halsall.

Dr. L. A. Pequegnat, Civic Health officer, said highest incidence of the disease here was in September and October but even then it did not reach epidemic proportions. He said total cases in 1946 were 121, compared with 759 in 1937, the last epidemic year.

CHAPLAIN ASSUMES DUTIES

Kingston, Jan. 9 (CP).—One of the first official chaplains appointed to a university in Canada, Rev. A. M. Laverty, has assumed his duties at Queen's University, officials said today. Rev. Laverty came here from United Church charge at Stirling. He served four years overseas as padre with the Royal Canadian artillery.

Father Who Sold Daughter to Pay Off Debt Arrested Along With Suitor

Rochefort, France, Jan. 9 — (Reuters) — Ginette Camille, an attractive 17-year-old French girl sold by her father to an admirer at the age of 14 for 20,000 francs ($160), doesn't want any part of being a "bartered bride."

Last week when M. Camille, a laborer, went to the civil court here and asked for authority to reinstate his daughter in the home of her purchaser, Gabriel Paille, an air official, he complained that Ginette had been recalcitrant, refusing to stay with her "owner."

The father told the court he had given his daughter to Paille in settlement of a debt and that he drew a deed of transfer on which he affixed stamps to make the transactions "legal."

But instead of receiving further power from the court, the father and 38-year-old suitor both were arrested.

Ginette, in an interview yesterday, said she was only 14 when "my father encouraged the union and threw me into Paille's arms."

"At first everything seemed all right and Paille told people that I was his niece. But life became unbearable and I tried to run away three times, but my father took me back each time.

"My father told me that if I broke the contract with Paille he would be sent to prison. I went back and Paille exhausted me with blows."

MARSHALL SUCCEEDS BYRNES

CALM WEATHER ALLOWS WIDENING OF OPENED ROADS

Bread and Butter Supplies Brought by Bus From Wiarton to Tobermory

(By The Canadian Press)

Skies were clear and temperatures dropped in most parts of Ontario and in the southern section of the province. The calm weather gave snowplow operators of the Highway Department a chance to get out their big wing plows and widen out roads opened earlier in the week by bulldozer-type snowplows.

Officials of the department expressed concern earlier lest high winds drift snow into the comparatively narrow troughs left by the initial plowing.

Residents of Tobermory at the tip of the Bruce Peninsula, freed Wednesday from 12 days of isolation imposed by storm-blocked roads, read their second batch of mail since Dec. 27 and awaited the arrival of two trucks carrying needed food supplies from Owen Sound, 70 miles south of here.

Mailman William Davis reached here at seven o'clock Wednesday night after snowplows of the Ontario Department of Highways completed the job of opening the road.

As clear, cold weather settled over the peninsula, word came that the trucks from Owen Sound probably would reach here tonight and would have no difficulty getting through. There was little wind to drift in the plowed roads.

Already the Tobermory bus had brought bread and butter from Wiarton, about 45 miles south of here.

Anxiety Over Clearance of Road

Storekeepers at the Bruce Peninsula of Cape Croker said they were "getting a little more than anxious" over prospects of opening the 18 miles of road between their community of 450 and Wiarton before Saturday. General traffic has been blocked since Dec. 26.

Stratford and district dug out from under a five-inch overnight snowfall. Snowplows worked all night and most of the main highways were reported in "fair shape." Several district roads were described as heavy but passable.

Owen Sound reported all provincial highways in its area open and the weather clear, cold and calm. Oshawa had blue skies and fleecy clouds.

The temperature in Belleville dipped to 14 below zero overnight but at 8 a.m. had risen to six below.

In Toronto the sun struggled to shine through a gray haze. The temperature had dropped overnight.

Kingston experienced its coldest night of the winter so far and appeared to be facing its coldest day of the season. The official overnight low was 18 degrees below zero, with 12 below at 9 a.m. and 10 below at 10 a.m.

Movie Houses Co-operate With Hydro Commission

Toronto, Jan. 9 — (CP) — Directors of the Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario today passed a resolution signifying the intention of all theatres to co-operate with the Hydro Electric Commission to conserve power.

The commission has requested the theatres within the area affected by the present shortage to reduce all lighting 50 per cent.

MINISTRY ORDERS TRUCK DRIVERS TO RESUME WORK

Most Food Shipments Throughout London Stopped for Past Five Days

London, Jan. 9 (CP). — The Labor Ministry today ordered 13,000 London transport workers, most of them truck drivers, to end a five-day work stoppage which has halted most food shipments.

A Labor Ministry directive declared:

"This is a strike against trade union advice and in some cases is a breach of special agreements designed to safeguard mails. As a consequence, the food supplies of London are being imperilled and mails are being delayed."

Up to last night meat deliveries in the city for the week amounted to only 800 tons compared with normal weekly deliveries of 4,000 tons. Shops were almost bare of vegetables, grocery stocks were dwindling and the city was gripped by a shortage of cigarets.

Accompanying the government's back to work order was a notice of an emergency meeting Monday of a wages board which will consider the strikers' demands for higher wages, improved working conditions and two weeks vacations with pay.

Food Ministry officials today were trying to find ways of avoiding an acute shortage of meat and other rations including bacon, butter and cheese.

Want Board Scrapped.

For two hours last night, Harold Clay, acting chief of the Transport Workers Union, addressed a strikers' meeting urging the men to return to work. But the men told him that the Road Haulage Central Wages Board—a statutory body—must be scrapped.

Clay replied: "The law cannot be amended in time to settle this issue."

After the meeting, Clay said the Wages Board would meet next Monday "regardless of strike action".

The workers seek a 44-hour week instead of the present 48, an eight-hour day with overtime by the day instead of under the current cumulative system, and a fortnight's holiday and sick pay.

Already the strike has delivery service paralyzed, preventing the movement of thousands of tons of goods.

The post office has had to establish emergency carrying services as 1,900 drivers employed by firms handling the Royal Mail have refused to work and deliveries have been four hours late in some parts of London. Food is piling up at the four great markets and railway depots while butchers hand out signs: "Sorry, no meat".

OUT SIX WEEKS

Galt, Jan. 9 — (CP) — Bert Giesbrecht, high-scoring forward from Pembroke, will be out of the Galt Red Wings' junior OHA line-up for at least six weeks, it was learned last night. Giesbrecht, who played against Toronto Marlboros Tuesday night, yesterday underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis.

SHORTAGE WILL BE FELT SHARPLY DURING WEEKEND

From Southern Ontario To Maritimes Beef Is in Very Short Supply

(By The Canadian Press)

The meat shortage likely will be felt sharply this weekend from Southern Ontario to the Maritimes.

While retailers, wholesalers, producers and packing house operators differed in explanation of the cause, housewives were scurrying to the corner butcher in the hope there might be a chop or steak left.

In Toronto, Montreal and Windsor many butcher shops were out of meat but the majority felt the situation would right itself within a couple of weeks. Others, more pessimistic, said it would take until the end of March before the supply would meet the demand.

It was charged by a Toronto butcher that packing houses were withholding meat stocks to raise the price.

Another butcher blamed the price ceiling for the scarcity and said: "If controls were removed, meat would find its own price level."

Others in the meat industry reminded retailers that the shortage is seasonal. True, only about one-third of the usual supply is available, they said, but it would straighten out within a few weeks.

Answers Assertion.

In answering an assertion that packing houses were withholding meat from the market until rationing was lifted one representative of a large packing house in Toronto said: "It makes no difference to us whether we sell on the ration or not. We sell meat because people need it, and our available supplies have been sold."

From the Prairies there were no reports of shortage. In Edmonton and Regina the butcher shops were amply stocked but stockyard officials said they had been forced to hold back shipments to the East. Vancouver hadn't heard of a shortage.

Says Sun Was Shining Directly in Her Eyes At Time of Accident

White Plains, N.Y., Jan. 9. (AP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said yesterday in an affidavit that when her car was involved in a collision with two other automobiles last August in Yonkers the 'afternoon sun was shining directly in my eye."

William F. Glasheen of the State Motor Vehicle Commission, who has authority to continue Mrs. Roosevelt's driver's licence in force, suspend or revoke it, reserved decision in the case. The decision will be filed in Albany.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who was not present at the hearing, recounted in the affidavit her long exprience driving cars and said:

"My vision has never bothered me in any way, either as to color or any other respect. . ."

The widow of the late President lost several teeth in the accident.

Winnipeg, Jan. 9 (CP).—Hospital authorities said last night the condition of 2½-year-old Elizabeth Yanoski of Winnipeg was unchanged but that her chances of recovery were favorable from injuries received Jan. 6 when she was caught beneath the wheels of a streetcar. The child had her left leg amputated and suffered severe injuries to her other leg.

Top Military Staff Men of Russia Accept Invitation to Visit Britain

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, Jan. 9 (AP). — Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery said last night that he had invited the chief of the Soviet general staff, Marshal A. M. Vasilevsky, and other Soviet military men to visit Great Britain this spring or early summer and that the invitation had been accepted.

The chief of Britain's Imperial general staff said that when he tendered the invitation, Marshal Vasilevsky said he would have to ask his government. He has asked his government, Lord Montgomery added, and "he has informed me that his government has given permission and he accepted with pleasure."

This was but another feature of the Field Marshal's visit to Russia which has really turned into a personal triumph. It is seldom that a foreign visitor has been received with such open-armed hospitality and with such apparent friendliness.

Lord Montgomery, confirming this, said he was delighted with his visit and the progress he has made.

Today Lord Montgomery was shown the new Stalin tank and was given a demonstration. He got inside it and was photographed by the Russians.

Talking to newspapermen at a cocktail party given by Maj.-Gen. A. H. Gatehouse, British military attache here, Field Marshal Montgomery referred to relations with the Americans and said: "We also are allies with the Soviet army."

The Field Marshal was a guest of honor last night at a dinner given by the American ambassador, Lt.-Gen. W. Bedell Smith.

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Jan. 9—(CP)— John J. Robinette, conducting the appeal at Osgoode Hall today of Mrs. Evelyn Dick against conviction of husband murder, said he intended to put forward the contention that John Dick was slain last March by his father-in-law, 65-year-old Donald MacLean.

His statement came about an hour after the appeal opened on behalf of the 26-year-old widow under sentence to be hanged Feb. 7 for the March 6 torso slaying of her husband.

"My suggestion will be that Donald MacLean killed John Dick and Mrs. Dick was only an accessory after the fact and that that was not put to the trial jury in any way," said Mr. Robinette.

This advance notice of the argument he would advance came after Mr. Robinette had been outlining the finding of exhibits in the case in the home of Donald MacLean, exhibits which included a .32 calibre revolver, fired not long previously and registered in Donald MacLean's name.

Explains Reason.

Mr. Justice R. E. Laidlaw said he found it difficult to see where the seizures of articles in MacLean's house "were evidence against Mrs. Dick." And then, in clear, steady voice the appeal lawyer explained why he was dealing with this particular evidence, brought out at Mrs. Dick's nine-day trial last October after which her father and her one-time friend stood trial for the murder but had their cases traversed to Jan. 20 when Mrs. Dick refused to testify for the Crown.

After that incident Mrs. Alexandra MacLean suggested her daughter was shielding someone.

Opening proceedings consisted of a review of the trial evidence by Mr. Robinette, outlining the story of John Dick's short married life with Evelyn, and the Crown's story of how he was slain last March 6 and his torso thrown on Hamilton Mountain, shorn by crude saw hacks of its head, legs and arms.

Perhaps 60 of them gained a seat and as many more were held in the corridors outside.

Only a handful of spectators found sitting space. They had been on hand an hour or more before the students were allowed in. One woman patiently knitted while awaiting the start of proceedings, opened by John J. Robinette, KC., who told Chief Justice R. S. Robertson, presiding over the five-judge court, that he was appearing on behalf of Mrs. Dick, whose husband's headless, limbless body was found on Hamilton Mountain last March 16.

Separate Branches

"My case will be in two separate branches, my lord," said Mr. Robinette.

He said one branch would be that "there were several cases of misdirection" during the nine-day trial of the comely young woman in Hamilton last October.

The second branch would concern "the seven statements made by the accused to police."

These, Mr. Robinette held, outlining his case, were "improperly admitted" as evidence at the trial of the appellant in Hamilton before Mr. Justice F. H. Barlow.

Reviewed Case

Mr. Robinette immediately launched into a review of the case, recounting how Evelyn Dick, living then with her mother, Mrs.

Butter Supplies Diverted to Canada By New Zealand

Auckland, New Zealand, Jan. 9. (CP Cable)—New Zealand is diverting butter supplies to Canada at Britain's request, it is learned here. The British government asked for the diversion to enable Canada to meet a temporary internal shortage. A London Press report gives 5,000 tons as the amount to be shipped.

Finance Minister Walter Nash, explaining the decision, said it was the joint policy of all Commonwealth governments to supply the United Kingdom with the maximum possible quantity of surplus foodstuffs.

Governor Plans To Appoint Bilbo If Senate Denies

Jackson, Miss., Jan. 9. (AP) — Governor Fielding L. Wright said last night he plans to appoint Theodore G. Bilbo, State Senator for an interim term if the United States Senate denies him his seat without a hearing or on the basis of charges growing out of his election campaign.

The Governor's comment came in the wake of a newspaper account of conversations he had with several Mississippi legislators concerning Bilbo, whom the Federal Senate declined to seat when it convened last week.

Bilbo, awaiting a call to go to a New Orleans hospital for an operation on his mouth, said he was "profoundly and inexpressibly grateful" for Governor Wright's decision.

"I think the Governor's decision is just recognition of the will of the great majority of the people of Mississippi," Bilbo said. "I feel honored".

He reaffirmed his intention to fight to the last for his Senate seat.

Liquor Advertising Ban Due to Expire On March 31st.

Ottawa, Jan. 9 (CP).—The Federal government's wartime ban on liquor advertising is due to expire when the Emergency Transitional Powers Act lapses March 31 this year but whether the government plans to put the control into statutory form is not known, officials said today.

The government took over control of liquor advertising, banning all but "institutional" advertisements, early in the war when it assumed control of other aspects of liquor restriction, such as the determination of proof strength, most of these controls since have been returned to the provinces.

It was assumed that if the Dominion decided to relinquish the advertising control the provinces would reinstate their pre-war restrictions.

A search revealed that no one was in the basement but even as police investigated the noises were repeated. It was the sound of ice cracking in the Moira River nearby.

Dr. S. Shipsides, Fred A. Scott, Fined $1,500 Each

(By Staff Reporter)

Picton, Jan. 9—Fred A. Scott, cattle drover from this city and Dr. Stanley H. Shipsides, veterinarian of Wellington—were each fined $1,500 or in default six months in jail, when they were sentenced by Judge W. S. Lane in Picton court today. They were charged with conspiracy and forgery in connection with the export of cattle to the United States. It was established that cattle, purchased for export, had their ear tags substituted and many of them had not passed the T.B. and blood test as authorized by the Department of Agriculture before they were shipped. It was also established false certificates had been signed.

Escaped Convict Admits Being In P.E. Vicinity

Final quietus to the persistent rumors that the man, who gave police and posses of farmers an exciting three-day manhunt in the Huff's Island marshes and later in the vicinity of Wellington some time ago when the hue and cry was out for Henry LaFortune, escaped convict, was not the self-freed prisoner, was given today in a story coming out of Kingston.

LaFortune who was captured by Provincial Police while working near his home at North Bay after months of freedom, is said to have related that he was in the Huff's Island marshes at the time of the search.

He is reported to have said that at times he stood neck-deep in swamp water while searchers passed close by. He saw armed farmers, but not a policeman, he claims. This is due to the fact that the first day search was conducted in a pouring rain and after the first soaking police removed their uniforms and worked in slickers and old clothing.

He was later in the Wellington vicinity and travelled nearly 400 miles by foot before he reached the north country where he was born and raised.

Housewives Will Need to Shop For Meat to Get Sufficient Quantity

There will in all probability, be enough meat to partially supply city consumers for the rest of the week, but according to a city survey this morning, they will have to shop for it.

The situation here sums up to the fact that butchers who slaughter their own cattle will have sufficient, but not lots, of beef while chain stores have absolutely nothing in the line of fresh meats, nor, as one manager puts it, "is there any prospect of getting any this week.

Toronto packers are shipping little if nothing to out-of-town clients in the butcher business.

One down-town butcher stated that he will have beef, pork and lamb due to the fact that he slaughters his own animals. Two others stated that they will have limited supplies, and this because they slaughter locally. Yet another stated he will have a "normal supply" because of storage stocks.

It was reported from butcher sources today that the price of bologna has increased four cents per pound and wieners from five to six cents. Other cooked meats are expected to increase in price.

COUNSEL

Donald MacLean, in the fall of 1945, knew John Dick for only two weeks prior to their marriage, Oct. 4, 1945. This, said Mr. Robinette, was according to the story told by Mrs. MacLean, who said John and Evelyn were quarrelling and finally separated on Feb. 7, 1946.

During the time Dick lived with his wife, the couple lived with Mrs. MacLean in a house on Hamilton's Carrick Avenue along with Mrs. Dick's young daughter, Heather.

Living away from them was Mrs. Dick's father, Donald MacLean, 68, who, with William Bohozuk, friend of Evelyn, is also charged with the slaying of the 40-year-old Hamilton street car driver.

Preliminary Narrative

All this information was brought out at the trial last October and Mr. Robinette, addressing the Chief Justice, and Mr. Justices W. T. Henderson, Frederick Hogg, John Aylesworth and R. E. R. Laidlaw, called it his "preliminary narrative."

He told of evidence at the trial that Raymond Castle, street railway superintendent, had overheard John Dick and the appellant's father quarrelling over money and other evidence that John Dick had, after separating from his wife, received a threatening telephone call from William Bohozuk.

Bohozuk and Mr. MacLean stood trial last October but their hearing was traversed to Jan. 20 when Mrs. Dick—sentenced to be hanged Jan. 7, a date later moved back to Feb. 7—refused to testify for the Crown.

The judges leaned forward listening intently, as Mr. Robinette reviewed the trial evidence in a steady, clear voice.

He moved on then to the evidence concerning last March 6, the last day John Dick was seen alive, the day the Crown, going by statements from Mrs. Dick, holds she drove a borrowed car to a lonely spot 15 miles from Hamilton where, sitting beside her in the car's front seat, John Dick was slain by Bohozuk sitting in the rear.

The lawyer dealt with evidence having to do with Mrs. Dick trying to get a large, borrowed car into the garage at the rear of her Carrick Ave. home on March 6, 1946.

Said Daughter Was Alone.

"Mrs. MacLean says her daughter was alone," said Mr. Robinette. Mrs. Dick, unable to get the car in the garage, gave up the attempt and drove away. Other witnesses differed only in that they did not speak of Mrs. Dick leaving the car to obtain the garage keys from the house. This was about 4 p.m.

Next evidence of that day was from garageman Bill Landeg who had recounted the return of his car, bearing bloodstains. That was about 8 p.m.

To account for the bloodstains, Mrs. Dick had left a note saying the blood on the car seat could be explained by the fact her daughter had hurt herself and had to be taken to hospital.

"There is evidence she was alone?" asked Chief Justice Robertson, referring to her return of the car.

"Yes," replied Mr. Robinette. "The child was at home."

"I would concede that was a fictional story," said the lawyer, with reference to the explanation of Mrs. Dick's note.

The next day, continued Mr. Robinette — still dealing with what he said was "circumstantial evidence," — Mr. Landeg had found in his car's back seat a blue, blood-stained sweater," subsequently identified as that of John Dick." The bloodstains were found to be type "O", the same as that of the murdered man.

On March 23, Pathologist Dr. W. J. Deadman, examining the car, found a tie bearing "O" type blood.

"He made a most minute examination of the car, seemingly," said Mr. Robinette. He found other bloodstains of "O" type.

No Evidence of Bullet

"But I would draw to your Lordships' attention that Dr. Deadman found no evidence of a bullet in the car—no nicks, no sign of one having been fired," said the lawyer.

Going back then to the movements of Mrs. Dick on March 6, he said trial evidence from Mrs. MacLean was that her daughter returned home "about 8.30" in the evening and "she seemed annoyed."

On March 8, according to Mrs. MacLean's testimony, she had taken Mrs. Dick's daughter Heather for a walk and thought to see John Dick driving his tram. She didn't and on returning home she mentioned the incident to Evelyn and was told "John Dick is dead, and you keep your mouth shut."

"The next date is March 13," said Mr. Robinette. "On that date Mrs. MacLean says her daughter Evelyn took some ashes from her basement and placed them on the surface of the lane in front of her garage."

The appeal lawyer merely told of the evidence as he reviewed the case for their Lordships and made no comment as he moved on to the finding of a torso—severed from the missing arms, legs and head apparently by a saw—on Hamilton Mountain March 16, its identification by John Dick's brother-in-law as that of Mrs. Dick's husband and its subsequent examination by Dr. Deadman who noted bullet holes for entry and exit in the right chest and back.

Shoes Belonged to Dick

"Shoes found in the basement of Donald MacLean were later identified as those of John Dick," said Mr. Robinette, rapidly building to completion the Crown's series of pieces of circumstantial evidence adduced at the trial.

"Detective John Freeborn who found the shoes also saw in the basement an axe, a saw and a butcher knife but did not take possession of them after examining them for bloodstains," said Mr. Robinette. "He found none."

Also recovered was a .32 calibre revolver.

"Most significant of all when Detective (Carl) Farrow examined the basement he found the course of two bullets in the basement," said Mr. Robinette.

"It is difficult to find how this evidence is evidence against Mrs. Dick," injected Mr. Justice Laidlaw.

Mr. Robinette said it would fit into his argument

PICTON

Building By-laws Will be Amended By Town Council

Picton, Jan. 9—Featuring the inaugural meeting of town council, Tuesday night was the decision to amend building by-laws passed last year. These have held up local enterprises and in one case resulted in an injunction taken out by the town to restrict one builder.

A permit to erect a $20,000 machine shop, and apartments for use of employees, has not been granted due to the fact that the building inspector, L. C. Ward has refused to endorse it. The by-law states council cannot grant a permit without his approval. When the by-law is amended, the permit will be granted.

Asked to Arbitrate

Walter Boyer, against whom an injunction was secured, again requested a permit to build an addition to his lunch room. Council was advised by Solicitor F. L. Ward that the town might be liable for damages if a permit is now granted. The town solicitor and Boyer's solicitor (the Mayor) were asked to arbitrate the matter.

W. A. Crawford, tax collector and assessor, requested an increase in salary from $600 to $1,000 year, stating that the office is now a full-time one and the duties have increased.

Councillor Oscar Grimmon objected, stating that a war veteran should have the job. He moved an amendment, which gives Mr. Crawford an opportunity to accept the position at $800 a year. If he does not do so, applicants will be advertised for. In the vote on this amendment, four councillors were for and four against. Mayor L. Nethery cast the deciding vote in favor of the amendment.

Veteran Given Position

A war veteran, Jack Cole was named street foreman at a $35-a-week salary. He succeeds Robert Thompson who was one of seven applicants for the position.

Other appointments included Judge W. S. Lane, member library board; Dr. W. B. Lane, P.C.V.I. Trustee; Thomas Wilkinson, parks caretaker; Chief of Police B. Biddle, weed inspector, sanitary inspector, Bread Sales Act; William Skitteral, street cleaner.

Standing Committees

Members of standing committees are: finance and printing, R. Attersley, C. McGibbon, F. Dunning, R. Cockburn; town property and streets, J. C. Cooper, William Henley, O. Grimmon, Frank Dunning; central relief, Nesbitt McKibbon, C. McGibbon, R. Attersley, W. Henley; rest room, J. C. Cooper, R. Cockburn; recreation centre, Mayor L. Nethery; charity commissioner, the Mayor.

A permit was granted Albert R. Hare to erect an auditorium, costing $6,500, on Ontario Street. This will be used for dances and other purposes.

Council agreed to assist with erection of an open air rink on the collegiate grounds.

Named to the court of revision were Russell Attersley, Charles McGibbon, William Henley, Frank Dunning.

Mayor Nethery

In his address, Mayor Lance Nethery pointed out that this year council is faced with carrying out the sewerage installation contract, providing housing, securing industry, amending by-laws and the recreation centre. He urged council members to give their best for the common good. He welcomed new and old members to council and expressed his own pleasure at being Mayor and returning to council after seven years' absence, in the army.

Ex. Mayor N. McKibbon welcomed the Mayor and also the three war veterans who are members.

Peasant Party To be Opposition In Polish Election

By LARRY ALLEN

Warsaw, Jan. 9 (AP)—Voters in most of Poland were promised a choice between their Communist - dominated government and an outspoken opposition today through the Polish Peasant Party's decision to contest the Jan. 19 election in 42 of the 52 electoral districts.

Vice-Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, head of the Peasant Party, and his executive committee announced last night after an eight-hour session that the party would campaign in those districts in which the government had accepted its candidate lists.

The party, which had threatened to boycott the election throughout Poland on the grounds of irregularities and intimidation, will urge its followers to stay away from the polls only in the 10 districts in which the government denied its candidates the right to file, Mikolajczyk said. This means more than 2,500,000 voters will be left without a choice.

Some observers had said a countrywide boycott by the Peasant Party might have impelled the nation toward civil war. The government has accused Mikolajczyk's party of tieups with subversive underground armies.

A government spokesman declared yesterday that Peasant-Party candidate lists had been rejected in 10 districts under an election-law provision that any person accused of underground activities might be denied the right to vote or run for office. He said the districts were underground hotbeds.

BARRACKS HANDED OVER

Alexandria, Jan. 9—(Reuters)—The wartime British naval barracks here — Ras El Tin Barracks — was officially handed over yesterday to the Egyptian naval and military authorities. The British Admiralty last Nov. 27 announced that the Royal Navy would withdraw from the Alexandria base and that warships hitherto based on Alexandria have been re-based on Malta.

DESTROYED DOCUMENTS

Tokyo, Jan. 9 — (AP) — The Japanese destroyed secret documents up until the day before the first American forces landed in Japan, despite General MacArthur's orders to preserve all records, the prosecution told the international war crimes tribunal today.

While the original order from the war ministry has not been found, a complete file of secret telegrams was recovered in the office of the Kagoshima Kempeitai (thought police).

The record showed that the Japanese army began burning "all confidential documents" Aug. 14, 1943, Tokyo time, one day before Emperor Hirohito accepted the Potsdam surrender terms.

Man-Made Meteors

(New York Times)

It has been estimated that a billion meteors may enter the earth's atmosphere every day. Nearly all are no bigger than grains of sand. They burn up as they rub against the air and glow with an intense white light. Why this peculiar light? The materials of which meteors are composed give no answer. And why should meteor trails last even a second or two? Particles torn from the main body ought to cool off or burn up almost instantly. Physicists have long been puzzled by these anomalies. It may be that more than friction with the earth's atmosphere is involved—perhaps electrical phenomena. The few meteoric spectra that have been photographed resemble those of a gas rather than those of a glowing solid.

Knowing all this, the ingenious Dr. F. W. Zwicky of the California Institute of Technology saw possibilities in the V-2 rocket, now the subject of experiment at the proving grounds of New Mexico. Why not fill the nose of a high-powered rocket with metal slugs of the proper shape and touch off the high explosive in the charge at an altitude of forty, fifty, sixty or a hundred miles? The slugs ought ot fly out at various speeds, with interesting results. Some would become infinitesimal planets or satellites to revolve forever around the earth or sun respectively, and others would plunge into our atmosphere and glow just like meteors. Dr. Zwicky even suggested pelting the moon with artificial meteors, if there were any sense in doing so.

This proposal is so promising that it has been carried out in New Mexico, with results that are not yet known. What appeals to the astronomers is the element of control. The speed, the composition of the artificial meteors, their size—all the essentials can be controlled. This means much. Hitherto meteors have been studied entirely by the unaided eye because of the uncertainty of their appearance and the shortness of their trails. Now it should be possible to direct a spectrographic camera at the area where the rocket is exploded and the meteors begin their flight. The result ought to be more information about meteors and more about the composition of the earth's upper atmosphere, particularly in those regions where the radio waves are reflected as if by some colossal mirror.

Prinz Eugen Sinks Six Months After Bikini Bombing

By DON WHITEHEAD

Kwajalein, Jan. 9. (AP)—Disclosure was made by a naval officer today that the 10,000-ton Prinz Eugen, once proud cruiser of Adolf Hitler's Navy, sank nearly six months after the Bikini atom bomb tests—suggesting that the bomb is both slow and sudden death to big warships.

Apparently the cruiser was the fourth major victim of the second test of July 25. Other capital ships sunk by the underwater bomb were the 29,000-ton battleship Arkansas, which went down almost instantly; the 33,000-ton carrier Saratoga which sank seven hours after the blast, and the 32,700-ton Japanese battleship Nagato which succumbed five days later.

The naval officer, who requested anonymity, said the Eugen, which helped sink the British battle-cruiser Hood during the war, went down in Kwajalein lagoon Dec. 16 despite frantic efforts to save her.

This is the naval officer's story:

The cruiser was brought to Kwajalein shortly after the "cross-roads" experiments—she was used in both tests— and anchored with other surviving target ships, most of them too radio-active for crews to go aboard.

The Eugen was at anchor with the battleships Nevada, New York, Independence and Pennsylvania when she began settling by the stern and listing to port.

Tugs were rushed to her side. They towed her to beach, but at 10 a.m., on the morning of Dec. 16 the sleek fighting ship, scarcely marked above the water line, capsized. The bow plunged to the bottom, leaving the stern sticking out of the water. Although damaged at the stern, she sank bow first because of the beaching operations.

"It was startling to every one," the officer said, "because the ship appeared in such good condition."

It is believed that the underwater explosion of July 25 tore loose her stern plates.

Mink for Finland For Breeding Purposes

Fort William, Jan. 9 —(CP)— Mutation mink from Thunder Bay district ranches will be shipped to Finland, Norman W. Shields, an official of the Northwestern Ontario Fur Breeders Association announced yesterday.

He told the Canadian lakehead exhibition that the animals will cross the Atlantic for breeding purposes and that $3,500 would be spent on the experiment.

Decision to tap the Thunder Bay source followed a recent visit to Minnesota and northwestern Ontario ranches by Laur Nilla, Finnish fur representative, he said.

8,000 TELEPHONES OUT OF ORDER

Toronto, Jan. 9 —(CP)— The Bell Telephone Company today announced that 8,000 telephones were out of order in the Windsor and Niagara areas with 1,600 poles down as a result of last week's ice storm and gales.

A weather disturbance today in the Smithville area near Hamilton cut off the few lines still operating after the big ice storm.

A telephone company spokesman said there were minimum delays of eight hours for Toronto to Windsor calls.

Albuquerque, N. M., Jan. 9 — (AP) — Giles L. Mathews, income tax field deputy, says an Indian sought help in filling out his income tax blank.

"You'll have to tell me."

"Ugh."

"Why, you may even have a refund coming."

Montgomery in Russia

Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery is now on a visit to Russia and has occupied a prominent place in the Russian newspapers. He has been addressing the Russian military leaders giving views of the role of assault troops in modern war and emphasizing the "human education" in the direction of a fighting army.

Russians, whose armies played a great part in World War II, are naturally deeply interested in the visit of the renowned British leader and in his military views The prominence of the British commander, now Chief of the British Imperial Staff, gives point to the information which Marshal Vasilevsky gave Lord Montgomery that a great part of the recent book of the Britisher on the European War has been translated into Russian for distribution among officers and student soldiers of the Soviet Union.

This Season

Annually at this time Week of Prayer services are held by church congregations. The time is apt because a new year has begun but more so because a new age which will likely influence man's future very greatly has come.

During these last months the world's attention has been focussed upon efforts of the nations' leaders to make the world safe for peace and human brotherhood, and thoughts of all peoples, nations long in the van of progress and other nations which have come forward to prominence in the past few centuries and generations are thinking deeply. It is one of the great aims of all time and if achieved will usher in one of the greatest periods of human progress —in a world assured of harmony and protected against war and discord. The task is worthy of the service of every man and woman, every nation and of all world organizations, of the prayers of the churches and the people so that it may come, making this earth a place of still greater blessing to its inhabitant man, a place of peace for all the coming generations.

These times are heavy with opportunity and no greater task can be undertaken than to help by deed and prayer this great ideal of which man has for ages dreamed.

Mankind has now the chance to assure maintenance of harmony and peace by true brotherhood. He sees in the new revelation of nature's powers the need that there must never again be strife among nations. For the first time in history man has faced the decision with fullest understanding, for never has the maintenance of peace and harmony meant everything to him as it does today. This revelation that man possesses greater power if rightly used than he ever expected to control offers also the possibility of developments and discoveries that will still more and more transform this earth as the home of man to still greater appeal for earth's dwellers. There may be greater powers of nature waiting to be unfolded and waiting to help man, to ease his burdens and increase the sense of brotherhood on earth. But with so great power must go great responsibility in man. That is the lesson of history, the record of life of nation and individual. Mankind has the opportunity. Before the stupendous facts man faces today the human mind must be humble and reverent. The need is universal brotherhood in a world in which peace and readiness to cooperate with others is assured. The church which has profound faith in power of prayer to guide men and nations and to reveal the ultimate facts of life can at this time do much to guide men and nations in the path they must follow. In a sense of awe, humility, faith and reverence mankind faces this great fact.

Constant Watch

Every Post Office coast station in Britain maintains a constant watch, day and night, for distress and emergency calls from ships at sea. On receipt of such a call all commercial working is suspended. Information received from the ship regarding the nature of her distress, and the kind of assistance required, is passed immediately to the appropriate authorities who take whatever action is necessary. In addition, the coast station takes a radio bearing on the ship in distress, and re-broadcasts on full power all the information received, so that in the case of a ship too far away for help to come from the land, other ships in the vicinity may proceed to her assistance.

Spare Snowy Owl

One of the most beautiful of all Canadian owls is the big Snowy Owl, which periodically invades agricultural Canada from its Arctic breeding-grounds, says the Royal Ontario Museum News.

In summer, these owls subsist largely on Lemmings, small Arctic rodents. The Lemmings fluctuate in numbers from year to year and seem to be cyclic, reaching population "peaks" about every fourth winter.

With the "crash" of the Lemmings the Snowy Owls desert their Arctic home and migrate down into southern Canada and the northern United States, spending the winter in the marshes, along the shores, and in the farming country.

During some flights, particularly last winter, large numbers of these big predators spread themselves over the settled parts of Canada and the Northern United States. Many were shot by thoughtless persons, forgetting, or not knowing that an examination of their food in Southern Ontario, made at the Royal Ontario Museum last winter, revealed it to be 98% rodents—rats and mice, mostly—among the worst enemies with which the farmer has to contend. Although powerful enough to carry off poultry and ducks, the Snowy Owls seldom exhibit the necessary inclination or agility to go after that type of food.

A flight of minor proportions (compared with the heavy influx last year) has again reached southern Canada, and farmers and sportsmen would do themselves a favor by allowing the Snowy Owls to spend the winter with us unmolested, for they constitute one of the best checks we have on the undue increase of the hated "field mouse."

Snowball Peril

Snowballing has cost a Windsor boy his eye. The missile in this case actually was a piece of ice, but it is often difficult to distinguish between the two. The mishap should draw attention anew to the danger of promiscuous throwing of such objects.

Children, of course, will always throw snowballs, but the lesson should be drilled into them that they can be dangerous weapons. Let them confine their marksmanship to inanimate objects, and in this they can have quite as much fun, with much less risk, than in hurling them at their playmates or at passing pedestrians, says Windsor Star.

Fine Spirit at Church Suppers

Few things are better than a good church supper. We praise the women of the churches of the Tillsonburg trading area for the splendid suppers they serve. We say without fear of contradiction that there are no better cooks anywhere. And we do not know of anything that makes for a better community spirit than the suppers served by the women of the churches. No matter what church one attends, all meet as good friends at the church suppers, says Tillsonburg News.

A new kind of dairy cow is being developed in the fertile Matanuska Valley of Alaska, The Family Herald and Weekly Star reports. The new breed is the result of cross-breeding between the Guernsey and the Asiatic yak. The results promise a rugged, productive dairy cow that can withstand the rigors of the climate. Some of the new breed are now producing an average of 800 pounds testing five percent butter fat.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST
(Copyright, 1946, Edgar A. Guest)

BABY WELCOME

I saw them in the corridor,
  Their eyes a-shine with joy,
Their hearts in celebration for
  Another little boy,
But scarcely had they rushed away,
  The heads of all a-whirl,
Before some others rushed to say:
  "We have a little girl!"

The faces, anxious long with care,
  Were radiant with smiles.
On joyous feet they raced the bare
  And white enamelled aisles.
Some hastened to the telephone,
  To spread the news afar,
And prove, what nurses long have known
  How welcome babies are.

I think the Lord above must smile,
  When looking down on earth,
To see us in that little while
  Rejoicing over birth.
So glad a child has come to bless
  Our lives and home are we,
Perhaps for all our selfishness
  Forgiven we may be.

Last of Quads Dies in Wales

Bridgend, Wales, Jan. 9. (CP)—The last of four babies born prematurely Tuesday to Mrs. Peggy Thomas died last night in spite of all medical science could do to save her.

Expecting only one infant, Mrs. Thomas walked through the snow from the ambulance into Mid-Glamorgan hospital where she was attended by two 23-year-old nurses, Nora and Nesta Thomas, in the absence of physicians.

Two boys and two girls were born—each weighing only about two pounds. Doctors gave them only a slight chance of survival and rushed them to the incubator.

Oxygen was given them. Glucose and water was fed to them through pipettes, but the boys and one of the girls died later in the day.

Twice before Mrs. Thomas, who is "Merch Fach" (Tiny Woman) to her Welsh neighbors, has been bereaved of her children. One died in infancy and a daughter died three years ago in a traffic accident. Mr. Thomas is a house painter. They have three living children.

Recalling "Cold Summer" of 1816

(Stratford Beacon-Herald)

A few days ago, under the heading "Summerless Year," this newspaper printed the following brief news paragraph: "In the United States, the year 1816 is popularly known as the year without a Summer, because there were frosts and snow in every month in northern states."

Reading the item, S. N. Bean, 276 Huron Street was stirred to write an appreciated letter to this newspaper, giving some highly interested facts about conditions much nearer home in summerless 1816 and succeeding years. The letter read:

The Summer of 1816 was what is called, or known as the "Cold Summer." There was frost every month, and in June and July there were seven heavy frosts. On the morning of the first of June the ground was frozen so hard that men and wagons could cross the mud puddles on the newly-formed ice without breaking through. On the 21st of June quite a lot of snow fell.

Provisions of all kinds were exceedinly scarce. Wheat was from two to three dollars a bushel. The only hay the farmers could secure was what grew wild in the marshes or beaver meadows. Food for both man and beast was at starvation prices.

The hardships which these early settlers had to endure this cold and inclement year are almost indescribable. Taxes were very low. A Mr. Brubacher had 2,000 acres and paid only $14 taxes thereon.

Land was cheap. In some of the older settlements of the Township of Waterloo it was selling at $4 to $5 per acre, while some three miles North of Waterloo, it could have been had for a dollar per acre.

At that time Berlin, now Kitchener was a dense, impassable swamp. Wolves, bears, foxes and other wild animals abounded, to prey.

The settlers had no want of venison or fish. For a small loaf of bread and a sixpenny crock of thick milk, the Indians would bring them the nicest quarter of venison, or a large basket well filled with the finest of speckled truot.

The Summer of 1817 was nearly as cold and unfruitful as the previous year had been. It was so chilly in the harvest time that the men wore their coats while reaping the grain. During haying and harvesting in the year 1825, people worked from sunrise to sunset for 37 1-2 cents per day. For threshing grain during the Winter months—days then being only 12 hours long—wages were 12 1-2 cents per day, and many men worked receiving only their board and wages. It may be mentioned here that theshing was at that time done by hand with the old-fashioned "flail."

Still No Proof That Animal Would Attack Man

(Port Arthur News-Chronicle)

A Pass Lake man tells an interesting story of his experience with a lynx which he killed after it had been caught in a trap He expressed the opinion that, if the animal had been free at the moment when he encountered it, it would have attacked him with probably serious results. In the circumstances this is probably so.

The story must be regarded as evidence against the statement this newspaper has made on different occasions that there is no animal in the Ontario woods that will attack a human being. That statement, however is accompanied by the qualification that it must not be molested. This lynx was molested. There is no evidence that it would not have taken flight had it come face to face with a man under normal conditions.

The nearest thing this newspaper ever heard of by way of an attack on a man by a lynx was a story of a man who had been fishing in a creek on the Sibley peninsula. His story was that a lynx jumped at him from a tree but that it missed and fell into the stream and then ran away. Some years ago a young girl going to school in another part of the district told that lynx had jumped at her from a tree. She ran and the lynx ran and no damage was done.

Without doubting these stories they would still not be proof that a lynx would attack a human being. In the first place the natural ability of the animal is to jump where it wished would discount the possibility that, in missing these humans, it was actually trying to jump on them.

Julian Cross, who knows the Sibley peninsula area quite well has had many experiences with lynx. They have not been such as to impress him with the animal as a threat to human beings. He says he has often carried them off in bags after catching them in traps, "but you have to shove them in backwards. You can't go at them head first," he says. He also tells that on one occasion coming into the city he found lynx in a trap and, not having time to take it with him, put a dog collar on it and tied it to a tree. It was there when he went back.

However, the lynx is an animal one should not provoke into a fight. In battle it becomes a bundle of strength and ferocity that could do terrific damage to a man's arms or face. It has weapons that an unarmed man cannot match.

Incidentally, after the story of the 40 pound lynx and its display in the McNultys Ltd. window has been published in this newspaper, a nature student called the store officials and said the largest he had ever before heard of was 36 pounds.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

ADDING INSULT TO INJURY

Under the spell of the crude methods of grandfather's day—the antiseptic era—a great many people still believe it is good treatment to apply some "powerful" antiseptic or germicide or some "healing" salve to wound or burn by way of emergency or first aid or home treatment, whether the wound or burn is to have medical treatment or not.

Such first aid treatment may have been good enough when you and I were young, Maggie, but to use it today is generally worse than no treatment at all.

In fact if the ordinary minor wound bleeds freely for a bit and the bleeding stops the clot if left undisturbed is superior to any antiseptic, germicide or so-called "healing" application any one, even a doctor, can make. Then if the wound can be protected from contact with any object, surface clothing that is not sterile (free from germs), from touch by a finger or by other portion of the body and from access of flies or other insects, it will heal best if left exposed to the air.

That, however, is pretty difficult to carry out, and so the next best treatment for minor wounds, if immediate medical car is not available, is immediate application of Mild Tincture of Iodine, not by brush, swab or touch but by pouring enough on, ito or over the wound to cover the entire raw surface. This smarts for a moment, but it is in my judgment, the best first aid disinfection for any wound.

Let the iodine dry in the air, taking care than nothing especially not an inquisitive finger, an implement or bit of dressing come in contact with the wound. When it has dried either seal the wound with a coat or two of flexible collodion, or cover it with a pad of sterile gauze held securely in place with adhesive plaster strips or a bandage, or if the wound is small cover it with a plain strip of adhesive plaster—the only purpose of any covering or dressing being to protect the wound from accidental infection.

If you harbor any quaint belief that this or that salve, balm, liquid or other substance applied to wound or burn hastens the healing or prevents scar or has any effect except adding insult to injury, you had better dismsis the notion from your mind. I am not forgetting the sulfa drugs, penicillin or other new medicines—these have no place in first aid or domestic medicine.

Mild Tincture of Iodine contains about 2 per cent of pure elemental iodine and about 2 1-2 per cent of sodium iodine—whereas the old familiar Tincture of Iodine contains about 7 per cent of elemental iodine and about 5 per cent of potassium iodide. Mild Tincture of Iodine is the iodine everybody should keep in the house for first aid disinfection of minor wounds—it was introduced to the Pharmocopoeia twenty years ago for this express purpose. When you buy it, see that it is labeled mild tincture of iodine, not just Tincture of Iodine, and pay no attention to the percentage of alcohol in it or to the "poison" label on the vial—that is there, not because iodine is poisonous but because it enables the druggists to prevent the grocers or other conveniently located merchants from supply it to the public. You know, there are tricks in all trades but of course.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

All at Sixes and Sevens

In the supplement to the everyday diet suggested in your very interesting booklet there are three vitamins. I counted 'em over two or three times, feeling there should be seven in all. Somehow I feel there should be seven ingredients to fit in with the seven keys.

(A.F.S.)

Answer—Not just to avoid being at sixes and sevens but with the purpose of making the supplement suitable for the majority of people, I decided to omit iron —which, I believe, only a minority of children, youths and adults fail to get in even the ordinary refined diet of today. Readers who would like to know which vitamins and minerals are required to supplement the ordinary diet of Americans will find practical information in the booklet "The Seven Keys to Vite"—available on written request if you inclose twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

Popular Stupidity

I'd like to read your pamphlet "It is Stupid to Suffer from Piles." I suppose I must be stupid, but I don't see why one's I.Q. should have any bearing on the question. (J.K.)

Answer—When you have read the pamphlet you will know more than you think you know now. For a copy send a stamped envelope bearing your address. No clipping, please.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What makes singing sand sing?

"Singing sand" is the name given to certain sand and gravel that emits peculiar sounds when shaken, stirred, walked upon, driven over or played upon by the wind.

Geologists differ as to the cause of "musical sands." Strictly speaking, the sound is not musical. It is better described as something between a "crunch" and a "squeak," similar in some respects to the sound produced by snow when trodden upon or driven over in cold weather. But it has, as a rule, a fairly definite pitch and a tone relatively pure, and therefore, while it is not a musical note, it is more than a mere noise.

Such sand was known to the ancients and is mentioned in the works of many early writers. A hundred or more localities, 25 or more of them in North America, where the phenomenon has been noted are described or listed in geological literature.

Singing sand is found chiefly on beaches where it is usually confined to the dry and relatively firm sand above the ordinary water level but moistened by the waves during storms or high tides. The singing sands along the beach near Manchester, Massachusettes, lie between the limits of high and low tide and extend for a fifth of a mile. Beach sand that is continuously moist, as well as the loose dry sand heaped by the wind beyond the reach of the waves, generally does not "sing."

But the phenomenon seems to have no relation to the composition of the water, for singing sands occur on the shores of the ocean, inland salt seas and of fresh lakes. Occasionally musical sand is found in dunes and in deserts far from any body of water, where all the sand is perpetually dry and constantly moved about by the wind. The singing sands north of Alamosa, Colorado, are in the largest body of shifting sand in the world. Other notable musical sands are the "crying sands" of the Kalahari Desert in South Africa, the "barking sands" of Kauai in the Hawaiian Islands, the "drumming sands" of Reg Ruwan in Afghanistan and the "fluting sands" of Jebel Negus on the Sinai peninsula.

The "music" produced by the singing sand on Sinai, described as neither metallic nor vibratory, has its greatest intensity on windy, hot, summer days. Singing sand may occur in comparatively small patches in the midst of ordinary sand. It generally does not "sing" at all seasons and does not always emit the same sounds.

One theory is that the sound is produced by friction between the angular particles, but there is no evidence that the shape of the grains is responsible for the phenomenon. Some musical sand consists largely of sharp, angular grains, with few smoothly rounded particles, while some consists almost wholly of even, smoothly rounded and well polished grains. Some specimens retain their musical property after being kept in cans, bottles or sacks for years, whereas others completely lose it.

One investigator found that nearly all samples, when shaken or rubbed together for a considerable time, gradually lost their musical property until it finally disappeared completely. Another investigator suggested that the grains of silica may pick up sound waves, transmit them to one another and magnify their volume on the principle of the crystals in early radio sets.

HAS CANADIAN CERTIFICATE

Kingston, Jan. 9 — (CP)—Gordon Dark, 12, of Kingston, was born in Poona, India, of Canadian parents. He is proud of his nationality and now has a certificate to prove it. Under the Canadian Citizenship Act, Gordon is No. 1 certificate holder of the junior age group.

COMPLETES 34 YEARS

Sarnia, Jan. 9—(CP) — When engineer William Richards, Sarnia, stepped down from the cab of his C.N.R. freight engine the other night he put his oil-can and gloves away for the last time. He completed his last run and 34 years of railroading.

TORONTO POLICE KNOW

Toronto, Jan. 9 — (CP)—Toronto police, at least, know where "Kilroy" is. A short time after a 16-year-old boy left a gun, a quantity of ammunition and a note saying "Kilroy was here" on police headquarters doorstep, he was arrested for shopbreaking and breaking and entering.

HEIFER BRINGS TOP PRICE

Ridgetown, Jan. 9 — (CP)—It was apparently ladies' day at the Tri-county Shorthorn Breeders Club yesterday. At their cattle sale a demure heafer brought $350 — top price of the day.

Canada may be a cold country during winter, but with furs like these being shown at the Ontario Fur Breeders' Pelt Show at the King Edward this week, one would have little danger of being overly cool is the opinion of two English models who dropped in to examine some of the pelts. Jane Lynch (left) and Valerie Cox seem quite pleased with the results.

Life-Sized Dolls Are Training For Novice Nurse

Ottawa, Jan. 9 (CP)—For more than 25 years an unsung band of martyrs known as the "Chase Sisters" have borne the brunt for the sick and ailing in Canada.

In their roles of staunch protectors of the ill, they have been tipped on to their heads from wheelchairs, carried about on stretchers and have endured without complaint the discomfort of cold-packs and countless thousands of injections.

Between treatments the sisters lie on precisely-made beds in the demonstration rooms of practically every nurses' training school in Canada. They're the life-sized dolls, the "patients" of the student nurses.

Before they're permitted to give treatments to hospital patients, the novice nurses first must learn to administer those treatments to the dolls which are far more difficult to work with than human patients. However, as one nurse said: "There's one thing about Mary Chase—she doesn't talk back."

At a distance the dolls, traditionally called "Chase" after the name of the manufacturers, appear human, but on closer examination they resemble the "sleeping beauty doll" near to the heart of every little girl.

Embarrassing Accident

They have pink rubberized skin stuffed with felt which will receive either hypodermic or intermuscular injections.

Many are the accidents which befall the Chases during a probationer's early training period.

Embarrassing indeed was the incident which occurred while an instructress was demonstrating a gastric feeding by using a long rubber tube inserted through the mouth and into the metal stomach of one of the dolls.

Much to her surprise after she had pourd the water through the tube and had began drawing it back, twice as much returned. Her eyes bulged as she watched the gushing liquid pouring from the mysterious interior of Mary Chase.

"Quick another receptacle," she panted to the amazed group of spectators. After the liquid had dwindled to a trickle and then stopped, the instructress removed the tube with a deft hand and whirled on the group about her. With a menacing look in her eyes she cautioned: "The next person who gives Mary a tube feeding please remember to remove the solution when she is finished. We can't have her stomach rusting."

Gets War Medal 30 Years Later

Montreal, (CP) — A chance meeting at the cenotaph here last Remembrance Day has culminated in the presentation of the Belgian Croix de Guerre 30 years after the decoration was earned.

Pte. D. M. Morrison of Montreal Victoria Rifles Regiment won the decoration for displaying great personal courage in the heavy fighting during the last days of the First World War. The scene was Cherisy, in August, 1918, and the great Allied advance was pushing ahead.

Morrison was wounded in the action and did not rejoin his unit at the front. In the meantime, approval for the award had come through.

The medal was placed in a tin box by the acting adjutant, Lieut. W. McMurray, and it was not until he died in 1939 that the decoration came to light in a search of Lieut. McMurray's belongings.

Maj. J. N. Bales, wounded in the same battle as Morrison, took charge of the medal, and searched through the old battalion records, but failed to find a trace of Morrison's whereabouts.

Last Nov. 11, as Maj. Bales was lined up at the Cenotaph with other First World War veterans of the Victoria Rifles, a man approached him.

"Do you remember me, Major?" he asked.

"No I'm blessed if I do," Maj. Bales replied.

"I'm Morrison, if you can recall me," the veteran said.

Morrison was presented with the decoration at the next meeting of the Victoria Rifles' veterans' organization.

SUCCESSFUL APPEAL

Pontypridd, Wales — (CP)—A baker appealed successfully against an order requiring him to reinstate a former employee at a wage of £4 10s ($18) a week, a rate the umpire said was "far greater than that which the baker himself derived from the business."

PLAN FERTILIZER FACTORY

Sindri, India — (CP) — A large factory capable of an annual production of 300,000 tons of fertilizer from ammonia sulphate is to be fitted out at Sindri. Most of the necessary plant has been ordered from Britain at a value of nearly £2,500,000 ($10,000,000).

Satin Pouch for Evening

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THERE is something refreshing to this department about this handbag for evening, which without novelty or effort looks both elegant and timely. One can hang it from the wrist conveniently, not face precariously beneath one arm; it will settle down in the lap during the play, moreover, still without sliding dangerously off.

The fabric is black satin, the sole trim clover leaf matifs worked with jet beads which also make the tassel border that runs around the flat circular bag bottom. Self strings.

HOLLOWAY STREET UNITED W. M. S.

The January meeting of the W.M.S. of Holloway Street United Church was held in the Church school room, Tuesday afternoon, with the president in charge.

Devotional exercises were followed by reports of the various secretaries. Mrs. Burrows, the treasurer, reported an increase in personal givings during the year past. The Corresponding Sec., Mrs. Scott, stated that the Auxiliary had only one deceased member, Mrs. Townsend, during 1946. Encouraging reports were received from C.G.I.T., Mission Band and Baby Band, and regret was expressed that Mrs. Campbell did not feel she could carry on as C.G.I.T., leader for 1947. Donations for house furnishings, and a substantial sum of money to be used for the furnishing of a parsonage at Maynooth were placed in the care of Mrs. Hubbs.

Rev. C. A. Perkins conducted the Installation of 1947 officers. Mrs. Perkins moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. L. Reid, the retiring president, stressing the fact that Mrs. Reid had been an outstanding leader in W.M.S. work. Words of appreciation were expressed for the efficient service of Mrs. Moynes in her capacity of recording secretary. President for 1947, Mrs. Kilbank, and Mrs. Bell, recording secretary assumed their respective offices for the remainder of the program, with Mrs. Denton in charge of the Worship Service, using the subject, "Carrying the Spirit of Christmas into 1947". Hot Rolls Fresh From the Oven

Homemade rolls are always a treat very much appreciated by every member of the family. No danger of their going dry either because they certainly disappear too fast to even start drying up. Quite often this disappearing act discourages the homemaker who, although happy and proud to see her work so well received, thinks twice before baking again.

Some homemakers may not know that the dough for rolls can be kept several days, chilled or frozen, before being baked. This is a good way to have fresh rolls without going to the trouble of mixing the dough every time you want to make a batch. For good results it is very important that the mixture be kept in a cold place, covered, to prevent the yeast from working.

Rolls take many shapes and forms while still being called rolls. The home economists of the Consumer Section, of the Dominion Department of Agriculture explain how to change the shape of rolls.

Soft or Crusty Rolls.

Cut off small uniform pieces, fold sides under until top is smooth and dough is round. For high, soft rolls, place close together on baking sheet; for crusty place an inch apart; for very crusty rolls place in greased muffin tins.

Cloverleaf Rolls.

Shape very small pieces of dough into balls, brush with melted fat and place three balls in each muffin tin.

Finger Rolls.

Cut dough into uniform small pieces, shape into balls. With the palm of the hand roll until of desired length, taking care to make them smooth.

Crescents.

Roll dough ¼-inch thick and, using a sharp knife, cut in three-inch squares. Brush with melted fat; starting at one corner, roll to opposite corner, pressing points firmly down while rolling. Bring the two ends almost together to form the crescent.

Roll dough ½-inch thick, cut in narrow strips and roll with palm of hand into 8-inch strips. Tie in a loose knot.

Twists.

Prepare strips as for knots. Twist from ends in opposite directions, then bring ends together and pinch, to hold firmly.

Refrigerator Rolls.

1 cake compressed yeast, or
1 tablespoon quick rising dry yeast
1 cup lukewarm water
1 teaspoon sugar
½ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup hot mashed potatoes
1 cup scalded milk
2 eggs (well beaten)
6-7 cups sifted all-purpose flour.

Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water and add the teaspoon of sugar. Place shortening, sugar and salt in mixing bowl. Add mashed potatoes and cream well. Combine lukewarm milk, eggs and dissolved yeast. Add to first mixture. Add flour to make a stiff dough. Toss on floured board and knead well. Place in large greased bowl and let rise until double in bulk, if rolls are to be baked immediately. Knead slightly and shape into rolls as desired, cover and let rise until light. Bake in hot oven, 400 deg. F. for 15-20 minutes.

If this dough is to be stored in refrigerator before baking, after first kneading place in a greased container, brush surface with melted fat and cover tightly. About 1½ hours before baking time shape into rolls as desired. Let rise until light and bake as above.

Yeast doughs may be frozen and kept for a longer period than if stored in refrigerator cabinet. After first kneading, wrap dough in waxed paper and place in the freezing unit. Remove about four hours before baking time. Let rise until dough is light, this will take about three hours. Knead slightly, shape into rolls and let rise until light. Bake in a hot oven 400 deg. F. for 15-20 minutes.

SHORTAGE WILL

The old bugbear — black market — was whispered in shortage areas, but Ottawa Prices Board spokesmen said there was no evidence of black market activities at present. A Toronto butcher, however, when asked if he thought the black market was functioning, laughed and said it had "never stopped."

From Montreal eastward the pinch was closing in and the Maritimes reported little meat available. Halifax doesn't expect another shipment from Toronto or the West for two weeks.

Outlook Decidedly Lean.

Toronto, Jan. 9 (CP).—The Ontario meat outlook took a decidedly lean turn today with shops in Toronto and Western Ontario generally anticipating a "meatless weekend". In the Belleville area, however, inferior meat was in fair supply though choicer cuts were short.

Toronto stockyards reported cattle offerings for the current week were down approximately 1,500 head compared with a year ago, when 6,268 were put on sale. Trade today, last market of the current week, was steady with prices easing slightly. Small buyers were absent. They had been credited with forcing the pace Monday when prices were generally 25 cents a hundredweight higher.

Centres which reported meat as scarce as did Toronto included St. Catharines, Owen Sound and Oshawa.

Owen Sound dealers attributed shortages to farmers' unwillingness to travel on poor roads and their little need for ready cash. Oshawa reported that butchers who depend on the packers had no supplies whatever, whereas those who did their own killing had normal supplies but faced heavier demands because of scarcity in other shops.

Galt's outlook was for sausage, cooked meats and poultry. Windsor dealers received only 50 per cent of their requirements, a survey showed. Kitchener was reported as "faring no better than Toronto".

Everywhere opinion seemed to be that cattle are plentiful in the province but that for their own reasons farmers are not placing them on the market. The large packers are also held to be reluctant to buy at present prices, slightly higher than normal. Road conditions, too, receive their share of responsibility.

Farmers' livestock offerings in Toronto this week, compared with the same week last year:

Cattle — Approximately 4,700 head, down approximately 1,500.

Calves (veal) — Approximately 900 head, down approximately 531.

Hogs—Approximately 3,700, up approximately 1,378.

Sheep and lambs—Approximately 800, down approximately 1,800.

Supplies Are Landed At Isolated Villages

By ROSS TRUEMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Baie Comeau, Que., Jan. 9 (CP).—After landing supplies at three of 16 isolated North Shore villages the government icebreaker Ernest Lapointe and the freighter North Voyageur today prepared to make their way to a fourth, Seven Islands, about 110 miles down the St. Lawrence river from here.

After leaving Murray Bay, a well-known holiday resort 90 miles east of Quebec City, Tuesday, the vessels touched at Tadoussac, at the estuary of the Saguenay river, and at Escoumains, about 25 miles further, before landing supplies here.

The remaining 12 villages will be visited by the two vessels, if the icebreaker is successful in keeping a channel free of ice ahead of the Voyageur, which left Quebec with 500 tons of supplies plus 1,600 bags of Christmas mail.

The Voyageur, owned by the Clarke Steamship Company, was two weeks late on her twice-monthly supply trip to little towns and pulpwood loading ports along the river.

A call for the icebreaker was made in view of the heavy ice conditions which may prevent the 1,200-ton Voyageur from reaching some of the towns unassisted.

Most of the paper companies whose limits extend along the north shore and who employ many of the residents of the distressed villages, reported no word of anyone suffering as a result of the December storms which delayed the Voyageur's scheduled sailing.

BEGIN HEARING WIDOW'S APPEAL IN TORSO MURDER

Evelyn Dick Claims Too Much Dramatic Emphasis Placed On Some Evidence

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Jan. 9—(CP) — The appeal of Evelyn Dick against conviction of husband-murder opened in Osgoode Hall today two days after the once-talkative but now close-lipped young widow was originally sentenced to be hanged for the torso killing of John Dick in Hamilton.

Hearing of the appeal, based among other things on her claim that too much dramatic emphasis was placed on some evidence, was expected to last at least two days.

Before the justices of the appeal court, presided over by Chief Justice R. S. Robertson, were two volumes containing the mass of evidence taken from 39 witnesses during Mrs. Dick's nine-day trial in Hamilton last October.

Included were her five statements made to police, the fifth of which Special Crown Prosecutor T. J. Rigney and Crown Attorney Harvey McCullough of Hamilton delivered to the jury in question and answer fashion, Mr. Rigney taking the part of the accused and the Crown Attorney the part of the police.

Also brought to Osgoode Hall were two boxes containing 110 exhibits including pieces of bone which the Crown allege were the head, legs and arms missing from Dick's torso found on Hamilton Mountain last March 16, 10 days after he disappeared.

In her last statement Mrs. Dick said her husband died March 6 when her friend, William Bohozuk, shot him during a wild, drink-punctuated car ride to a lonely place 15 miles from Hamilton with the murdered man sitting in the front seat beside his estranged wife — who drove the car — and Bohozuk firing the shot from the back seat.

Her earlier statements differed from this but the last statement carried her claim that it was the truthful version. She gave it, police said, April 13 when she guided policemen in a car over the murder route.

During the trial the Crown produced evidence showing Dick resented his wife seeing Bohozuk and that the convicted woman's parents did not like the street car driver and had been angered when she married him 5 months before he was slain.

Up to the time of her trial it appeared Mrs Dick talked freely to police but she refused to say anything more at the Crown's request when Bohozuk and her father, William MacLean went on trial for the killing, and because her testimony was necessary the trial of the men was traversed to Jan. 20.

Her statements, admissible at her trial but inadmissible at the trial of her father and friend, said Bohozuk had done the killing with a gun provided by her father.

But pending her appeal, of which she gave notice Oct 16 as she was sentenced to be hanged Jan. 7, the 27-year-old widow and mother of a small girl, refused to say anything. Later her execution date was set back to Feb. 7th.

At last report she was reported eating well, as usual, and confident in her solitary confinement in jail in Hamilton that her appeal would result in a new trial.

Trenton Swamps Picton 12-0; Mt. View Ties Bloomfield 2-2 In Rugged "B" Double Bill

Large Crowd Enjoys Boisterous Games as Intermediate "B's" Open Season Here; Free-for-Alls and Private Feuds Feature Tilts

It may have not been hockey at its best, but it was the fan-pleasing, body-thumping, up-and-at-'em variety that sends the pew-holders home with a sense of an evening well spent that was handed out to a large crowd at the Hume Arena last night when the four teams of the district intermediate "B" group clashed in a scheduled double-header.

When the smoke of battle had cleared away and the wounded were licking their injuries and unruffling their dignity it was discovered that Trenton Flyers overwhelmed a doughty Picton Combine team 12-0 and a hard-fighting Mountain View Bomber squad in their first official appearance of the season came from behind a two-goal deficit to tie the starry Sky Chiefs from Bloomfield two-all.

There was practically everything in the hockey calendar dished up by all four squads. There was some neat hockey garnished plentifully at times with good old-fashioned shinny, fist fights, high sticks, trips, paper on the ice and on one occasion a customer heaved a bottle. The lads carried their sticks high and their elbows at right angles and the officials let things go with nothing of a serious nature happening although on a couple of occasions free-for-alls broke out much to the edification of the cash customers.

Trenton 12, Picton 0.

The Picton squad showing plainly a lack of practice and team work proved no match for the smooth working lines of the Trenton Flyers. The kids from the Garden County capital fought gamely but they could not cope with the inside blue-line tactics of the Flyer forward lines. They were weak in front of the nets while their shooting was erratic.

If there had been any issue of three stars for outstanding players the entire trio should go to a husky plucky kid named Jackson who stood between the goal posts for the Picton team.

Jackson, to be exact had 49 shots fired at him during the game not counting near misses, and although twelve of them got by him, the kid was a hero in the nets. Time after time he kicked the Flyer forwards off his goal-steps and he stopped enough rubber to insulate a battle-wagon. Even the opposition fans were forced to concede him a hand as he gallantly stepped into the breach and hurled back threat after threat as his defence crumpled in front of him.

Flyers rushed to the attack in the first moments of the game and their first string line of Sargent, Miller and Brackenbury rammed home the first marker in exactly 10 seconds. This line incidentally accounted for 15 scoring points with Sargent getting one goal and five assists, Miller four goals and two assists, and Brackenbury one goal and two assists. Martell, another starry Flyer forward, helped himself to three goals and two assists.

Scored Four In First.

Trenton scored four goals in the first period, two in the second and ran wild in the third with six more. The Picton team flashed to life for the first five minutes in the second chukker and hemmed the Flyers in their own territory, but they were weak in front of the nets and could not find the target. When they did, Bridgman, Trenton goalie staved off their attacks with more or less ease. He handled nine chances during the game with no miscues.

With the score 6-0 going into the third period the boys began to rough matters up a bit. Feeling started to creep into the game and sticks were carried high. There was plenty of husky bumping both legal and otherwise, but everybody appeared to be having a good time so nothing was done about it. Flyers' front lines were clicking nicely in this period and they swept in time after time to climax neat rushes with markers. They scored six goals in approximately twelve minutes and but for "Stonewall" Jackson might have doubled this number.

Mountain View Bombers 2 — Bloomfield Sky Chiefs 2

This hockey nag was a Dobbin of a different color. The Bombers and the Chiefs both let their respective hair down and the result was a slam-bang, let-'em-have-it bruising type of hockey that the hard-boiled fan delights in.

Both teams have solid heavy-hitting defencemen and the boys laid on the body and hickory with more or less abandon. It was a heavy checking game with both forward lines speeding and checking both ways and the blue-line buddies thumping all and sundry who came within reach of them.

The Chiefs had an edge in territorial play in the first period with their first line of McDonald, Drew and Demille driving in hard for the kill. They hemmed the Bombers in their own hangar for a few minutes then the play opened up and it was a nip and tuck-battle until the six minute mark when Lavender beat Wellstead from close in with a low hard shot.

Then came some rugged hockey and Drew of the Chiefs and Sherman, husky Flyer defenceman, staged a Louis-Conn exhibition and both drew the wrath of the officials. The period ended 1-0 for the Chiefs.

Feelings Stepped Up.

"Feelings were stepped up in the second heat and play ranged from rink-end to rink-end with both custodians turning away hard shots. Taking the puck at his blue line, R. Cork, Chief winger, with McDonald flanking him raced down right boards and with neat passing play finally took his mate's pass in front of the goal to put the Chiefs two up.

At this point Platford, Chiefs, and Oulette, Bombers, engaged in a few fisticuffs and gloves started to fly. Sticks were cast aside and the boys went into a Donnybrook huddle. Both sinners got the gate but no physical damage was done.

The third heat saw an increase in the feelings tempo and no less than six penalties handed out by referee Mike Finnegan as the boys tossed caution to the wind and played the man rather than the puck. Players bounced off one another like be-sweatered rubber balls and the crowd howled its glee.

Secure a Tie.

But a desperate Bomber team, taking plenty of chances, threw all their men up front in an effort to pull the game out of the fire. And at the five minute mark "Doc" Murray took Oulette's pass to dunk the rubber for the Bomber's first goal. Ten minutes later after play had see-sawed from end to end, Murray flipped a close-in pass to McNab and the veteran made no mistake. The goal came as a result of a prolonged Bomber attack and with both sides a man short. The final five minutes saw play range from one end to the other but both teams successfully held the opposing attacking divisions off.

The teams:

Mountain View — Goal, Welstead; defence, Nadeau, Elliott; centre, Hammond; wings, Ellsam, Cassoma; subs, Murray, McNab, Oulette, Dennis, Sherman, Marletta, Ebel.

Bloomfield — Goal, Parks; defence, Platford, Abbott; centre, K. McDonald; wings, Demille, Drew; subs, Mosley, R. Cork, Lavender, Vance, Pike, A. Cork.

Referee: Mike Finnegan, Picton; Linesman, Speedy St. Louis, Belleville.

Summary.

JR. HOOPSTERS DEFEAT MT. VIEW IN CLOSE GAME

Coach Jack Dickens' "Y" junior basketball squad opened the 1946-47 season in an auspicious manner this week defeating the strong Mountain View Intermediate hoopsters by a 46-35 score on the airmen's floor.

The game was an exhibition affair with the teams feeling each other out for the strenuous schedule that lies ahead. The "Y" kids inasmuch as they have no junior grouping will play with the big brothers in the intermediate group and keep themselves in trim for the junior playdowns later on.

The local kids proved to be a well balanced squad with the scoring points being evenly distributed among the squad. Mountain View, however, will improve greatly with more practice and teamwork and should be strong contenders for the playoffs.

The game was a fairly good exhibition of the popular indoor pastime with both teams showing to advantage at times. Juniors proved the more efficient when it came to shooting and scoring an early lead were never headed.

Spafford with ten points paced the Belleville kids while Murray and Crabbe led the airmen with eight each. The return tilt will be played at Mountain View next Tuesday evening. "Doc" Lyons is the coach of the Mountain View team.

The teams:—

Mountain View—Lyons 2, Murray 8, Waite 4, McGee 4, Crabbe 8, Reid 0, Stager 0, Miller 2, Hamilton 5, Allan 2. Total 35.

Belleville "Y" Juniors—Harry 7, Watkins 9, Spafford 10, Miller 7, Garrow 4, Button 4, Vaughan 6, McBurney 0. Total 46.

Sports Roundup

By ALAN HARVEY

New York, Jan. 9. (CP)—Wistfully, with more than a trace of nostalgia for bygone baseball scenes, Edward Grant Barrow retires to the solitude of his Rye, N.Y., estate, convinced at 78 that he is "too old" to contribute anything further to the game in which he was a presiding genius for 51 years. . . . The end really was in sight two years ago, when the Larry Macphail-Del Webb-Dan Topping syndicate acquired the New York Yankee Empire which Barrow did so much to build, but the man who guided the Bronx Bombers to 14 American League pennants and ten world championships in his 26-year regime held on as long as he could. . . He relinquished his post of president to serve as chairman of the Board of Directors, but it wasn't enough, and Barrow made known yesterday that he finally has severed all connection with the Yankees.

Frontier Days

. . Thick-set, athletic-looking Barrow, who admits he never played baseball "too successfully" himself, was known at the peak of his fame as a rugged individualist, a hard-hitting disciplinarian who brooked no interference and had little truck with sentiment, but he has mellowed now and speaks freely of past triumphs and defeats. . . He was born in May, 1868, on a small farm near Springfield, as the three covered wagons carrying his father and two uncles paused briefly on a dangerous journey through Indian country on the way to Nebraska from Chillicothe, O., . . The three brothers, Civil War veterans, settled on land granted them by the government but after two years Ed's father moved to Des Moines, Ia., fed up with droves of grasshoppers that obscured the sun, with Prairie fires and cyclones. . . Ed grew up around Des Moines, joined a newspaper as a mail clerk at 17 and organized his first baseball team at the office. . . Later he went to Wheeling, W. Va., won a pennant in the Interstate league and moved into Class AA ball with Toronto of the Eastern League.

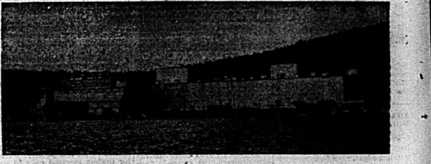
On The Bigtime

He managed the Maple Leafs in 1900 and 1901 and won the E. L. Pennant the next year, althought the American League raided his club and forced him to rebuilt for the 1902 season. . . . Among the players on his championship squad were Bill Massey, Jim Miller, Jim Downey, Louis Carr, Jack Toft, Jim Gardiner, Button Briggs, Louis Bruce, Jack White, Jim Bannon, Bill Hargrove and Jim Jones. . . He returned to Toronto in 1906 after an interlude in Detroit, quit baseball for a while and then went to Montreal in 1910, the season he was elected president of the Eastern League . . . He swiftly changed the league name to International, the tag it holds today, and ruled for eight seasons in which the circuit often verged on financial bankruptcy as the newly-formed Federal League installed rival franchises in Buffalo, Baltimore and Newark, even establishing a second ball park in Baltimore. . . . In 1918 he went to Boston, won an American League pennant and with the Red Sox, and then joined the Yankees in 1920.

In Retrospect

But Toronto retains a favorite spot in his memory, for there he ran the old Windsor Hotel on the corner of downtown Church and Adelaide Streets and met a Toronto girl, Francis Taylor, whom he married in 1912 . . . Looking back at his bass fishing They have a married daughter. . excursions in Rice Lake, Ont., and hunting in the Lake Nipissing area, Barrow sums up by saying he would have been content to stay in Toronto "the rest of my life—but I had to make a living."

Snow and sub-zero temperatures have done little to slow the increasing speed of new pulp operations in town which only three years ago was a half dozen houses and a railway station. Huge new mill is on shoreline.



The $15,000,000 mill, completed this fall, is undergoing production tests and will soon be operating at full capacity.

Junior Farmers Are Training For Wider Sphere

Toronto, Jan. 9. (CP)—Junior Farmers of Ontario at their two-day conference here starting yesterday were told to train for leadership in a wider sphere by learning to take the initiative in their local organizations.

"It is up to young people, by going through the offices of the senior organization, the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, to see that governments do not give farmers the dirty end of the stick." They were told by Warne Emmott, of Brantford, their president.

Kenneth Betzner, president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, said if a sufficient number of rural people co-operate with each other and support community action projects, agriculture in Ontario has a great future, but if they pursue "isolationist" policies a depression is in store.

"To get rid of the guesswork in farm business we must have farm management decisions for sound planning based on records," the Junior Farmers were told by H. K. Leckie, Economics Professor at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Reports on the work of Junior Farmers Clubs (4-H) in the United States were given by Ross Beattie, Stayner; Orphie Orr, Maple; Wesley Down, Hilton; Harvey Reekie, Camperdown; Betty Ruddell, Georgetown; and Raymond Arbogast, Stratford.

Olders Willing To Help

These young people formed opinions of American Farm organizations during visits to 4-H camps in Michigan and West Virginia during the Summer. Wesley Down attended the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago recently.

Miss Ruddell said she believed more older people were willing to help in Michigan Club work than was the case in Ontario. A 4-H Club agent, assistant and home economist in every Michigan County was reported by Mr Down.

Mr. Arbogast, supported by Ross Beattie, suggested that similar camps be opened in Ontario next year.

As a means of holding the farm and family unit together, Norman High, associate professor of the Economics Department, Ontario Agricultural College, suggested a family partnership plan.

Partnerships may take various forms, he said. The father may own all the real property and equipment and share the cost of feed with the son, or the father and son may share the cost of everything, including property.

After his address a group of young people from Wentworth County discussed renting, sharing and wage earning as a means of beginning farming. The group included Malcolm Bethune and Mrs. Ivan Goodbrand, Millgrove; Alan Anderson, Caledonia; Craig Switzer, Binbrook Township; Laurene Smith, Glanford Township; and Joseph Fletcher, Bruce Hossack and Mrs .Bert Tufgar, all of Ancaster Township.

Menace Airborne Poachers Setting In Says Writer

Montreal, Jan. 9 — (CP)—The menace of airborne poachers to wildlife "appears to have set in" and the need for action is "great and immediate," Izaak Hunter, outdoors columnist of the Montreal Gazette, wrote today.

Stories were current, he said, of mysterious planes landing on Quebec's northern lakes, remaining a few days and then taking off for parts unknown. Illegal hunting was the most obvious reason for their presence, although it was difficult to identify a plane being used for poaching.

"Anyone unscrupulous enough to beat the laws at all would not hesitate to slaughter the moose in one of these remote districts, load up with choice cuts and hit for home with no one the wiser." Izaak Hunter continued. "The same would go for trout netted off spawning beds in the fall."

With the matter likely to be taken up next month at a meeting in Ottawa of fish and game authorities from all provinces, the writer suggested that any plane found to have been used in breaking the game laws be confiscated to the benefit of conservation authorities. Another proposal was issuance of special licences for hunting or fishing by plane.

Ordered to Jail Until Fines Paid

Toronto, Jan. 9. (CP)— Convicted on 11 charges of selling automobiles above ceiling prices, Albert Turner, president of Turner Motors, was ordered confined to jail Tuesday until payment of fines amounting to $3,400.

Special Prosecutor for the Prices Board, J. D. McNish, said that most of the men "mulcted" by Turner were servicemen, and two had pooled their gratuities to pay for a car.

Mr. McNish described Turner as showing "a wilful disregard for the public."

An employee of Turner Motors, Donald Tillet, a second offender, described by Mr. McNish as "working in collaboration with his employer" was fined $400.

The fine levied against Turner was $300 on each of three charges of selling cars in excess of ceiling prices. He was fined $4,000 last July on eight charges in connection with the sale of used cars. The case was appealed and the fine reduced to $2,000. This fine was still outstanding when yesterday's penalties were imposed.

The other new county councillors are Herb York, Sheffield, Thomas Cochrane, Amherst Island, Thomas Perrault, Camden and Harry W. Vine, deputy reeve, Napanee.

Nine of the members were returned to office by acclamation. Frank N. Hom, reeve of South Fredricksburg is considered the likely choice for warden when the council meets here later this month.

Triplets Entitled To King's Bounty Says State Dept.

Ottawa, Jan. 9. (CP)— The Davidson triplets of remote Maynooth, Ont., two boys and a girl born to Mr. and Mrs. William Davidson as the New Year came in, are eligible for the traditional payment of £3 ($12) by the King.

All the parents have to do to get it, State Department officials said today, is apply within 12 months with proof of birth and that they are British subjects.

So far, officials said no application has been made on behalf of the boy who was born two minutes before midnight Dec. 31 and his sister and brother born just after midnight Jan. 1 in the Davidson's log cabin in the Belleville district of Ontario.

But the State Department would be happy to take up the matter with the King's representative in Canada, the Governor-General, upon receipts of proper application.

Then, the officials said, the mother would get a cheque for three pounds Sterling along with a printed note bearing the King's crest advising of payment of the King's bounty for which she would be required to endorse a receipt.

Payment of the King's bounty was started many years ago in Britain as a small bonus to aid poorer families blessed with triplets. The financial state of the family no longer is a consideration for payment of the £3 now paid for triplets born to British subjects throughout the Empire.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows were talking and arguing around the letter box, and Shorty Judge said, Hay, look at all the smoke coming out of Sam Cross's celler windows.

And we all ran over to Sam's house for a better view, and just then Sam came out, saying, You're just in time, fellows, the whole house will be up in flames in about 5 minutes That's what I came out for, so as not to miss any of it, he said.

Aw, go on, if your house was really on fire the firemen would be here by this time, Puds Simkins said, and Sam Cross said, Maybe they'd be at any other house, but not ours, and I'll tell you why. It's all my father's fault, and my mother kept warning him, but now it's too late. The firemen come around every summer and ask my father to buy a tickit for the firemens picknick, and every year my father tells them the same thing, he said.

Why, what's you mean, what's he tell them? us fellows said, and Sam said. He tells them he dont like picknicks, and he dont like firemen, so if he ever waisted his money on a picknick it certainly wouldn't be a firemen's picknick, and finely last time the firemen told him if our house ever catches on fire not to send them an alarm, because they wont be intristed. And now my mother has been calling up the firemen for a hour telling them to hurry up and come over, but every time she tells them whose house it is they just hang up the telefone in her face. So if you guys want to see a whole house bern down with nobody even trying to stop it, just stick around, Sam said.

Which just then his mother came out with her hat on, saying, Samuel, I dont want you to go away from the house in case the man comes to fix the fernace while I'm out.

Making us all remember that Sam Cross is the mist famous liar around.

New Canadian Citizens Greeted In Ceremonies

(By The Canadian Press) —

Sixty-four new Canadian citizens proudly carried today the eye-filling, throat-filling momentoes of a great moment — when they stood before the legal representatives of their country and spoke the words that carried a ringing echo: "I am a Canadian!"

To native-born Canadians, whose status is unchanged whether or not they take out citizenship papers, these token certificates presented yesterday at impressive ceremonies in four Canadian cities might not mean much.

But to the emotional Latin, the eager Slav and sturdy Scandinavian, they were symbols packed with feeling—something to show pridefully to friends, family—and the world.

Many of them, like Lithuanian William Mazetis, had spent years in this "country of minorities—a land enriched by the gifts of many cultures". Like him, many had taken up arms in defence of their adopted homeland.

Colorful Ceremony.

Fittingly enough, the most colorful of yesterday's ceremonies was at Halifax, the port of entry where so many new Canadians had lifted yearning eyes to the blue hills and winding roads of their land of promise.

Mazetis was one of the six who participated in the glowing affair in Nova Scotia's old Province House. Scarlet-coated Mounties flanked the arched doorway to the red chamber where the new citizens in turn vowed to fulfill their duties as Canadians; to be faithful and bear true allegiance to the King, his heirs and successors, and to observe the laws of Canada faithfully.

Guard of Honor.

A Navy, Army and Air Force guard of honor stood stiffly at attention beneath the portrait of Queen Victoria, who almost 80 years ago became the first sovereign to reign over the confederated Dominion of Canada.

That occasion marked Nova Scotia's official participation in citizenship week, which is being observed in provincial capital and other large centres in the Dominion.

At Montreal, candidates representing 15 nationalities received citizenship certificates, the No. 1 of the French series going to Camillien Houde, the city's perennial mayor.

Another 21 were sworn before County Judge H. E. Fuller at Welland, Ont., and in Regina 17 lined up in the red-carpeted Saskatchewan Legislative chambers at a special sitting of the district court.

There Scottish-born Premier T. C. Douglas, who received a certificate, told other recipients that "every generation has to fight afresh to preserve freedom and keep this country the land of opportunity."

Politicians Cold On Idea Splitting Liberal Party

Calgary, Jan. 9. (CP)—Political circles today studied reports of a speech by Arch Smith, Progressive Conservative Member for Calgary West, suggesting a split in the Liberal party but they generally turned a cold shoulder to the suggestion.

Mr. Smith, in an address delivered from here over a CBC Trans-Canada network, said the logical political division in Canada would merge the C.C.F. and Extreme Left Wing Liberals in one party and the Liberals of the Right and the Progressives in the other.

Ot Ottawa, M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, said the suggestion was "very interesting", and added that his party had a program and policy in line with Democratic, Socialist parties across the world.

"We have no intention of uniting with any other party, since our fundamental aims and principles are our own."

The C.C.F. Leader had no comment on Mr. Smith's statement that Prime Minister King, at a recent dinner for External Affairs Minister St. Laurent at Quebec City, had "issued an invitation to the C.C.F. party to join with the Liberals in his plea for a two-party system".

P.M. Refrains Comment

The Prime Minister also refrained from comment, although a text of his Quebec speech showed he had said, "if men and women who feel and think alike on the great questions of the day do not combine under some banner that enables them to proceed as one, they may be sure that those who hold opposite views will be only too ready to profit by their neglect."

However, the Calgary Member's suggestion prompted Senator Gerry McGeer, Liberal Senator from Vancouver, to comment that while Mr. Smith was a "very clever and capable criminal lawyer," as a political prophet "I do not think he ranks in the class where his prophetic vision need be taken very seriously."

George Cruickshank, Liberal Member for Fraser Valley, laughingly speculated that the Calgary West Member might be about to join the Liberal Party himself, while at Toronto, Senator Arthur Roebuck saw "no possibility of a split in the Liberal party for any reason."

"It is very kind of Mr. Smith to divide the Liberal party up in this way, but we think that there is a place for all three parties, and have no intention of joining either of them," said Senator Roebuck.

"If it comes to a question of change, the trend is more for liberally-minded Conservatives to move towards the Liberal party than for Conservative Liberals to join the Conservatives."

Expert Predicts U.S. Food Prices Will Go Lower

Chicago, Jan. 9 — (AP) — The men who are among the best informed about food prices — the brokers of the country's commodity exchange markets — think United States prices will go lower.

Many new year predictions have been made recently by banks, economists and businessmen concerning future prices. But the forecasts on exchanges are the composite opinions of brokers dealing in the commodities.

Butter prices are high, but you can buy some butter today on the Chicago mercantile exchange for delivery in June at about 53 cents a pound. That's around 22 cents under present wholesale prices.

For the average person who just wants some butter to spread on bread, that wouldn't be practical — you'd have to take 19,200 pounds, which is the amount represented by a "futures" contract. To save yourself from being drowned in butter you'd better sell before delivery day.

Significant of that 53-cent price, however, is that it is today's best guess of the butter and egg men on what the wholesale price will be this summer.

In nearly all markets in which food is traded for future delivery, a similar trend in shown. Eggs are a single exception. In most cases, the more distant the delivery, the lower the price.

Take wheat, its cash price at Chicago is around $2.20 a bushel. If you buy for March delivery, it's $2.04. For July it's $1.79, or 40 cents below present prices. Other grains follow that pattern.

This trend holds true for commodities other than foods.

In every case this represents, in dollars and cents, what the individuals and business firms who operate in these markets now think of future price trends.

Cattle Drover, Veterinarian Plead Guilty to Conspiracy With Respect to Cattle Exports

Fred A. Scott, Belleville, and Dr. S. H. Shipsides of Wellington Will be Sentenced at Conclusion of Trials

Picton, Jan. 9 —(Special)— Reversing pleas gived last autumn at the time of their arraignment on the respective charges, Fred A. Scott, Belleville cattle drover, and Dr. Stanley H. Shipsides, Wellington veterinarian, pleaded guilty Wednesday to charges of conspiracy when they appeared in Prince Edward county court before Judge W. S. Lane.

Sentence was deferred by Judge Lane on the charge against Mr. Scott while the case against Dr. Shipsides was adjourned until Thursday morning following taking part of the summary evidence. Both accused will be sentenced at the completion of the Shipsides case.

The conspiracy charges against Mr. Scott and against Dr. Shipsides were laid during the summer of 1946 following lengthy investigation into suspected irregularities in the export of cattle to the United States. Both charges concern violations of the Contagious Diseases of Animals Act and involved the export of ineligible cattle with substitute ear-tags. Investigation into the matter revealed that several Canadian and American cattle dealers were involved, as well as two Canadian veterinaries.

Conspiracy and forgery were among the charges laid against the men involved with charges against three men having been disposed of with heavy fines following pleas of guilty. Judgment has been reserved in a conspiracy charge against Dr. George L. Brown, Selby veterinarian, while a conspiracy charge against M. Levine of Belleville will continue in Belleville Friday afternoon.

"The offense of Mr. Scott is not against one individual, but is a serious offense against society at large and against the efforts of the department to maintain an export market for Canadian cattle," commented Judge Lane as he deferred sentence at the completion of the Scott case on Wednesday.

Two Witnesses Called

Two witnesses were called by special prosecutor Malcolm Robb in presenting a summary of the evidence against Mr. Scott, while Defence Counsel R. A. Pringle of Belleville placed the accused in the stand to give evidence pertaining to the signed statement which had been given to authorities.

Cpl. Holley Greaves, R.C.M.P. investigator, told how the accused had conspired with Leon Switt and George Lisker, American cattle buyers and with Dr. Shipsides and George Jackson of Prince Edward county to violate the cattle export regulations.

He claimed that cattle from Hastings county, not an accredited area under the act, were moved into Prince Edward county, an accredited area, and exported as cattle raised in Prince Edward. The act demands a border test only for cattle from accredited areas while those from non-accredited areas must undergo two tests for Bang's disease and tuberculosis, with a 60-day interval, before they can be exported.

Not Taken to County

In at least one instance, however, the investigating officer stated that cattle purchased in Hastings by Mr. Scott for Mr. Switt had not been taken to Prince Edward county but had been shipped directly from farms in Hastings with ear tags being substituted in the cattle car at Belleville.

Continuing Col. Greaves stated that substitute ear tags had been obtained through eligible but aged cattle being slaughtered as beef and canners while there had been conspiracy with the veterinarian who supplied ear tags for ineligible cattle which were registered as natural additions to Prince Edward herds.

In order to avoid suspicion where several natural herd additions were claimed the names of other farmers had been forged on identification slips. Also blood from known healthy animals was submitted for tests for ineligible cattle.

Fourteen Shipped Illegally.

"On paper everything was quite in order," stated the witness, "but investigation revealed the shipment of ineligible cattle. In one instance 14 cows in a load of 28 were exported illegally."

Arrangement between Mr. Scott and the American buyers was that he drove them and "spotted" the cows and was paid a commission for his work.

Dr. William Moynihan, veterinary inspector for Ontario, told how his department had endeavored to raise the status of Canadian export cattle and as such nearly 70,000 head had been exported to the United States during the past fiscal year. This meant considerable revenue to Canadian stockmen and if irregularities continued the market was in danger of being lost.

"It is the responsibility of the department to see that the regulations for exporting cattle are adhered to," he said. "We try to insist that animals shipped are in a healthy condition and the entire system depends upon proper identification of animals."

Veterinarian Relied On.

The integrity of an accredited veterinarian was relied upon for records and in the case of ear tags being substituted all identification of animals was lost. It was the duty of the veterinarian when making tests to examine ear tags for evidence of tampering.

Parallel summary evidence was introduced in the conspiracy charge against Dr. Shipsides, although Defence Counsel W. R. Widdifield asked that only evidence pertaining to the specific charge against his client be entered. Dr. Shipsides was charged with conspiracy with Mr. Scott and the American buyers in January, 1946.

Cpl. Greaves explained it would not be possible for Mr. Scott and Mr. Switt to carry on the substitution of ear tags without negligence on the part of the veterinarian.

Tested For T.B. Only.

He told of Mr. Scott and Mr. Lisker purchasing cattle at three different farms in Hastings and of Dr. Shipsides testing them as additions to Mr. Scott's herd in Prince Edward. These cows had been tested for T.B. only. Then using substitute blood samples and substitute ear tags the cattle had been exported.

Although the normal testing fee for a veterinarian was $3 per head, the witness claimed Dr. Shipsides received much more than this for "assisting".

At the beginning of the investigation Dr. Shipsides had been suspended as an "accredited" veterinarian which permitted him to test cattle and sign papers for export cattle. Witness stated that Dr. Shipsides had strongly resented this and had said that he was losing $700 monthly as result.

Gave Signed Statement.

Dr. Shipsides had given a signed statement to police but Cpl. Greaves said that upon checking it was found the true situation had been quite different and that Dr. Shipsides had been well paid.

Also ear tags which were supposed to have been in 17 cows tested at Mr. Scott's barn on a particular date, had not been in any cows at the time of the test, but the numbers had been made up from a chart in the possession of Mr. Leon Switt.

Urge Violaters of Criminal Code be Made Ineligible

St. Catharines, Jan. 9—(CP) — St. Catharines branch of the Canadian Legion last night passed a resolution urging the Criminal Code be amended to provide that anyone convicted and imprisoned for violating it be declared ineligible and unfit to represent any constituency in parliament.

J. A. Challes, who sponsored the resolution, said the people of Canada "certainly do not wish to be represented in Parliament by criminals or by persons serving sentences in prison."

ANIMATED MOVIE IS NEW CANADIAN VENTURE IN FILM

British Artist in Canada Spent 10 Weeks Drawing Sequence for "Dans Macabre"

By KAY REX

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, —(CP)—A tall, thin man revealing in every one of his quick, light movements, the keen enthusiasm of the pioneer watched the first showing here of a 12-minute technicolor film based on Saint Seens' "Danse Macabre."

For Philip Jenner of Aylmer, Que., this was the premiere, of the "animated" film it took him 10 weeks to complete. For Canada, it was the first Canadian venture into the realm of animation.

Considering the 500 or so artists whom Walt Disney employs to work out his sequences, this was a massive job for one man. But Mr. Jenner, who came to Canada five years ago as an inspector with the British Admiralty, is in his own artist photographer, producer, music expert and man-of-all-work.

A graduate engineer, with training in commercial art, and also with some theatrical background, he has all the necessary qualifications for the job he has undertaken—to promote the production of animated films in Canada.

Wide Field For Animation

Rather than depend on Hollywood for their fillers, theatre managers might find Canadian cartoon equally suitable. Then again, "There is no object that isn't improved by animation" said Mr. Jenner. "It helps students to remember when they see 'abstract ideas transferred to moving figures on a screen...and for the medical people there is a terrific field in animation—the working of the various body organs may be portrayed more clearly..."

Mr. Jenner hopes Canadians will see the light in producing their own cartoons and commercials, rather than depending entirely on Hollywood.

"I want to stay here and work for Canada in this field but if I can't make a living at it here then I'll be forced to try the United States," he concluded.

Mr. Jenner's first venture is a film interpretation of "Danse Macabre." Spidery skeletons pirouette across the screen against a technicolor background. The film itself bears a resemblance to Disney's Fantasia, but there is a "silhouetted" characterictic about the figures which is entirely original.

The amount of work which goes into the making of such a film is typified in one scene where, in order that the violinist may draw the bow across his violin, 244 separate drawings are required. The tiniest movement in such a film requires approximatly 24 drawings a second. And some of the figures are not more than one-eighth of an inch high.

HOURS WERE LONG AND PAY WAS LOW FOR EARLY NURSES

Regina Nursing Pioneer Assisted in Amputation Case With Only Five Weeks' Hospital Training

Regina, Jan. 9 (CP).—Hospital nursing though never an easy job is "duck soup" today compared to that work at the beginning of the century.

That's the opinion of Mrs. R. B. Sanders of Regina, first graduate of the first class of student nurses at Regina Hospital. The hospital, known then as Victoria Hospital, had 25 beds. One matron and two nurses looked after the patients.

There was a regular 12-hour shift but "it usually worked out longer than that" and with the small staff "we were on call 24 hours a day," Mrs. Sanders said in an interview.

Nurses were paid seven dollars a month and there was no allowance made for uniforms. Deductions were made for laundry and breakages.

Born in Ireland, Mrs. Sanders came to Canada with her family when eight years old and settled at Crystal Centre, Man. Young Jeanneatte Taylor's ambition was to be a nurse but her mother considered the life "too hard" and for two years she taught school.

But then she decided "hard or not" that nursing was the career she wanted and applied to four hospitals. Regina accepted and she entered training as a student nurse in 1901. There were only three girls in the class.

Her most memorable nursing experience was a six-month night shift stretch which she will "never forget".

"I was never so tired in all my life," she said.

There was the experience of being called, after only five weeks training, to assist in an amputation case.

"Nowadays nurses never attend an operation until they have at least six months' service," she said, "But there weren't enough of us and we had to take our turn when needed."

During the influenza epidemic in 1918 she had to take a baby patient to her home when there was no other place available in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoard moved to their new home at Hoard's Station on Thursday.

The weather is an important topic of conversation these days, lots of snow, cold winds, snow-blocked roads. The thermometer registered cold for several days and Monday, January 6th, was the first really nice winter's day since Christmas. The township and county snow plows were busy and even then a large number of folk didn't receive their rural mail. As usual the folks on the fourth concession haven't had any mail delivery for the last three days.

The snow blocked roads affected the church services and on December 29th services at Wellmans and Mount Pleasant were cancelled. On January 5th Holy Communion at Wellmans was cancelled, also Sunday School and Mission Band at Mount Pleasant.

Some Rules for a Lovely Skin

Movie star Ellen Drew's skin shows the result of perfect care.

By HELEN FOLLETT

LET US assume that a girl has no fault to find with her complexion. The sun has not painted it with freckles. Pores have not gone in for a policy of expansion. No film of sebaceous oil puts on an offensive glitter. No signs of lines around the eyes. With her facial coating in the pink of condition—of course she has nice coloring—she doesn't bother her head about it. And that is where she makes a mistake.

Enemies are always threatening the skin. Harsh winds rumple the delicate surface, make it sting. Atmospheric dust is a destructive element. Digestive upsets may change it for the worse. Therefore Miss Lucky should see to it that her precious skin retains its pristine loveliness.

Three rules there are; scrupulous cleanliness, especially at night time; stimulating treatments to keep the glands functioning normally; regular anointing with a creamy cosmetic to make for smoothness and whiteness of surface. It's simple enough! But many women skip these beauty chores, and never get busy until they have a beauty grief to face.

Blood streams, on which the skin lives and thrives, can be stimulated by a five minute nightly friction with cream immediately after the soapy washing. All physical exercise is helpful; at aerates the lungs, and produces a flow of moisture from the sweat glands that washes the pores.

Some complexions go dry because there's not enough water in the system; five glasses a day are not too many.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

This Bride Aims to Use Her New Name Correctly

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A month or so ago I read your article on "How the bride signs her new name," and it has been very helpful to me. Now I have several other questions in regard to my use of my new married name.

1. When I attend a meeting and I want to leave my name on the mailing list for pamphlets, brochures and so forth, should I give it as "Mrs. Edith P. Carter" or "Mrs. Donald Carter"? Is it proper to shorten the name and say, "Mrs. Don Carter"?

3. Whenever I write a note to someone for the first time, a brief note of not much importance, must I sign it like this:

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. Edith Patton Carter
(Mrs. Donald Carter)

Frequently I just sign, as I have seen many such notes signed: (Mrs.) Edith Carter. Right or wrong?

4. When I call up to make an appointment with a doctor, what form of name should I give?

5. Just when do I sign myself "Mrs. Donald Carter"?

E. P. C.

1. For the mailing list give your name as "Mrs. Donald Carter". That is the form of name that should be used when the pamphlets are addressed to you.

2. If it is a business or professional occasion, give your name as "Mrs. Donald Carter". If it is social or somewhat social, there would be occasions when it would be proper for you to say, "I am Edith Carter . . . Mrs. Donald Carter." (But don't give your name as "Mrs. Edith Carter," or as "Mrs. Don Carter".)

3. A note of this kind, to someone who must be informed of your husband's name (to be used on the envelope of the reply to your note), should be signed:

Sincerely yours,
Edith Patton Carter
(Mrs. Donald Carter)

(Your direct signature, Edith Patton Carter, should have no title before it. You write the "Mrs." before your signature and before your formal name.) And to sign your note (Mrs.) Edith Carter does not inform the recipient of your formal name, the name to be used on the envelope of the reply.

4. When you telephone for an appointment, say, "This is Mrs. Donald Carter."

5. You write "Mrs. Donald Carter" when signing a business telegram (answer to be sent in that name); when you sign your name for delivery of packages, telegrams, special delivery or registered letters (if addressed with your formal name); when signing a hotel register; when you give your name for church or club membership; or on an occasion when you might be asked your name for publication, say when attending a meeting, concert, and so forth. This formal name is not your signature; it is the name you present for another person's information, just as it is the information-name you write in parentheses, under your signature to a business letter.

Fashion Flashes

NOT SO LONG AGO the alligator bag was styled mainly for wear with sports or casual clothes. Now, with soft handling and gold plated metal frames, it is worn as a luxurious accessory with rich afternoon fashions. A large pouch of honey-gold alligator is cartridge-pleated in the centre and softly shirred at the ends onto a gold-plated frame with a big lucite and gold metal lock.

A new and different look marks the wide-brimmed, fairly flat-crowned sailor when worn in the Winter. Black satin is used for a handsome mid-season hat, with a wide inset of black shirred lace, bound in the satin almost forming the entire brim. The binding is finished at one side with a little bow, casually tied.

Back again is the softly pleated skirt so right for resort and Spring wear. Silk chiffon, with a soft line plaid in gray, blue and pink, is used for a handsome frock, the skirt cut on full lines with unpressed accordion pleating. Short sleeves pick up the pleat theme, as does the flat, bow-tied collar.

Lots and lots of fur-trimmed fabric evening coats. A full-length model in oyster white woollen has a big collar of silver fox that continues down and around in bolero effect. Sleeves have big silver fox cuffs.

The look that is most apparent in smart afternoon frocks is the long-torso effect. This is achieved in various ways. One frock of black silk crepe has a softly draped, front-dipping peplum which ties in a self bow in back, a nipped-in waistline and pencil-slim skirt. Stripes of powder blue faille and rayon are inserted at the deep square neckline and form flaring gauntlet cuffs on the bracelet-length sleeves.

Slated for acceptance by the younger crowd next Spring is the tricorne, which once was a dowager-type hat. Worn back on the head is a small tricorne trimmed with clusters of pin roses with fuchsia velvet bows that make a bright color contrast to the soft gray felt of the small hat.

Trimming down the Waistline

Nothing would please Mrs. Heavyweight so much as to have her waistline waste away. Because of lack of exercise, or over-indulgence in the good things of the table, the neat 24 inch equator is but a memory. Every birthday after the age of forty she has given herself a present of half an inch or more. She does not regard her silhouette with joy and jubilation. Her torso is cylindrical because the waistline has disappeared. The neat nip-in has vanished. She yearns for incurves.

All right, Mrs. Heavyweight. If you'll work hard enough you can get them. Thousands of plumpies have got back to normal weight and proportions. They look better and feel better because the excess of adipose padding was a health menace. But they didn't do that presto-change act in a few weeks or a few months. They buckled down to a sensible, healthful reducing routine and stuck to it. If you think you can not stick there is no sense in starting.

You won't have to starve. There are plenty of good things to eat. You may have to forego the pleasure of some of your favorite dishes. You must cut down on fats, sweets and starches. Close your eyes when you pass the candy and pastry shops. You can have lean meat, fish, poultry, vegetables that grow above ground, cottage cheese, buttermilk, fruit and fruit juices.

With the proper diet you will not continue to feed your fat cells. To help get rid of the present supply, you are going to do some simple exercises to tone and strengthen your muscles. Adipose tissue can't stand the disturbance of activity.

While fat deposits settle on specific parts of the body, their most usual choice is the mid-section, because that part of the human frame gets little exercise.

A complicated set of exercises is not necessary. The main purpose is to stretch the ligaments.

Mrs. Heavyweight would like to See her waistline melt away

That means that you must keep tall—walking, sitting or standing. The more you pull up your back bone, the closer will you draw in the abdominal fibres, helping them to regain elasticity.

Stand tall with arms stretched high overhead, hands together. Sway the waist and abdomen forward as far as you can; then back, keeping the feet firmly planted and with a consciousness of stretching from the knees up. Do this twenty times. Relax, breath deeply and repeat.

With hands high over the head, body stretched, touch the floor with the fingertips without bending the knees. This is an old one, but one of the best for waistline normalizing.

Hands on hips, feet far apart, lower the body until the buttocks rest on the heels. Up on the toes and repeat.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

I Suspect This is a Fancy Type of Brush-Off

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 18 and have been going with a boy, 19, for six months. He has always been wonderful to me in every way, and is considerate, thoughtful, kind and loyal. His main quality is his honesty.

One night he wanted to leave me for good. I was very puzzled by this, because I know he is in love with me. Finally he told me that about two years ago he was innocently mixed up with the wrong crowd and had made one of the biggest mistakes ever made by anyone and that he wasn't worthy of me.

I was very depressed and confused, and don't know what to do. Should I go on seeing this boy, or look for someone else who has never made this mistake? I am in love with this boy, and I know he has done everything in his power to undo his mistake, but of course it is impossible. He was only a foolish boy, but should I go on with him?

"O. L. K."

All this is pretty mysterious, "O.L.K." and unless I had some idea of what this terrific mistake was, I don't see how I can give you any very helpful advice. Few, if any, youthful mistakes are so desperately permanent, and unless facts that you have failed to tell me put an entirely different light on things, I'm afraid that you are being misled by a very old masculine dodge. In plain language, I'm inclined to believe that your boy friend is giving you an elaborate type of brush-off which many another young man has found useful as a means of backing out of a romance of which he has tired. By using a "wild oats" story, and telling his girl he is giving her up because he isn't worthy of her, he can make his getaway and look like a very heroic character at the same time, a neat trick indeed.

I hate to disillusion you this way, and perhaps I am being wholly unfair to a very noble young man. But it would take more facts than you have given me to convince me that I'm wrong.

Double-Date Leads to a Double-Cross

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a 17-year-old high school senior, and am going with a girl from school. My best friend and I often double-date my girl and her best friend.

Recently I have realized that I have become infatuated with my buddy's girl and she with me. The reason we still go out in a foursome is so that my friend's girl and I can be with each other without hurting either my best friends or hers. We cherish the friendship afforded by our respective pals, but we feel we are missing something by keeping our love for each other hidden.

"H. T. G."

So your double-dating results in a double-crossing, eh? A fine pair you and this girl sound to me, finagling each other away from your respective best friends. If that's your idea of "cherishing" the friendship of a pal, heaven help the pal whose friendship you cease to cherish!

Let's not take things so seriously, though. Let's assume that you and this girl are actually two decent young people who mean to do the right thing but have thoughtlessly allowed yourselves to be swayed by impulsive emotions. In that case, you'll stop building up your attraction for each other as a great love that should not be kept hidden and take it for just what it is—a mutual liking and admiration which you can enjoy, if you'll let yourselves, far more healthily in a foursome, with everything on the level, than if you try to manage things so the two of you can get off in a corner by yourselves and pet. Believe me, your pleasure in each other's company is much more likely to last if you leave things as they are, and stop making eyes at each other behind the backs of your "best friends".

A Troubled Girl of Thirteen

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a troubled girl of thirteen. Supposed friends of mine have been spreading rumors about my friends and myself which are not true. They say that the boys I go around with try to kiss me and get fresh with me, and my nerves just won't take it any longer. You see, I never really went out with such boys, except to school dances and through the park in the daytime.

If there is anything you can say to help me keep my mother from learning about this, and to help me stop these dreadful rumors, I would appreciate it very much.

"Unhappy"

I wonder just what's wrong here, "Unhappy"? As a rule, unpleasant gossip doesn't just appear out of thin air. If a girl has always behaved as she should, it is very unlikely that people would dream up "rumors". Are you quite certain you've never done anything that would give anyone a chance to criticize your conduct?

And if you've never done anything that might give people reason to talk, why are you so worried lest your mother should learn about these "rumors"? Wouldn't she believe you if you told her they weren't true? And if not, why wouldn't she? Doesn't she trust you? Have you ever deceived her about anything so that she doesn't feel she can rely on your word?

It seems to me the natural thing for a girl if she found herself in such a situation as you describe, would be to consult her mother. If she doesn't feel she can do that, then there's either something wrong with the relationship between herself and her mother, or else she knows she hasn't done the right thing. Which is your trouble, "Unhappy?"

Art of Crime Detection In R.C.M.P. Built on Firm Basis

(By David J. Ghent in the Ottawa Journal)

One of the first jobs facing the Royal Canadian Mounted Police when World War II ended was building up the strength of the force, which had been seriously depleted by a wartime ban on recruit training.

On Friday, Dec. 20, the second class to be trained since the war ended graduated at "N" Division Headquarters, Rockcliffe.

For the 30 men in the class, Graduation Day — and to their way of thinking it should be spelled with capital letters — marked the turning point in their lives.

On that day they became constables in one of the world's foremost police bodies. They looked back on six months of the hardest work any of them had ever done; they looked forward to association with the best trained policemen on earth.

Have Things In Common.

The class contained men from all over Canada. They each have certain things in common, though. These are racial and physical characteristics. Each of them is a British or Canadian subject; is between 18 and 30 years of age; has reached at least Grade 8 in school; is at least five feet, eight inches tall; and weighs between 165 and 210 pounds.

Each of them signed on with the force for at least five years, and statistics show that at the completion of that period nearly all of them will continue in the service.

Each has received a wide and varied training in police duties, and all are in top physical condition. In addition to knowing things primarily of use only to policemen, all have been taught to swim, to drive a car, to type—and this by the "touch" system—and they all have a detailed knowledge of first aid.

The six months' training each recruit gets is split into two three month sessions, classified as Part I and Part II. Part I might be classified as basic training, and the second half of the grind is given over more to theory.

At the conclusion of each half of the six months' syllabus, each recruit writes an exam on the subjects he has taken during the previous three months. If he fails, he gets a chance to redeem himself with a later class.

Get Discipline.

One of the first things the R.C.M.P. instills into a man is a sense of discipline. This is done in various ways, but the most effective found to date is many hours on the parade square, under a tough drill instructor, and equally long hours on fatigues. The fatigues make a guy realize he's just a cog in a very, very big machine—and a pretty minor cog, at that. They run from scrubbing out a barrack block to sweeping out a much-used stable.

Coincident with instilling discipline are efforts to get the recruits into good physical shape with the least possible delay.

The Part I syllabus has 37 hour-long periods devoted exclusively to drill and 38 similar sessions for physical training. The PT is routine "physical jerks", cross-country runs and boxing. In addition, 13 hours are spent learning various "police holds". This means wrestling the hard way—the hard way, that is, for the person opposing the lawman!

The drill, PT and "police holds" training is continued throughout the recruit's entire course, and in Part II he gets an additional 120 hours spent on these three subjects.

At the completion of Part I of his training, a recruit has received 20 hours' instruction in first aid and holds a certificate from the St. John Ambulance Association. This training is continued, and most of the men get the St. John Medallion, with additional Bars to the Medallion, as their knowledge and proficiency increases.

Study History of Force.

One of the things which imparts a feeling of pride in the mind of any member of the R.C.M.P. is a knowledge of the excellent work done by the force in the past. This esprit de corps is fostered by lectures and study of the history of the R.C.M.P. In all, 18 hours are devoted to history alone.

When a man graduates as a constable he can type at a minimum rate of 30 words a minute. Practice in this subject takes up 60 hours of the six months training period.

In addition to the subjects already mentioned, the first half of the syllabus includes many hours on Criminal Law and Procedure, Rules and Regulations of the Force, Federal statutes, public relations, driving and maintenance of automobiles, and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act.

Besides all this, a trainee learns a great deal about horses. How to care for them and how to ride them. This training has become of exceptional importance since it has been decided to revive the famous R.C.M.P. Musical Ride, which will be ready for the public in about a year.

After the recruit has finished Part I, he moves into that phase of his training designed to consolidate the principles learned in the first three months and start really to find out what makes the R.C.M.P. tick.

The last three months are split up into four general types of instruction: Criminal law and procedure, Federal statutes, general subjects such as auto accidents, cattle brands, fire fighting, traffic control, handling crowds, public relations, interviews, police witnesses and searches, and aids to investigation.

Science Aids Mounties.

This last named is the most interesting phase of training in the whole course. It is primarily designed not as a training medium, but to give the recruit an idea of what science can do to help him in his job.

It is a series of lectures and demonstrations, shared by the student policemen, and given by members of the staff at R.C.M.P. laboratories at Rockcliffe.

R.C.M.P. lab is rated as one of the best in the world. It holds its own with anything Scotland Yard, the French Surete or the American F.B.I. can turn out, and several advances in the field of physics and chemistry later adopted by crime detection laboratories throughout the world originated there.

Here the recruit learns about counterfeiting; fingerprints; photography; plan drawing; how glass fractures when struck by a bullet; how to recognize different metals; forensic medicine, stains and toxicology; how to take footprints and impressions.

He is shown the ballistics section, where any bullet can be identified, what type of gun fired it can be named by make and model, how any two bullets can be compared and it can be learned if they were fired from the same gun.

He sees what photography can do to help him in the field of preserving an unquestioned record of documents and physical objects. How the R.C.M.P. technicians can take pictures through a stereoscopic camera which makes the photo appear three-dimensional. How a "blow-up" or enlargement of a photograph will bring out details normally hidden to the naked eye.

He learns about "portrait parle" —literally, "speaking likeness", a system of visual description—with which an artist can draw a perfect likeness of a person from a verbal description.

He learns how to judge from what distance a person has been shot. This particular subject is taught with the aid of a bullet-riddled wax cast of the head of the chief instructor.

Lives Like a Cadet.

The R.C.M.P. is a semi-military organization, and a recruit lives a life very similar to a cadet at an officers' training centre.

During the summer months he is roused at six o'clock in the morning, during the winter he gets an extra half hour abed.

"Lights out" is sounded at 10.45 p.m.

Throughout the period of his training the rookie is allowed "off limits" Saturday afternoon and Sunday. This only if he is not on duty that week-end.

Barracks are kept spotless. There is a place for everything, from toothbrush to stetson, and they must be in their place.

Leisure hours are few, but excellent recreational facilities are provided. Trainees have a lounge, billiard tables, and ping-pong tables. They play cards and chess; checkers and parchesi.

In addition to being the "red letter" day in the life of any recruit, graduation day was the first day he was allowed to wear a red tunic, prized by the recruit above all else because it is symbolic of the R.C.M.P. throughout the world and because it meant at last he has become a "Mountie".

Alaska's Fine People Amaze And Baffle Visitors

(By Norman D. Wise, in the Vancouver Daily Province)

One year in Alaska leaves me breathless, amazed and baffled. This applies to everything and all.

The country, exceedingly rugged and cold, tends to lend its sparse populace the identical atmosphere. Alaskans are a queer lot, one minute cold as the glaciers and the next pleasing to excess.

To baffle the outsider even further, a community spirit hard to equal exists in every village or mining camp. Regardless of whether John Doe had a fight with Bill Roe, the following day finds them with an arm around one another's shoulders. Life is too short up there to hold a grudge for, in such a small population, they have to get along.

* * *

Social events, few and far between, are looked on as gatherings of the clan. Everyone that walks is in attendance.

A large reception hall may be turned into a cabaret for one evening and stripped naked the next for a basketball game. People take a sincere interest in what they do.

The same recreation hall, large and full of emptiness, could compete with Vancouver night clubs, when it is decorated.

House parties also are gala affairs. Consequently one usually awakes the following morning, seeing spots before one's eyes and a handful of Red Gremlins, dancing on the counterpane. To quell these, the party usually continues on indefinitely. Sing-songs, dancing, tall tales and restful leisure fall by the wayside. Despite these long, involved parties, the man scheduled to work in the morning is always there, regardless of whether he went to bed at all.

Sickness is uncommon. Alaskans boast they are naturally rugged. They have untold advantages in healthful living, the mountain air for one, pure and bracing.

Teaching in the northern country is difficult. Schools are usually ungraded. Teacher instructs from grades one to eight, in one large room.

* * *

Then there are the funerals in Alaska. A funeral is an occasion. After the deceased is buried, the mourners generally proceed to get drunk.

On one occasion, Mr. Sam Doe was to be buried, the grave to be filled in by his closest friend, who arrived at the graveside fully loaded. Staggering into the grave, the closest friend finally came to rest on top of the casket. Loud wails attracted the attention of departing mourners. After the man was extricated, he filled in the grave and then carried on with his celebration.

Despite the lack of social events, there is always something to do. This is the reason why I came to Vancouver for a rest.

Cruises Pacific in Luxury Yacht to Fulfil Dream

Vancouver, Jan. 9 (CP). — Steaming steadily down through the Pacific Ocean is the yacht Breezin' Thru, carrying a man with a dream to the South Seas. He is Missouri-born Bearl Sprott, 50, and the dream goes back to his wedding day, 32 years ago. He was just 18, his wife 17.

At that time he promised his bride he would retire at 50. "Not 60, but 50, while we're still young enough to get a kick out of life. I'll quit if I've nothing better than a tent to live in. But we'll have more than a tent," he promised.

Today, Mr. Sprott has $2,000,000, a $250,000 mansion, a thriving auto court, the same warm-hearted wife, two sons, two daughters and six grandchildren. And his dreamboat.

The ship flies the red ensign and carries an all-Canadian crew. It is registered in Vancouver and recognized as one of the most luxurious yachts on the Pacific coast. And true to his 33-year-old promise—Bearl Sprott is retired.

"I'm a playboy now, mister," is the way he describes himself. "And I'm going to be the biggest darn playboy you ever did see—but mother's going along to keep an eye on me."

The Breezin' Thru, 140 feet long with a gross weight of 207 tons, was built in New York in 1928. During the war it became H.M.C.S. Cougar, a Royal Canadian Naval patrol vessel. It carries its own aircraft.

Canadian Crew.

The skipper is Robert Taylor of Saanich, B.C., with Roy Martin of Vancouver as chief engineer. Martin, a veteran of six years in the R.C.N., served nearly half his time aboard the Cougar. Rex Do-Doward of Prince Rupert, B.C., is second engineer, and Tommy Glaister of Mission, B.C., mate, is pilot of the plane.

The ship, gleaming white, has six cabins for guests and four for crew, three tile-floored bathrooms with needle showers, thick carpets and every other available luxury.

Sprott first tasted retirement in 1938, at the age of 42, when he bought a 65-foot schooner, The Glory, which he still owns. However, the war put him back into harness, and the Sprott mass-feeding process served 300,000 persons daily in San Francisco, Los Angeles and the huge Geneva Steel plant at Provo, Utah.

He is confident he won't tire of loafing and roaming. But if he does, he is ready for that, too. He has an idea for floating hotels plying between South America and Alaska.

Oh yes, his cruise is strictly for pleasure, but "I might as well look around while I'm down there."

CHILDBIRTH WEIGHT RECORD IS CLAIMED

Canberra, Jan. 9 (CP). — An Australian record for weight at birth is claimed for the six children of Harry Parkinson, 44, and his wife, Amy, 29, of Canberra, Australia.

Use Many Schemes To Aid Australia Delinquent Youth

By JACK HOLDSWORTH
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Melbourne, Australia, Jan. 9 (CP)—Police and social workers in Australia are giving their attention to the problem of youthful delinquents and potential delinquents. They have statistics showing that 70 per cent of first-offenders are under 21 and that more crime is committed by boys and girls between 15 and 25 than by offenders in any other 10-year age group.

One solution is thought to be the establishment of boys' clubs and other social organizations for youth to keep the youngsters from the streets and provide them with opportunities for recreation.

Another is the gathering of delinquents and potential delinquents into settlements where they have the responsibility for management of their own affairs and are taught to serve the community.

Experiments along both lines are being conducted. At the Methodist Central Mission at Tally Ho, a 130-acre farm village, 16 miles from Melbourne, 80 boys are taken in at a time. They have their own parliament, making their own village laws and prescribe the penalties for violations.

The settlement has a modern school, a swimming pool, a general store, three cottages for supervisors and their families, sheds, barns, general farm equipment and more than 30 head of cattle.

Every boy goes home at least once a month but is required to apply for leave and show that he is a solvent member of the community. One of the settlement rules is that no one may spend money on leisure while in debt. The boys are paid a weekly rate for after-school work.

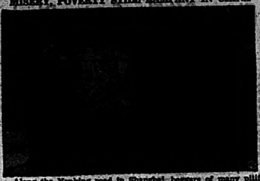
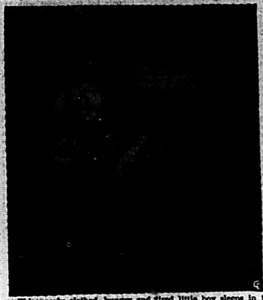
MISERY, POVERTY STILL RAMPANT IN CHINA



Along the Nanking road in Shanghai, beggars of many pitiful types plead for alms from passersby. Here is a well-known figure whose left foot was cut off in early childhood by his parents, who were also beggars. Thus was he assured "protection" from the police as they do not prevent cripples from begging.



This poorly clothed, hungry and tired little boy sleeps in the doorway of the Palace Hotel, Shanghai, where he was left by his mother while she begs for coins from American service men.

Beavers Beat Man in Building Jobs on Lake in Manitoba

Winnipeg—(CP)—The beaver, Canada's national animal, not only is a busy little animal, but a smart one too. At least it knows what it wants and how to get it. Such is the claim of H. E. Beresford, director of the surveys branch of the Manitoba resources department.

It all began from the placing of six beavers in the Fisher river fur rehabilitation block by the provincial government. Released at Lake St. George, they immediately began a trek that took them to Lake Winnipeg and back before heading up St. Patrick's creek; where they proceeded to build a dam at the exact location the Manitoba government had selected to build a dam.

Agreeing with their human counterparts as to the site, the beaver engineers had different ideas as to the materials to be used. In fact they carefully avoided all the trees that had been previously earmarked and selected their own.

The result was far beyond the fondest dreams of the department. The levels of Lakes St. David and St. Patrick were raised three feet and within two years the muskrat population in the area had jumped to approximately 9,000.

Beavers There First.

The beaver's second engineering feat on behalf of man was not as large an undertaking, but equally as successful. A government constructed dam at Lake Six, in northern Manitoba, for raising the levels of Lakes Six, Five, Thickwood and Lake St. Andrew was found to be inadequate, and it was decided that another 2½ feet would have to be added. The engineers arrived to do the job; but the beavers had been there first and already added 12 inches.

While Mr. Beresford's last story cannot be verified, he claims his source is impeccable.

The story concerns a group of government engineers who, going to work each morning by canoe, had to navigate past a beaver dam. Each day they had to open the dam to allow enough water through to float their canoe. Each night the beavers carefully sealed the opening.

That is until one day when the engineers hung an old pair of Indian socks at the opening. The beavers immediately lost all interest in the project.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was eating my popping particles at breakfist just when the popping particles program came on the radio, starting with the popping particles song the quartette always sings, and I said, G, pop, I'm eating them and they're singing them, that's a funny one.

I can think of funnier ones. If that tune once starts buzzing in my head it's werse than a mosquito, pop said.

Meening it wont stop, and pop quick terned the radio off, and when he came home for dinner I was up in my room singing the werds, being:

Popping particles give you vim,
Popping particles give you vigger,
They make you strong while they keep you slim
And straight on the beam and quick on the trigger.

And I was just starting to sing it again, and pop called up, For Peet sake, quit that. The confounded thing haunted me all day at the office. What is this, a plot? he said, and I said, No sir.

And I didn't start to sing it again till after dinner, and pop said, By gollies, Benny, I'm beginning to like that tune, and I said, Then G, pop, let's sing it together.

I'll sing a solo if you dont mind, pop said.

Which he did, making up his own werds, being:

If you martch off to bed a full hour too soon—
You fine little musical gent, you—
Just keep right in step to this counfounded tune,
And you'll almost be glad that I sent you.

The result being I only started to sing it 3 more times without realizing it, but I allways quick stopped soon enough so pop didn't do anything werse than look at me over the top of his paper.

DOG SOAP SOLVES SHORTAGE PROBLEM

Maritzburg, South Africa, Jan. 9 (CP)—A temporary solution to the soap shortage in South Africa has been found by Maritzburg women who now are using dog soap.

Supplies of ordinary domestic and toilet soaps are almost impossible to obtain but there are fair supplies of dog soap which is said to be as good as a medium-priced toilet soap. Women are rapidly buying up all available supplies of dog soap at 1s. (20 cents) a cake. They believe the dog soap is less injurious to the skin than ordinary soap. They are also buying shaving sticks with which to do domestic laundry.

15 Pups in Litter

Toronto, Jan. 8 — (CP) — "Tip," three-year-old cross between a fox-terrier and a police dog, may not have a pedigree but last night she made a bid for fame by becoming the mother of 15 pups. When her young master's father called the Humane Society for help in feeding the enormous brood, and reported the number of pups, an official said "Are you drinking or seeing double."

SAYS DISABLED HELPED WIN WAR

London, Jan. 9 (CP)).—Of 4,190 British juveniles registered under the Disabled Persons Act, only 61 were war casualties, said Labor Minister Isaacs.

Those disabled from birth or early childhood number 3,160, while 1,690 were disabled in non-industrial accidents. The rest were maimed in industrial accidents.

"With proper care and attention even badly disabled persons helped vitally in winning the war. If they were good enough for that they are good enough to help us win the peace," he said.

BUTCHER INTRODUCED SUCCULENT GOLDEYE

Vancouver —(CP)— Winnipeg goldeye—famed succulent smoked fish — was first introduced to the world by Robert Firth, it is the belief of Fred Seifreid of Vancouver.

Mr. Seifreid said that his research indicates that the original smoking process used on goldeye was used by Firth, an English butcher who came to Canada in 1886.

Firth, Mrs. Seifreid's grandfather, caught the fish in the Red River near Winnipeg at night when his meat market was closed. The smoking process proved so satisfactory that he decided to commercialize the venture.

Seifreid said that when Firth died in 1940, he was considered king of Canadian fish smokers, having spent more than 40 years in the business.

Maple Leafs Widen N.H.L. Lead With Win Over Luckless Hawks; Canadiens Are Beaten

Bruins, Taking Heed of Warning by Ross, Defeat New York Rangers

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Unlike the rumbling Boston Bruins, who apparently work best when mentor Art Ross waves a big stick over them, Toronto's young Maple Leafs seem to tend to their duties just as well whether "teacher" is there or not.

With manager Conn Smythe sunning himself in Florida on a month's vacation, the Leafs extended their National Hockey League lead last night with a 10-4 victory over Chicago Black Hawks. A battle for the first period and a bit, it soon turned into another of those lighthearted shows by the Toronto youngsters, similar to an 11-0 pasting they handed the same Hawks recently.

The Bruins also won their tilt last night, beating off the challenge of New York Rangers to their third position with a 3 - 1 triumph. But the big Boston team was practically playing under a "win or else" ultimatum following Ross' announcement that a three-game trial stretch would determine the future of some 8 veterans.

Canadiens Lose Ground

The Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens lost ground in their effort to overhaul the leading Leafs in the third game of the mid-week card, bowing 4-2 to the fifth-place Detroit Red Wings. The loss put Canadiens 5 points behind Leafs, although still 11 in front of the third-place Bruins.

Playing before a Toronto crowd of 12,059, the cellar-dwelling Hawks twice took an edge over Leafs and were leading 2-1 at 5:15 of the second period. But then the roof fell in. Leafs rammed home three straight goals and raced away in an eight-goal final period.

Little Howie Meeker, the rookie from Stratford, Ont., sparked the Toronto drive with a brilliant five-goal performance, two of which were originally credited to defenceman Wally Stanowski before a between-period conference between players and officials straightened matters out.

Of the other five Toronto tallies, two went to veteran Nick Metz, one to his brother Don and one each to Bud Poile and Gaye Stewart. For Chicago, Max Bentley, Bill Mosienko, Clint Smith and rookie Bill Gadsby scored.

The Bruins took a 2-0 lead in the second period and held the Rangers to a goal apiece in the final session to turn in their second victory in eight starts before a crowd of 15,327 at New York Played the Puck.

With the Bruins not sure just which players manager Ross meant when he said eight veterans were headed for the discard unless they produced, all followed the puck like Hawks and the result was a tight-checking game. Three veterans divided the scoring, Joe Carveth, Don Gallinger and Bobby Bauer.

For the Rangers, who won two previous games via the shutout route, Bill Juzda was the lone scorer.

Bill Cowley, veteran Boston centre who is within two points of tying Syd Howe's all-time record of 572 points in season and playoff competition, failed to get a point.

Detroit climbed within one point of the fourth-place Rangers by defeating Canadiens before a crowd of 10,756 at Montreal. Pat Lundy, Ted Lindsay, Roy Conacher and Jim (no relation to Roy) Conacher were the Detroit marksmen while rookie Leo Gravelle got both Montreal tallies.

ALL TIME RECORD

Los Angeles, Jan. 9. (AP)—California turf fans chunked it into the mutuels to the tune of $414,767,035 in the fiscal year 1945-46, an all-time record, says the California State Horse Racing Board.

HAMILTON TIGERS ALL OUT TO WIN 15TH STRAIGHT

Defeat Stratford Indians 5-3 Before an Audience of 3,000

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Tigers won, of course —they haven't lost a game all season — but the eastern senior hockey champions didn't have an easy time of it by any means when they edged Stratford Indians 5-3 at Hamilton last night.

The only senior O.H.A. game of the evening, that tilt at Hamilton marked Tigers' 15th consecutive victory and sent them 8 full games ahead of the second-place Toronto Staffords. Before victory was in the bag 3,000 loyal Tiger supporters were on the edge of their seats in fear that their beloved unbeaten veterans might at last taste defeat.

Two games in the junior "A" loop saw Barrie Flyers beat Oshawa Generals 5-4 — for Oshawa's first defeat on home ice — and Stratford Kroehlers reap 4 points in a smashing 8-2 home-rink triumph over Toronto Young Rangers. Toronto St. Michaels on top still enjoy a six-point lead over Oshawa, Marlboro and Galt, with Barrie another five points back, and Stratford three points farther back of that. The four other squads remain way behind.

Art Childs, veteran custodian of the Tiger goal, had to play one of his best games as the Indians persisted in sweeping attacks without regard for their opponents' reputation.

Shillington Scores Two

Clarence Shillington, starry Hamilton forward, scored two goals but suffered a gash under his right eye that required three stitches. Shillington goth the first Hamilton goal after six minutes of play and P. Long tied it up, but Mason put Hamilton ahead before the first period was over.

The second period was only 4 minutes gone when Phillips tied it up, and once again Hamilton went in front on a goal by Miocinovich. Then in the last period Hamilton made it 4-2, on Jimmy Conick's goal, and Hilson came back for Stratford.

But although the Indians tried hard and had an edge in play they couldn't get the tying counter, and at two minutes before the end Shillington got his second counter.

Stratford Kroehlers pleased the fans with an unusual show of team-play in their victory over Young Rangers. Robertson and Roth each had two goals for Stratford, the others coming from Kullman, Mesich, Service and Casonato. Pidherney got both Toronto goals.

At Oshawa, Strachan in the Barrie nets and the Flyers' persistent checking were only part of the story. Oshawa lost defenceman Whitey Cameron early in the game with an army injury, and MacKay and Samis had to go the rest of the route.

At that Oshawa came from behind four times to tie the score, falling only after Barrie got its fifth goal. St. Pierre got two of the Flyers' counters, Fife, Aiken and Mousseau the others. It was Mousseau who scored the winning goal. For Oshawa, scorers were Blair, Scholes, Pogue and MacKay. Ziedel figured on four of the five Barrie goals.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

Abe Yanofsky, 21-year-old Winnipeg chess wizard, who has blazed an impressive trail of victories across European chess boards, finished fourth in a field of 10 in the recently-concluded International Chess Tournament at Hastings, Sussex, Eng., but the Canadian, believed to be the world's youngest chess master, thought he would have done better if he hadn't been dogged by ill health, following six months of strenuous playing in various tournaments and exhibitions in Europe.

The Royal Canadian navy veteran lost only one game in the Hastings tournament—to C. H. Alexander of Britain, who won the nine-round event with a score of 7 1-2 points —two more than Yanofsky.

Bill Norman, former manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, was yesterday named to manage the Wilkes-Barre Barons of the Eastern Baseball League during the coming season.

The celebrated Davis Cup, back in the United States for the first time since 1939, was whisked by armored car to Los Angeles City Hall yesterday when Captain Walter Pate and the American Cup team arrived by plane after a 43-hour flight from Australia. It will be unveiled there today as a tribute to Jack Kramer and Ted Schroeder, Los Angeles netmen who led the Yanks to victory over the Aussies.

In the first of nine matches they will play in England, a United States Hockey team yesterday upset predictions by tying an English team 6-6. The Yanks had been considered set-ups for the English team.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George E. Carver, Sports Editor

If their performance against the strong Mountain View quintette the other night can be judged a criterion, Jack Dickens' "Y" Juniors basketball team should go places during the coming season. The youngsters who will play in the intermediate grouping this season, for experience and practice, due to the fact there is no junior loop in the district, flashed a powerful attack against the heavier airmen and walked off the court victors by a 46-35 score.

• • •

Coach Dickens, naturally proud of the feat of his proteges in their first semi-official appearance (the game was an exhibition joust) predicts bright things for the maroon-and-white-clad youngsters. He claims that his offensive power is fairly evenly distributed and to date there doesn't seem to be a weak link in the chain. That was evidenced in the individual scoring which appears elsewhere on this page.

• • •

However, Coach "Doc" Lyons of the Mountain View squad, while praising the ability of the "Y" youngsters was not alibing when he stated that his squad needs practice and teamwork. He has some fast-moving players on the air team which when rounded into shape and with a little more passing practice, will give the best of the teams in the intermediate group a run for their dinero. The squads meet in a return exhibition tilt in Mountain View next Tuesday.

• • •

The best passing exploits of both teams, according to our Mountain View secret service, was done at the luncheon served the "Y" kids by their enemies of the court following the game. 'Tis said that practically everyone scored with sandwiches and coffee and no fouls personal or otherwise were called. Even the coaches got in this game.

• • •

Frank Stevens, secretary of the Belleville and District Chess Club, informs us that the first annual tournament of the club is now underway. The winner will be presented the handsome trophy donated by Jack Shaw, who is the father of the idea of starting the association.

• • •

In the first round of the tournament Messrs. Wagar, Shaw, Swinburne and Meeus were eliminated. These gentlemen with any newcomers to the club will engage in a consolation tournament on January 9th. Messrs. Leo. Stevens, Nichols and Batchelor have advanced to the second round of the tournament and will continue play on January 9th. The club meets every Thursday evening at 7.30 in the "Y" and everybody is welcome.

• • •

Whether the play is a good one or not, only time will tell, but there isn't any doubt that it is a crowd pleaser of the first order. We refer to the manoeuvre which seems to have been tried out for the first time by Tony Hemmerling, a former American Hockey League veteran now coaching the Fresno Falcons in the Pacific Coast Hockey League. With the Falcons trailing by two goals and ten minutes to play in the final period, Hemmerling moved his fast-skating goaltender, Jack Eley, formerly of Hamilton, Ontario, up on the attack as "safety man" on power plays.

• • •

On face-offs in opponent's territory Eley moved right up to the opposing team's blue line and handled the puck several times. Fresno managed to score twice and tie up the game, with Eley figuring in one play, and went on to win in overtime. Fresno tried the same play in another game and once more tied the score. In a third attempt they were not successful in evening the count, but the opposing team did not score on them. Hockey managers reason that if you are going to lose it is worth gambling by putting all hands on the attack.

• • •

Frank Boucher, manager-coach of the New York Rangers, stunned the Detroit Red Wings, not to mention the fans, a short time ago when he pulled the same manoeuvre with seconds to go in Detroit. Goaltender Chuck Rayner, former star of the Springfield Indians in the American Hockey League, moved right up to the Detroit blue line on a face-off and while Chuck did not figure in the play the Rangers did succeed in gaining a tie.

• • •

A few nights later in New York with the Rangers trailing the Toronto Maple Leafs, Rayner again joined his team-mates on the attack acting as safety man. He grabbed two loose pucks which he fed to his forwards, and raced a Toronto man for the puck, bodychecking him and coming up with the rubber, which he passed to a team-mate.

Arguments against the play are that you might as well put a sixth forward on the ice, but many contend that if you have a fast-skating goaltender who can handle a stick then you have an advantage keeping him on the ice as he can get back and cover his net. The play is not recommended for fat, slow-moving goaltenders.

Arnie Jarrell, Kingston Ponies' southpaw, annexed dual crowns among the chuckers in the Border Baseball League in 1946, according to statistics. Jarrell not only led the circuit with 21 victories against eight defeats but had an earned run average of 2.20, the best in the loop.

• • •

Pete Karpuk, another Pony hurler, who also played infield and outfield when not flinging, led in innings pitcher, 248 and strikeouts 173. His batting average was .329 for 67 games.

Bob Dill of the pennant-winning Auburn Cayugas was the "Ted Williams" of the loop, copping batting honors with an average of .397, 118 runs batted in and 20 round-trippers. Dill started the season as manager of the Ogdensburg Maples but was released in August when he joined the Cayugas. He was a former star with the New York Rangers National Hockey League team, and at present is playing with St. Paul, his home town sextette. Bud Heximer, of the Ponies, got the most doubles, 40, during the season.

• • •

Boston Bruins, of the N.H.L., will play their annual match in aid of Kiwanis charities in Ottawa on Tuesday, Feb. 25, it was announced last night. Arrangements have been completed by the Kiwanis Club to have the Bruins meet Senators of the Quebec League on that date. The Bruins, who have appeared in Ottawa regularly each season in the past will go to Kingston after playing there and engage in a match in aid of the Hockey Hall of Fame.

HUSKIES WALLOP KNICKERBOCKERS

New York, Jan. 9. (AP)—Red Rolfe, who as a star baseball player with Newark of the International League spelled trouble whenever the Bears invaded Toronto, today is the fair-haired boy of the Ontario capital.

Rolfe who went on to fame and glory as a star third baseman with the New York Yankees, has converted a hapless crew into a determined, fighting quintet since he undertook to coach Toronto Huskies of the Basketball Association of America some six weeks ago.

In walloping the highly-regarded New York Knickbockers 76-63 last night, the Huskies registered their sixth victory in nine starts since Rolfe took charge, to bring their overall record to a passing 11 wins and 15 defeats. They now are only one game behind the fourth-place Providence Rollers in the Eastern Division.

"Credit for much of our success of late must go to our recent acquisitions from Cleveland, Clarence Hermsen and Dick Schultz have proved capable reinforcements," said Rolfe last night. "I expect Leo Mogus, who is not yet in the best shape, to help us in the near future."

The boys are determined and fighting for every basket. They refuse to be the doormat of the League and I expect them to be battling for second place in the near future.

Hermsen and Schultz paced the Huskies' attack last night they scored 38 points between them, with high scoring honors going to Schultz who score 20 markers.

ASSOC. DRAFTS 'PURITY CODE'

New York, Jan. 9 (AP)—The 252 member colleges of the National Collegiate Athletic Association were under moral obligation today to abide by the group's newly-drafted "purity code" and to start cleaning their athletic houses immediately.

Actually, the set of five principles governing the conduct of intercollegiate athletics which were approved at the concluding session of the N C A A. yesterday do not go into effect until the next annual meeting in 1948.

Between now and then, the code with its implementation clause providing sanctions against non-conformist schools in the form of a schedule boycott, will be written into the constitution by a committee appointed for that purpose.

"This will give the colleges a year of grace to get cleaned up and adjust their conference rules, where necessary, to conform to our rules," explained Prof. Karl E. Leib, Iowa's faculty chairman of athletics who was elected president for 1947.

PARIS CONVICTED OF FOOTBALL FIX ATTEMPT

Several Questions for the League to Ponder Over Left From Trial

By SID FEDER

New York, Jan. 9 (AP)— The loudest scandal in professional sports since the Chicago Black Sox case has resulted in the conviction of the man accused of trying to fix the National Football League's 1946 championship game, but several questions for the league to ponder were left over today from the trial of Alvin J. Paris.

Chief of these are:

1. What training and conditioning rules would permit valuable players such as passing ace Frank Filchock and fullback Merle Hapes to hit the night club belt until the wee hours only a few days before an important game, and what precautions—if any—are taken to prevent it?

Both the players testified they were in the Copacabana night club with Paris until 4 a.m., December 1, only seven days before the New York Giants were to meet the Washington Redskins for the league's eastern championship.

2. How can a gambler become acquainted with important players, know them well enough to try to bribe them to throw a game, and actually be able to visit the club's training camp and talk to them two days before the title tilt—without some official becoming inquisitive enough to check up on the man's identity and activities?

3. How can a gambler ascertain the club's condition and injuries—testimony at the trial said Paris knew when Frank Reagan was to play in place of the injured Bill Paschal—and procure other information helpful to gamblers?

At the trial, it was testified he even knew such private information as the amount a player would receive as a share of the players' pool in the title game. Assistant District Attorney George Monaghan asserted during the trial Paris was able to give an Elizabeth, N.J., bookmaking office "a blow by blow description of his progress in destroying these players."

National League czar Bert Bell today is pondering possible action against Hapes and Filchock for withholding information of the bribe offer from their coaches.

Paris' sentence has yet to be handed down.

SULLIVAN AWARD MADE TO ARNOLD TUCKER OF ARMY

'Brains' of Team Considered Outstanding the Amateur Athlete of 1946

By MURRAY ROSE

The quiet, 22-year-old "brain" of the greatest gridiron machine ever fielded by the military academy, won the signal distinction in the closest vote in the Sullivan trophy's 17-year history.

And by nosing out Johnny Lujack, quarterback of Notre Dame's equally magnificent eleven, and Bill Smith, the brilliant, record-holding swimmer from Honolulu, Tucker brought West Point and football the coveted award for the second consecutive year.

The prize for 1945 went to Felix (Doc) Blanchard, Army's line-cracking fullback and three-time All-America. In the previous 16 polls conducted by the Amateur Athletic Union, track had ten winners, golf two, swimming, tennis, rowing and football one each.

In the nationwide balloting for the amateur athlete who "by performance, example and good influence did most to advance the cause of good sportsmanship," Tucker, a 22-year-old first classman from Miami, Fla., received 597 points to 566 for Smith and 546 for Lujack.

The points were compiled on a basis of five for first, three for second and one for third place and it was noted that all ten finalists in the voting reached at least one top nomination each.

Following the top three came Henry Wittenberg, New York, five-time national AAU heavyweight wrestling champion, 362 points; Jimmy Mclane, 16-year-old Akron, O., swimming champion, 328; and Miss Zoe Ann Olsen, 15-year-old Oakland, Calif., fancy diver, 314.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

Edmonton, Jan. 9. (CP)—Supporters of the Lethbridge (Alta.) Native Sons believe they have the most successful, if not the best junior hockey team in Canada. . . . The Sons have gone 14 straight games without a defeat and their victims include Moose Jaws Canucks and Edmonton Canadians in exhibition jousts. . . . The Southern Alberta Junior League leaders have scored an average of more than eight goals in each game so far.

Most of the players are home-town products and all but one are eligible for junior ranks next season. . . A supporter of Edmonton Canadians says that Native Sons' real test will come when they invade the home ice of a topnotch age-limit team and the Lethbridge officials plan just that.

In mid-January the Southwestern Alberta team will go on tour with games scheduled against the cream of the West—Edmonton Canadians, Regina Pats, Moose Jaw Canucks and Brandon Elks.

Native Sons' best point-makers are Odie Lowe Jr., with 49 and Bill Ramsden with 34. . .Rawsden comes from Winnipeg Rangers.

On the Western Canada Senior League front, little attention is being paid the question of making the circuit into a semi-pro or minor pro loop. . . The teams want to play for the Allan Cup —something they couldn't do if they became outright pros. . . But most important is the question of taxes. . .The tax on professional sports events is much higher than an amateur shows. . . . The clubs would have to lose a lot of their profits if they went professional officially and would get no definite advantage in return. . . To a club like Edmonton Flyers who draw an average of 6,000 fans to home games this steeper tax would mean a big chunk of dough at the end of the season.

Edmonton Flyers are unique among the Grade A Senior teams in the country—nearly all the players are home-town products . . .The club has about 18 players on its list and of these only two of these learned their hockey outside the Alberta capital. . . And one of these, Elmer (The Shadow) Kreller, played most of his junior years in Edmonton. . . The other is Bob Solinger, dashing 21-year-old defenceman regarded by many fans as the best pro prospect in the Western Canada League.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When you play with Notta Hartner you get very tired of cart'n'r. She's a dish that drives you mad. Not a thing you say will smarten'r. She reminds you of a partner that you wish you never had.

Come again to this pair of hands:

SOUTH
♠4
♥A Q J 5 4 3 2
♦7 4 2
♣Q 6
NORTH
♠A 6 5 2
♥K
♦A 6 5
♣A K 10 8 3

South passed and north opens with one club. The south cards are certainly good enough for some kind of responding bid. Obviously, it will be a takeout to the heart suit.

So, it is only a question of how high the first heart bid will be. And a responding bid is either with a jump or without a jump.

A jump guarantees tricks enough to help make a game. An opener says he has at least five tricks. Until trump is determined, a game may need 11 tricks. So, a first jump takeout shows six tricks.

But an immediate jump also promises two sure tricks. And this south hand contains only one; the heart ace. Despite the six tricks there, shortage of a sure trick keeps it from being a jump.

All this tells you that the first south response is a takeout to hearts without a jump. The immediate reply, therefore, is a bid of one heart. Is that bad? No.

When partner takes you out, it is a date. And he ain't foolin'. He says he wants to hear from you again. In bridge, a takeout by partner means a bid in a suit you have not mentioned.

He may have another suit to show you. His suit may be strong enough to bid a second time. He may have support for a suit of yours. He may have no-trump bids. In any case, he wants another chance to bid.

All this is to impress upon you that a takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. Partner must bid again. Whatever else you have can be told later.

Raymond Massey has signed with R.K.O. for one of the starring roles in the screen version of Eugene O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra" with Rosalind Russell and Kirk Douglas, which Dudley Nichols will produce and direct from his own screen play.

Massey's role will be that of Brig.-Gen. Ezra Mannon. Miss Russell will play Lavinia, the general's daughter, and Douglas will be seen as Peter Niles, her frustrated suitor.

Ann Todd will play opposite Ray Milland in the thriller, "For Her To See", which Hal Wallis will produce at Paramount's Denham Studios in England late in the spring. Miss Todd has just signed a new contract with J. Arthur Rank. Her appearance in the Paramount picture will be on loan.

Pianist Jose Iturbi is reported to have given Joe Pasternak, who produced most of his pictures, a genuine Rubens painting for Christmas.

Richard Ney will play the leading live role opposite Gene Tierney in "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir" Rex Harrison is holding down the co-star spot playing the ghost who interferes so successfully in the romance between the two live characters. Also in the cast are Edna Best, Robert Coote and Victoria Horne.

Jane Russell has signed a new contract with Howard Hughes with a "substantial increase" in salary which rumor sets at $750 a week—twice her former salary. The new contract runs four years without options.

"The Lost Weekend", which brought Ray Milland the Academy Award last year for best American performance by an actor and the Cannes film festival award for best world performance, has been judged best feature in the Film Daily's 25th annual "ten best pictures" poll, a canvass of 559 newspaper and radio critics and reviewers.

Runners-up in the Daily's poll were "The Green Years", "Anna and the King of Siam", "The Bells of St. Mary's", "Spellbound", "Saratoga Trunk", "Henry V", "Notorious", and "Leave Her To Heaven".

PETE REISER'S ARM IMPROVED

St. Louis, Jan. 9. (AP)—Pete Reiser, stellar Brooklyn outfielder whose throwing arm caused him no end of trouble last season, said yesterday he believed a recent operation had cured the ailment.

Reiser had his arm out of the sling for the first time since an operation last month for a separated clavicle and said he felt he would be ready to go when the Dodgers start Spring training.

"The intense pain I felt whenever I started to throw is gone," said Reiser.

He said he had been out of touch with the Dodger management since before the operation and had no idea what contract terms he would be offered.

Romance, Preferred

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

INSTALMENT ONE

The black letters on the white sign read, "Ocean City." Arlen slowed down her small roadster as she turned the corner into Baltimore Avenue and rode several blocks along a sunny street dotted with sunburned people in bathing suits and gay beach pajamas. The roar of the ocean was in her ears and the salt air filled her lungs. She felt tired and dusty from her long lonely drive.

At the desk of a hotel on the beach she wrote, "Arlen Leeds, Ruxton, Maryland," in a large bold scrawl, and followed the porter up two flights of carpeted steps into a bedroom overlooking the ocean. The porter murmured "Thank you" for a generous tip and went out, leaving Arlen closed in with the aching loneliness and bitterness that had driven her from home.

The mirror on the white dresser reflected a tall and rather graceful girl going about the mechanical business of unpacking and hanging up several pretty dresses; a girl with soft yellow hair that framed a face both sensitive and strong. When she drew her dark brows together, her eyes, deep hazel, had temper and passion in them though ordinarily they were warm laughing eyes. Today in every movement there was a gesture of defiance, even in the tears that quivered near her lashes.

When she had dressed in a white knitted frock and slipped her bare feet into tall-heeled white sandals, she stood before the mirror and squared her shoulders. "I won't go back. I shall never go back."

• • •

The dining room of the hotel was cool and cheerful. As Arlen followed the waiter to a small table by the window, her attention was attracted by a young man, though certainly she was in no mood to notice even a man so good looking. She ordered luncheon, lighted a cigaret, and looked at him again.

He was talking with a small wiry little man not less than eighty years old with a white beard which gave him a distinguished appearance. The young man looked both interested and amused. Later Arlen was to think that her first impression of Renny Maynard, her first adjective describing him, fitted him perfectly —amused. At everything and every one he looked with the poised amusement of a man standing on the outside—invulnerable. Obviously he was a man of the world. There was no self-consciousness about him. He was neither young enough to pay petty compliments nor old enough to be foolish. He would, she thought with quick perception, say the correct things, dance perfectly, and order the best drinks.

Attacking the chicken with the appetite of a hungry traveller, she quite forgot about tall Renny Maynard in a white linen suit. Somehow, being here in this strange room seemed grotesquely unreal, quiet. Arlen felt some of her tenseness subside and give away to a drowsy contentment. Over dessert she lighted another cigaret and contemplated what lay before her.

• • •

At three o'clock in the afternoon the beach was crowded. Young mothers ran after their errant toddling infants. Sun-browned boys and brown girls played ball over other people's heads. The sun beat down steadily. There was the usual, "Oh, it's so cold," at the first contact with the ocean. There was much screaming and yelling and high excitement.

Arlen spread her robe on the hot sand, sat down, put on her sun glasses, and exposed an already brown body to the sun.

There were, she discovered, only two damp matches when she attempted to light a cigaret in the mild breeze. Each one gave a feeble glow and went out. Suddenly as she sat there with a cigaret between her lips, a lighter with a brave flame was applied to it. She turned, looked up at the donor, and frowned. "Thank you," she said, and through the dark glasses Renny Maynard looked handsome and brown in abbreviated swimming trunks with a white robe thrown over his arm.

She never felt that their acquaintance began by a beach flirtation. Of course, she never knew that Renny had walked up the beach twice looking for the proud head of yellow hair that had attracted him in the dining room and finally, espying her in a blue silk bathing suit, had arrived at the psychological moment when damp matches would not kindle a flame.

He sat down beside her and drew his long legs up under him. A shrill voice behind him calling his name caused both him and Arlen to turn simultaneously and see the little man with the white beard waving his arms. Renny got up and went to him. He came back, smiling.

Arlen asked, "Who is he?"

"He's Elias Winstead, my oldest friend and my most cherished client." He turned dark, deep-set eyes on her and said, "Now that introductions are in order . . . I'm Renny Maynard."

Arlen put out a brown hand. Since she had passed the curtsying stage, she had always held out her hand to people she liked. Karen said it was passe, masculine. But invariably that brown hand was thrust forward.

"I'm Arlen Leeds. I believe we're staying at the same hotel."

"I believe so," he said deeply and they smiled at each other. "Have you ever been here before? I haven't, and I rather like it."

"I haven't been here since I was a child." She looked away, her mouth suddenly grim, thinking, "I remember that time. I remember it so well! Mother and Father and I; and we had such a good time, Mother sitting on the beach laughing while Father held me in his arms as we jumped the waves. Mother! Now . . . "

While Maynard looked at her, conscious of that suddening tightening of her mouth, she pulled on the white cap over her hair and got up. As she walked to the water's edge, he looked at her, thinking her very lovely. She glanced back. "Coming in?"

The first breaker made her legs unsteady and all but took her breath. At that moment his arm caught her. "Steady there," he said. Arlen laughed. They plunged into the cold water together, fought the surf until they were beyond the boiling waves, and then both began to swim.

Storm clouds gathered overhead seemingly in a moment. Dark clouds rolled together, making menacing shadows. Mothers on the beach quickly gathered up their offspring and hurried towards their hotels. There was a sudden scramble for safety mid high shreiks as the first peal of thunder rang forth after a splinter of lightning ran vertically from the sky.

Renny Maynard swam close.

"Frightened?"

"Not at all. We'd better go in."

"I'll go behind you. Keep away from the jetty."

As each wave approached, a small mountain topped by salty foam, she stretched out, her arms before her, and rode it in. Salt stung her eyes. The undertow was fierce. She struggled against it, thinking, "he's behind me. I'm not afraid." A torrent of rain beat against her face and head. With the last ounce of energy she gained the beach and got to her feet. He put her robe around her and they climbed the steep sandy bank and hurried to the basement beneath the hotel.

"I feel," she said, shivering, "as though I've been lashed. I simply ache."

"You're quite a fighter," said Renny, rain dripping from his dark hair.

She turned and looked up. "You should see me in one of my fighting moods. Thank you," she said, "for being there."

Reluctantly she was awakened from a warm sleep about six by repeated knocks on her door. Wrapping a negligee around her, she opened it, and a grinning porter held out a bottle of wine with a note. When she closed the door, she took the note from the envelope." Wine is excellent for safe-guarding one from a cold," she read. Arlen smiled and put the bottle on her dresser. "A momento of Renny Maynard and a summer storm."

When she went into the dining room that evening wearing a pale green evening dress, her hair smooth and bright and shining, she looked very different from the dripping, fighting, shivering girl in the ocean. Renny nodded and smiled. Mr. Winstead smiled, too, like a feeble child. Dinner was considerably less lonely than luncheon with Renny Maynard sitting near.

At nine o'clock she had not stirred from the chair on the porch except to go upstairs and fetch a short silk coat. The rain had stopped. Patches of light were breaking through the darkness. The boardwalk was filled with couples hurrying to the pier to dance.

"Now that Mr. Winstead is safely in bed . . . "

Arlen looked up. Renny smiled. "Of course," he said, "I didn't think I'd be lucky enough to find you here." He put his pipe between his teeth. "Shall we walk, Miss Leeds? There doesn't seem to be much else to do."

She had a feeling of well-being, a feeling of security with him. He did not seem at all a stranger. He was tolerant and kind and she knew that all too willingly she could warm her cold hands at tolerance and kindness. That he was not curious about a girl being at a hotel alone, a girl whose mouth was often grim and bitter, pleased her and yet, on the other hand, his lack of curiosity piqued her into wanting to tell him why she was here.

They walked to a deserted end of the boardwalk and paused under an arc light. Music from some distant hotel floated out on the air. Arlen's eyes were hidden. Casual conversation had worn thin. All the misery were and hurt of the past months tapped against the door of her mind to be said to Renny Maynard who would understand. Withholding it, disguising it under the cool exterior almost made her ill. Brave defiance left her. She had never helt more in need of a friend.

Leaning against the railing, she looked at him, searching his face, making sure that she wasn't wrong in her opinion of him.

"Go on," he said. "Tell me." He took his pipe from his mouth. "You are running away from something, perhaps an unhappy love affair. You are fighting something. A girl of your type doesn't come to a seaside resort alone. There's usually a mother or a friend or a young man along. When I saw you today, I knew you were taking flight from something that is bothering you terribly."

She looked out on the lonely beach and at the waves breaking high. They seemed to sing a curious sort of melody, those waves, a tragic, mocking melody to make people feel small. And though she knew she was justified in her actions, she felt a little ashamed. Renny Maynard seemed so above and so apart from what she had to tell him.

"It's not an unhappy love affair," said Arlen in a husky voice. "It's my home—something closer to me than a love affair. It involves my father and my . . . my stepmother. Now you think I'm a silly girl who resents her father's marriage just because it is a second marriage. No, it's more than that. I resent my stepmother who is exactly three years my senior because she's shallow and calculating—because she married my father for his money. If she had loved him, I could have gotten over the hurt of seeing some other woman take my mother's place. But Karen . . . " She paused, remembering Karen's sulky beautiful face. "Not only doesn't she love him, she won't be faithful to him, I" she drew in her breath, "I hate it!"

"And what was your home, has ceased to be your home," he said thoughtfully, "and has become a hotbed of misunderstanding and lies. And there's always the question of money . . . "

"My father isn't wealthy," Arlen said earnestly. "All the money he has he inherited from my mother. Do you see?" She turned a troubled face to him. "Karen is living on my mother's money, living with everything my mother cherished and loved. Last night when she came down flaunting Mother's pearls, I couldn't stand it. I made a frightful scene at the table. I lost my temper. Oh, it was awful! And this morning I drove down here to cool off. It's not only Karen, you see, wearing my mother's jewels, but my father is making such a fool of himself and hating me . . . "

"Are you going back?" he asked.

She looked away. "I don't know what I'm going to do. Father told me not to come back until I could respect his wife—respect that cheap woman. I can't. I haven't very much money . . . "

He shot a quick glance at her "There's marriage, you know."

"Yes," she said gravely. "There's a boy at home who wants to marry me. But I don't want to marry before I've lived. If I marry Philip, I'll feel it's the end of my life. Marriage shouldn't do that. It should be the beginning." She smiled. "I've always had such nice illusions about love and marriage. I want to keep them. I don't want to marry for security because I'm afraid of life —or for a refuge. Do you understand? I'm sorry for talking so much. All this can't possibly interest you."

FIRST AIR COMBAT

The first air combat occurred in the First World War when a British pilot flew over a German plane and shot at it with a revolver.

SANITATION COULD HELP

Scientists say that the Amazon valley could be made healthful for white settlers if modern sanitation methods were introduced.

Mark Churchill's Boer War Ambush

Durban, South Africa, (CP)—The South African historical monuments commission has decided to place a memorial plaque in the Frere district of Natal where Winston Churchill was ambushed and captured by the Boers in 1899.

Of those who were ambushed, Churchill and one other man are believed to be the only persons still alive. Churchill's comrade, 83-year-old Charles Wagner, who drove the armored train that was ambushed, has just visited the scene of the fight near Chievely. He showed a member of the historical monuments commission the exact spot for the memorial plaque.

Wagner clearly remembers how the train was ambushed and how he and Churchill struggled to push the derailed trucks over an embankment while Boer bullets whizzed past them.

At the time Churchill said to Wagner: "I'll see you get a medal for this." Eight years afterwards the medal arrived—an Albert Medal, first class.

Wagner still receives occasional letters from Churchill. In his latest letter Churchill said he was looking forward to seeing Wagner when he visits the Union next year.

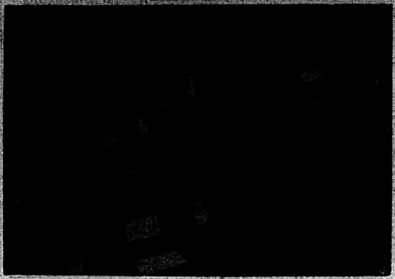
LOYAL CANADIANS RECEIVE CITIZENSHIP CERTIFICATES AT OTTAWA



"I speak as a Canadian," said Prime Minister Mackenzie King as he addressed the distinguished gathering assembled to witness the Canadian citizenship ceremony in the supreme court at Ottawa. Flanked by the former secretary of state, Paul Martin, and Hon. Colin Gibson, secretary of state, Mr. King expressed his delight at having been chosen as Citizen No. 1, and welcomed the others as fellow Canadians.

HELD FOR BEATING DRIVER AFTER WILD BUS RIDE

COUNTY BAILIFF BECOMES BARONET

Swansea, Wales, Jan. 9 (CP)—Herbert Edward Morris, 62-year-old county clerk bailiff, has just become baronet of Clasemont but he's going to keep his job.

"I am directed by the secretary of state to inform you that the name of Sir Herbert Edward Morris has been placed on the official roll of the baronetage as having succeeded to the baronetcy of Morris of Clasemont," said a letter he received from the registrar.

Last recorded holder of the title, created 140 years ago, was Sir Armine Morris who died in 1937. George Cecil Morris of Sydney, Australia, succeeded at the age of 86 but never used the title.

"I won't take it unless I have to," he told newspapermen. "I'm just lying low. I don't want my title. I want to be left here with my flowers."

The new baronet is George Morris's nephew and son of the fifth son of the third baronet.

"I am going to carry on with my present work," he said in an interview. He had been concerned about the heritage not so much for himself as for his successors—85-year-old George Lockwood Morris, of Henley-on-Thames, whose son, next in line, is Cedric Morris, the artist.

Sir Herbert has worked in the county court for 21 years after a similar period in the army.

His arms: "Sable, on a saltire engrailed ermine a bezant, charged with a cross couped gules." His crest: "A lion rampant or, charged on the shoulder with a cross couped gules, within a chain in the form of an arch or."

Couple Make Home On Little Island In Thames River

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Trowlock Island, Teddington, England, (CP)—Ex-Sgt. Alfred Meek and his newly-wed wife wanted to live somewhere "different". So they went to live on an island in the Thames.

They chose Trowlock, a small sausage-shaped island near Kingston Bridge, because Meek had a boat moored there and Trowlock is a paradise for boaters in Summer. They rented a small white-painted, timbered bungalow overlooking a fast-flowing backwater and moved in—cat, canary and all.

Only 20 feet of water divide the island from the mainland and Meek crossed it daily in a dinghy on his way to work. It was lovely till the floods came.

One morning, the dinghy was carried out of control by the torrent and overturned. Meek swam home shivering while the boat vanished.

He bridged the water with two punts tied end to end. But there were other troubles to contend with. The one drinking water tap on the island froze up. The river overflowed the bank, submerging the garden and wetting the Meek's dining room carpet. Rats outmanoeuvred Whisky, the cat, and chewed the curtains and the tablecloths. Pipes funnelling river water into the house for washing and cleaning, froze and burst.

Difficulties a Challenge

"We regard difficulties as a challenge," said Alfred, a burly six-footer, formerly with the Grenadier Guards, "We said we were going to do something different and we have. If there are further troubles we shall meet them".

The few bungalows on Trowlock Island—once visited by Charles Dickens in a friend's sailing yacht—have gas lighting and heating. There is no electricity and open fires of any kind are banned by the small limited company owning the property.

One family has lived on Trowlock for 21 years. They say that Summer brings many compensations for Winter hardships.

Trowlock Islanders do not lock their doors and in 15 years there has been only one burglary—by a boy who swam across from the mainland and raided a toolshed.

When Teddington Lock, one mile down the river, was bombed in 1942 Trowlock ceased to be an island. It was left high and dry by rapidly receding waters and the islanders walked along the river bed picking up long-submerged valuables, one of them a diamond bracelet.

This Man's Back Ached So Could Hardly Do His Work
Often Had Bad Pains in Limbs, Dizzy Spells and Throbbing Headaches. Stomach Upset, Got Indigestion, Gas Pains and Heartburn. Relates How Syntona Helped Him.
"My chief reason for taking Syntona was because of the severe pains that had settled in my back and limbs," said Mr. Clifford Wilson, Port Burwell, Ontario, in a recent interview.
"These pains were often so bad I could hardly do my work. If I stooped over I had difficulty straightening up again. My rest and sleep were broken several times at night and this was telling on me. I often felt dizzy, spots floated before my eyes, I was subject to bad headaches and always had indigestion and gas in my stomach after meals. The gas made me short of breath, I would be troubled with sour acid risings and dizzy spells.
"I got very little relief from anything I ever took, so hearing how Syntona was doing so much good around here I got some and that was one of the best things I ever did.
"This medicine gave me really astonishing relief from my digestive troubles and I was soon eating three square meals a day with no sign of gas, indigestion or heartburn afterward. I began to pick up some of the weight I had lost, and as I continued with the treatment, gradually the backaches and pains in my limbs went away.
"Now my sleep is sound and refreshing and I have more energy to do my work. I haven't had a headache or dizzy feeling lately and I sure feel a lot different from what I did only a few weeks ago."
Syntona is made from 12 of Nature's Finest Herbs and Roots which have a beneficial effect on the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels, relieves many symptoms due to common disorders of these organs and at the same time improves assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.
Sold and recommended in Belleville at Dolan The Druggist.

Seized Exhibits On Five Occasions In Torso Slaying

Defence Counsel Clarifies Points for Court of Appeal

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Jan. 10—(CP)—Counsel for Mrs. Evelyn Dick, appealing her conviction as a torso-murderer of her husband last March hammered away today in the Ontario Court of Appeal at the contention that Mrs. Dick received insufficient warning, or no warning at all before making statements to police.

This was particularly so, said John Robinette, K.C., the counsel for the woman convicted to be hanged in Hamilton Feb. 1, in connection with her final statement which she said was a true version of the manner in which John Dick, Hamilton street car driver, was killed by William Bohozuk, also charged with the crime.

That last statement was given police April 12, last, on a drive in which Mrs. Dick drove them over the murder route but, said her counsel, she received no warning before talking to policemen, in fact none until the drive was over and she was provided with writing materials, at which time she said she did not wish to make a statement.

Counsel Agrees.

The statement, as given to the trial jury before Mr. Justice F. H. Barlow in Hamilton last October was in question and answer form and based on policemen's notes.

Mr. Justice J. B. Aylesworth suggested the manner of the policemen may have been such that Mrs. Dick thought she could talk freely without her words being used against her and that what she said would only be used against her if it was a written and signed statement.

"I agree that the evidence lends itself to that interpretation," said Mr. Robinette, saying he would protest "most savagely" against this statement having been admitted as evidence and adding that this was the only statement to which the trial judge made direct reference, in his charge to the jury.

Reading of the statements occupied the whole morning session up to luncheon adjournment.

At the outset of today's sitting Mr. Robinette said police made seizures of exhibits on five separate occasions in this case on dates extending from March 19 to April 18.

Yesterday the judges expressed interest in who might have had access to the exhibits after Mrs. Dick's arrest March 19, three days after her husband's torso was found on Hamilton mountain.

Mrs. Dick's arrest preceded by one day the arrest of William Bohozuk, also charged with the killing, said Mr. Robinette who is basing the appeal on a claim of misdirection of the trial jury by Mr. Justice F. H. Barlow and also that Mrs. Dick was not properly warned by police before making statements.

The accused woman's father, 68-year-old Donald MacLean, also charged with the murder, was arrested April 12 and her mother, Mrs. Alexandra MacLean "sometime in the month of April."

First police seizures, according to evidence at the trial, were made at Mrs. Dick's Carrick Ave. house in Hamilton on March 19, the day she was arrested, said Mr. Robinette. Police recovered a street-car ticket punch, opened a trunk in the attic and found a street-car man's money changer, strips of car tickets, a ticket holder and a motor blanket.

All these articles were exhibits in the trial of the convicted woman for the slaying of her street-car-driving husband.

Also on March 19 police seized a .32 revolver at the Rosslyn Ave. home of Mr. MacLean.

The next day, March 20, police recovered a pair of red-rubber boots at Mrs. Dick's home, boots which Mrs. MacLean said she shared with her daughter. They went, too, to the home of William Bohozuk, friend of Evelyn, who was arrested March 30, and seized his pistol.

On March 2 police found a second trunk at Mrs. Dick's home and it had been broken open. That day they took from the yard ashes which, it was brought out at the trial, were found to contain remains of human bones.

Found Dick's Watch.

A day later at Carrick avenue, police found John Dick's watch, his watch-chain and a tooth of Mrs. Dick. That day at Donald MacLean's home they recovered a blood-stained pair of John Dick's shoes, loose street car tickets and $4,400 in cash.

On March 26 at the Donald MacLean home, where he lived away from his estranged wife, police noted the course of two bullets in the basement and found one spent bullet and a box of .32 calibre ammunition.

Next and final seizure was that of a lady's sewing box containing stained street car driver's uniform buttons on April 18.

Having given their Lordships this information Mr. Robinette resumed then his reading of statements given police which he was reading at adjournment yesterday after putting forward the claim she had not received proper police warning before making the declarations.

Question, Answer Form.

They were in question-and-answer form, told of her activities March 6, the day John Dick was last seen alive and recounted hard feeling between Bohozuk and her husband because of Bohozuk's attention to her.

In the statement read first today Mrs. Dick recounted Bohozuk's alleged plan to kill John, a plan which she said was not carried to its conclusion.

Previously she had said a Windsor gang did the killing and she helped dispose of the body.

These statements all were admitted as evidence at the trial, over protests of defence counsel and the quiet business-like atmosphere of the appeal court seemed only to make the lurid stories more ludicrous as Mr. Robinette read them in a strong, well-rounded voice.

Crown Says Nothing

To this point the Crown—which technically is the defence in this case which Mrs. Dick hopes will save her from execution—had said nothing in this appeal and Mr. Robinette said that he would not likely finish the appellant's side of things before late Monday, possibly later.

Listening intently to his review of the trial evidence were Deputy-Attorney-General Cecil Snyder and T. J. Rigney, who was Special Crown Prosecutor during the trial where he and Hamilton's Crown Attorney, Harvey McCullough, joined in reading Mrs. Dick's statement on a question-and-answer basis, a procedure Mr. Robinette has protested as being too dramatic and something which, through improper emphasis, might unduly influence a jury.

Read From Evidence

Each judge and the two Crown legal experts followed Mr. Robinette closely as he read from the bound volumes of the trial evidence—more than 1,000 pages of testimony. Included were such statements as Mrs. Dick saying she was told "we've got John at last" which in this small, crowded, appeal courtroom were mere words, not the dramatic testimony which electrified the trial courtroom at Hamilton last October.

Nobody batted an eye at such statements of Mrs. Dick as "I went home and told my mother John had been done away with and she said, 'well they tried long enough.'"

"No warning whatever was given to the accused on this occasion," read Mr Robinette from trial evidence as regards Mrs. Dick's final statement given police on April 12 when she conducted Inspector Charles Wood and Detective Clarence Preston on a motor ride over the March 6 murder route.

"This is the crucial statement, your Lordships," said Mr. Robinette. "It was emphasized by the learned trial judge."

He explained that it was not something taken down from the lips of the accused and signed but was given the court by the police officers, in a question and answer narrative from their notes of what was said during the motor drive when Mrs. Dick allegedly told them how, and when, and where her husband was killed.

Only One Referred To.

The statement said previous statements were not true, that this was the true statement.

NIGHT SUPERVISOR OF EDDY COMPANY HELD BY POLICE

Arrested in Connection With Black Market Trafficking in Stolen Ration Coupons

Ottawa, Jan. 10—(CP)—Five men were named in police court today as alleged conspirators of G. Howard Lamb, night supervisor of a paper mill at nearby Hull, Que., in black market dealings in stolen ration coupons.

Lamb, taken into custody here early today as Royal Canadian Mounted Police struck after an investigation into the disappearance of thousands of butter, sugar and meat coupons from the company's premises, obtained a week's adjournment when he appeared in magistrate's court for arraignment on four charges.

Named with him in a warrant charging conspiracy to "obtain and transfer ration documents" were Edward Chartrand, Emile Ladouceur, James Larose, Robert James Hartley and Augustin Thibauld, along with "others unknown."

None of these had been taken into custody today, but Magistrate Glenn Strike was informed by the Crown that further charges were to be laid.

Expect Arrests Shortly

The arrests, it was expected, would be made shortly.

First man taken into custody following several months of R. C. M. P. investigation, Lamb appeared in court without a lawyer and asked for the adjournment in order to obtain counsel.

He also sought bail, and the magistrate said he would advise the amount later in the day.

The alleged offences, according to the warrants, took place between Feb. 1 and Oct. 31 of last year.

These were the charges:

1. Unlawfully obtaining rationed foods.
2. Illegally obtaining ration coupons.
3. Conspiracy to obtain ration coupons illegally.
4. Making false statements to police.

His arrest was made under the authority of Prices Board enforcement regulations.

Began Last September.

For police and Prices Board, the case already was months old. It began last September when obviously illegal coupons began turning up at local ration boards and reached a focal point when police discovered tiny fragments of pulpwood adhering to the important little pieces of paper.

They traced their source to the rambling Hull plant of the Eddy Company, where for some time coupons had been disposed of, under Prices Board supervision, in a large chemical disintegrator, as a paper salvage measure.

Reticent in discussing the case early today, police admitted the alleged black market was widespread and indicated that the case would be one of the "biggest" since food rationing went into effect.

Apart from exonerating the Eddy Company and publicly thanking it for its co-operation, government officials have refused consistently to discuss even the smallest details.

Placed in Disintegrator.

A company statement said the coupons were brought to the plant "at infrequent intervals" and were placed in the chemical disintegrator under the surveillance of two Prices Board officials.

However, it was learned that the disintegrator, a large vat with whirling paddles known as a "beater," was used normally for converting waste paper into new paper products. One source said it was likely the coupons, pasted on sheets and baled, were put into the beater while the responsible officials looked on and taken out—partially damaged—after they had left.

Coupons destroyed at the Eddy mill were collected only in the Ottawa district, but there was no indication how far afield their distribution may have reached. Normal procedure is for the banks to collect the coupons from storekeepers and turn them over to the local boards for disposal.

Mother Nature Stills Swift Flow Of Water in the Niagara River

Niagara Falls, Jan. 10—(CP)—With a quick sweep of her magic wand, Mother Nature has stilled the swift flow of water in the Niagara River from the base of the Horseshoe Falls to a point 300 yards downstream in the past 24 hours.

Today this stretch of water, into which pours an endless rush of water from the Horseshoe and American Falls, is completely bridged by ice, estimated to be 25 feet deep.

The ice formed so quickly that river observers are looking for a record size bridge if cold weather continues.

It is just nine years ago this month that the 1938 ice jam ripped the old Honeymoon international passenger bridge from its moorings and caused it to plunge to its doom in the gorge below.

Russia Asks Norway For Special Privileges In Spitsbergen Island

Oslo, Jan. 10 (CP).—The Norwegian foreign ministry announced today that Soviet Russia has asked Norway to grant her special privileges in Spitsbergen, Northern Archipelago between Norway and Greenland.

Reuters News Agency said the Norwegian prime minister refused to either deny or confirm the reported Russian demands but added that an alteration to the Spitsbergen Treaty of 1920 was under discussion at Russian request.

(In London, a Foreign Office spokesman said Britain was aware of a request for "some power" to establish a base in the Arctic island group.)

The Spitsbergen Archipelago, composed of one large island and several smaller ones, lies between Norway and Greenland and is only 640 miles from the North Pole at its most northern extremity.

In September, 1941, Allied troops under Canadian command landed there to prevent the Germans using the territory's rich coal deposits.

Last November a group of Soviet scientists, explorers and technicians left Leningrad for Spitsbergen with 18,000 tons of building materials to assist in the restoration of the Soviet-owned mines destroyed by the Germans when they were in occupation later in the war.

A report from London said political observers considered the reported Soviet request to be a direct reply to the United States request of 1945 for military facilities in Iceland.

Although the Icelandic government refused to grant full facilities, they accorded the Americans the right to use the airfield of Keflavik for a limited period during the occupation of Germany by United States troops.

Islands such as Spitsbergen, Iceland and Greenland have become of great strategic importance in view of the possibility of "over the pole" air routes as a short cut between east and west.

Spitsbergen, off the northern coast of Norway, has a total area of about 25,000 square miles.

In September, 1941, Canadian forces landed on the island, seizing valuable coal mines and evacuating almost the entire civilian population.

Ross Munro of The Canadian Press, only war correspondent to accompany the Canadian forces, reported in a dispatch Sept. 9, 1941, that the "landing parties were warmly greeted by the populace which included many Russian miners".

The Canadian forces, supported by British and Norwegian detachments, were under command of Brig. Arthur E. Potts of Saskatoon.

MEAT SITUATION CONTINUES ACUTE IN MOST CENTRES

Agriculture Minister Says Shortage Created by Price Controls on Meat

(By The Canadian Press)

Many Canadians — in Vancouver, Windsor, Toronto, Ottawa, Halifax — today wondered where their next steak was coming from. The meat situation continued acute in scattered centres from coast to coast, and still there was no sign of improvement, nor any undisputed explanation for the scarcity which arose suddenly a few days ago.

But Ontario's Agriculture Minister, T. L. Kennedy, in a statement at Toronto yesterday said flatly there was more meat in the country now than ever before and that the shortage was created by price controls on meat.

With Ontario shoppers hardest-hit in the new scarcity, Col. Kennedy said that stocks available on Ontario farms at present are as heavy as they were a year ago, and roughly 15 per cent above the average run before the war.

"There would be plenty of meat on the market if price controls were taken off," he said.

But the price control angle was a subject of dispute, as were all other explanations of the shortage. Mrs. Ann Arland of Toronto, president of the Housewives' Consumers Association there, said Toronto housewives would hold a mass protest meeting next Monday. She said the shortage was artificial. "It is all part of a plan to end government controls."

Sparse Dinners in Prospect

A Canadian Press survey showed sparse dinners were in prospect for residents of St. Catharines, Owen Sound, Galt, Windsor and Kitchener unless they substituted poultry for the Sunday roast.

Vancouver and Montreal reported the shortage becoming more serious and some Vancouver butchers said they would close on Wednesdays to conserve their dwindling supplies. There was no lamb, pork, or veal in some stores.

Montreal dealers felt the shortage but said it was merely seasonal. In Ottawa some butchers' shelves were showing bottom and expected to be bare by the week-end. Others still had supplies.

At scattered points throughout the prairie provinces, meat was available. To cater to local needs, shipments to the east had been curtailed and the Maritime provinces were feeling the pinch.

A spokesman in Halifax said the seasonal shortage was earlier this year but he felt it was a temporary condition. Two weeks should see an improvement, he said.

HEADS CORNWALL BOARD

Cornwall, Jan. 10 (CP).—J. G. Sutherland, general manager of Canadian Cottons Ltd., here, was last night elected president of the Cornwall Board of Trade. He succeeds C. I. Bacon. Guest speaker at last night's meeting of the Board was Evan McCormick, manager of the Field Service Department, Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

NEW FOUR-CENT POSTAGE STAMP ISSUED MARCH 3

Will Carry Picture of Bell, Inventor of Phone, to Commemorate 100th Anniversary

Ottawa, Jan. 10—(CP)—Canada will lay at least a partial claim to being the homeland of Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, when she issues a new four-cent postage stamp this spring.

The new issue, already engraved and in the hands of the government printer, will commemorate the 100th anniversary of Bell's birth, and will be issued on the centenary of his birthday March 3.

Replacing the wartime stamp which pictured the King in military uniform, the new issue will probably be red in color, bearing a picture of the famous inventor and physicist, and carrying the dates 1847-1947. It will be the first commemorative stamp since 1939, when an issue commemorating the Royal visit was printed.

The issue will point up Canada's claim to being the homeland of the man responsible for one of the foremost steps in world communication in history — the man who has jocosely been made the butt of countless jokes about bathtub disturbances and "interrupting a nation's slumbers."

Born in Scotland.

Bell was actually born in Glasgow, Scotland, and came to Brantford with his parents in 1870. Shortly afterwards, however, he went to Boston to carry on research on his father's system of visible speech.

His dairy indicates that it was while on a visit to Brantford that he conceived the idea for the telephone, and it was in that city he made the first demonstration of his famous invention in 1876.

He moved to Washington, D.C., in 1871, but spent his summers in a house in Cape Breton Island overlooking the sea. Finally he moved to Canada and engaged in aeronautical research, being among a group who produced the first aircraft to fly in the British Empire.

Died in 1922.

He died at Baddeck, N.S., in 1922, and was buried nearby at Beinn Breach.

Decision to place his picture on a postage stamp was understood to have caused some difficulty to the Post Office Department at first because his status as a "Canadian" was in some doubt. However, the stamp will definitely be printed, reliable sources said, and in any case there is no regulation prohibiting a non-Canadian from appearing on a Canadian stamp.

MARSHALL STEPS INTO HOT SPOT AS STATE SECRETARY

May Become Important Figure in Complex Business of Choosing Candidate in 1948

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Jan. 10—(CP)—Gen. George C. Marshall, when he arrives in Washington next week, will step into about the hottest spot ever occupied by a warrior turned statesman.

The 66-year-old former United States army chief of staff will become secretary of state at the most critical peacetime stage of his country's foreign relations.

He will also, however hard he may try to avoid it, become an important figure in the complex business of selecting a candidate for president of the United States in 1948.

Automatically he will become next in line to succeed to the presidency if any unfortunate circumstance removed President Harry Truman from that office.

The general has had 13 months of training in statesmanship as a special representative of the president in China in an attempt to bring peace between the Nationalists and Communists.

That mission was a failure but nobody blames Gen. Marshall.

Now his first major task will be to represent his country and, indirectly, the bulk of the western democracies, in an effort to work out with Russian, British and French foreign ministers, the peace treaties with Germany and Austria.

This peace conference opens in Moscow March 10 and it was the imminence of that potentially long-drawn and highly difficult task that caused James F. Byrnes to resign as secretary of state last Tuesday.

Byrnes A Veteran

Byrnes, only a year older than Gen. Marshall is a veteran of all three estates of government. He was successively a senator, a supreme court judge and the senior minister of the administration.

He succeeded to the state department when that office was in a turmoil. The veteran secretary Cordell Hull, after many years in office, became ill in 1944 and late that year was succeeded by youthful Edward Stettinius, Jr., who held office only a few months when Byrnes was called from retirement to succeed him.

Victory in the war immediately plunged Byrnes into the series of international conferences for which his services as special assistant to President Roosevelt had fitted him.

Only Fringe Touched

But only the fringe of the peace-making has been touched. The real battles—The German Peace Treaty, the peace with Japan, settlement of the atomic bomb issue, and completion of United Nations—have yet to be fought.

That is an indication of what is ahead of Gen. Marshall. Most observer believe he is well fitted for it, physically and mentally.

He became Army Chief of Staff the day Germany invaded Poland, and built an army of less than 200,000 into the most powerful fighting unit the world had ever known.

Russia now will be his great problem in the foreign field. At times he has been popular with the Soviet people, particularly with the army. It would be difficult to learn how the Moscow foreign officials look upon him now.

It is unlikely his Chinese adventure will endear him to the Communists.

Russians are said to appreciate and respect plain talking at high diplomatic levels. It would seem that the new secretary of state will be able to satisfy them in that respect.

U. K. Ambassador to Poland Named Before Military Court at Warsaw

Warsaw, Jan. 10 (AP). — The British Ambassador to Poland was named today before a military tribunal as having received state and military secrets from the outlawed underground Win organization, accused of attempting a coup d'etat against the Polish government.

The charge was disclosed nine days before the scheduled parliamentary elections. Both Britain and the United States have protested that arrangements for the elections do not ensure free voting.

The British ambassador is Sir Victor Cavendish-Bentinck.

The key figure in a sensational high treason trial, Count Grocholski, told the military tribunal that he had delivered to the ambassador information obtained by the underground and through a former employee of the Polish foreign ministry who also is a co-defendant.

The indictment charged Grocholski and three others specifically of conspiracy to overthrow the government in supplying state secrets to a "foreign ambassador in Warsaw".

One of the co-defendants, Waldmir Baczak, 24, formerly attached to the Polish Foreign Ministry, identified in his testimony the "English ambassador".

$37,528,000,000 Budget Proposed By Pres. Truman

Over 11 Billions Earmarked For National Defence

By CHARLES MOLONY

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP)—President Truman proposed today that the United States government spend $37,528,000,000 during the fiscal year which begins next July 1.

His budget message to the Republican Congress thus went more than $8,000,000,000 over the limit some key Republican leaders have set for federal outlays in their determined drive to cut taxes while whittling away at the mammoth national debt.

Chairman Styles Bridges (Rep.-N.H.) chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, issued an immediate statement calling the message "a cold shock to the American tax-paying public" which had expected "tax reduction, debt reduction and cost-of-living reduction."

Mr. Truman earmarked $11,587,000,000—or nearly a third of the total—for national defence and again ignored Republican demands that this item should be held to $10,000,000,000 or less.

His recommended total of $37,528,000,000 is $4,995,000,000 under his revised estimate on what it is costing the United States government to operate this year and $1,668,000,000 higher than the budget he submitted just a year ago.

First Balanced Budget in 18 years

Even so, the President said the treasury will close its books on June 30, 1948, with its first balanced budget in 18 years—and with a $202,000,000 surplus to boot—provided there are no tax cuts in the next 18 months. He placed estimated income for the coming year at $37,730,000,000—a drop of $2,500,000,000 from the current fiscal period.

In addition to reiterating his plea for Congress to leave wartime income tax rates in effect, Mr. Truman prodded the lawmakers to:

1. Prevent a $1,200,000,000-a-year cut now scheduled to take effect July 1 in excise taxes on liquor, beer, wine, furs, jewelry, cosmetics, movie admissions, night club bills, telephone service and other items.

2. Increase postal rates sufficiently to wipe out the post office department's $352,000,000 operating deficit.

If Congress accepts the recommendations on excise taxes and postal rates, the President said, it can increase the $202,000,000 margin of surplus—which he termed "very light—to $1,800,000,000.

In contrast, he added that he now expects the current fiscal year, which ends June 30, to wind up with a deficit of $2,293,000,000—$393,000,000 worse than he estimated last August.

Rules Man Guilty Who Drives Knowing He Will Be Sleepy

Mimico, Jan. 10—(CP)—A man who drives a car knowing he will be sleepy before his trip is over is guilty of gross negligence, ruled Magistrate J. E. Pritchard today.

Before him was George Kennedy of Toronto, charged with dangerous driving after an accident in which 69-year-old John Salisbury was hit and killed by Kennedy's car while waiting for a street car last Dec. 3.

Kennedy admitted in previous hearings that he had momentarily fallen asleep at the wheel after driving all night from Buffalo and then going for a drive with his girl friend without taking any rest. He was fined $100 and costs.

A-Development Budgets Outlay Of $443,000,000

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP).—The tiny atom is a big item in the new United States budget.

President Truman's budget message to Congress today estimated that the new Atomic Energy Commission — responsible for both military and industrial development of nuclear fission—will spend $443,000,000 in the year beginning next July 1. However, provisions for a full $500,000,000 program are made by means of a recommended appropriation of $250,000,000 in money and authorization for the commission to contract for another $250,000,000 worth of work.

Atomic development, which until recently had been solely a military project, was given a new position under the budgetary heading of "natural resources".

Besides Premier Drew other cabinet ministers to be present at the civic dinner are Attorney-General Blackwell, Labor Minister Daley, Mines Minister Frost and Welfare Minister Goodfellow.

Appointment of the Rev. A. W. Smith, St. John's Vicarage, 68 Little Horton Lane, Bradford, Yorkshire, England, as rector of the Anglican Mission at Madoc, was announced yesterday by the Rt. Rev. John Lyons, Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario.

MOST BUTCHER SHOPS WILL CLOSE AT NOON ON SATURDAY

Due to the extreme shortage of fresh meat supplies the majority of city butchers will close their shops at noon on Saturday, a survey revealed today.

One downtown butcher shop has announced that it will close all day, while others will be open for a short time only.

No alleviation of the fresh meat shortage appears to be in sight, a consensus of butchers revealed, and in all probability the shortage will continue well into next week unless unforeseen developments occur in controlling sources.

Chain store officials stated that they have not got a pound of fresh meat, nor will they have any until the situation is relieved.

ICICLES REMOVED FROM ARMOURIES BY LOCAL FIREMEN

Formation of large icicles on the roof of the Armouries and overhanging the recently re-opened laneway, is receiving the attention of the local fire department today. Heavy icicles each year create a hazard to pedestrians using the laneway and one of the conditions of re-opening the laneway was that the city assume entire responsibility. As the icicles form they will be removed by members of the fire department.

STOVE UPSETS, LIVE COALS SCATTERED

It is not often that replenishing the fuel in a coal heater causes an alarm to be turned in for the fire department, but just this occurred at 97 Station Street shortly before the supper hour on Friday afternoon.

The housewife was attempting to restoke the heater when one of the stove legs broke allowing the stove to upset onto the floor. Pipes came rattling down and the red coals scattered over the floor causing slight damage before they were extinguished. The fire department was called "just in case."

George De Vuyst Re-elected Pres. Restaurant Assoc.

George DeVuyst, proprietor of the Old Tavern Bar-B-Q, Bridge Street, was returned as president of the Eastern Ontario Branch of the Canadian Restaurant Association at their annual meeting held in the city on Wednesday. Vice presidents named were J. T. Bothwell and J. Trakas.

Secretary treasurer is I. Tobe, while directors include Bruce Lattimer, Jack Dickens, Nick Passos, John Kikes and John Ryan. Fourteen branch members were presented at the meeting.

Mr. Lennie, field representative of the association, presided at the meeting and urged fullest co-operation of the various members. He claimed that co-operation of operators was necessary for the smooth running of this fast-growing industry.

He pointed out that Canada was fast becoming a mecca for tourists from all points of the world, and especially from the United States.

Mr. DeVuyst gave a resume of activities during the past year, referring to the idea of group advertising by radio, a method which is now being studied in Toronto and Ottawa. He thanked members for their splendid co-operation during the past year and expressed the hope that the Eastern Ontario branch would continue to be a leader in improvements regarding all phases of restaurant operations.

Work for Blind Is Told Y's Men

Ed. Brown, representative for this district for the Canadin Institute for the Blind was guest speaker at the regular Thursday dinner meeting of the Y's Men's Club, and gave a most interesting talk on the work of the Institute. There are over 13,000 known blind persons in Canada, and 40 in Belleville and district. When a new case is brought to the attention of the Institute, if the person is older, an effort is made to supply comfort and occupation. The Home Teaching Services give lessons in handicraft, and supply positions that augment meagre incomes. Those under 21 are encouraged to attend one of the schools for the blind.

Blind people are employed in a wide range of positions ranging from stenographers, who take dictation through dictophones to machine operators in factories. 15 per cent of the blind are gainfully employed, and plans are under way to increase this.

Of the 13,000 blind in Canada, 8,000 are the result of accidents, ignorance on the part of parents, and lack of funds for proper medical care.

One service of the Institute that is very popular with the blind is the Braille Library which is located in Toronto and serves all Canada by mail.

The speaker was introduced by Robbie Clarke and thanks expressed by the President Archie Boyd. Song leader was Frank Douglas, and Ab. Mulvey was Sgt.-at-Arms.

"You will laso return the lumber," said the magistrate administering a one-year suspended sentence.

Mayor Predicts Greatest Industrial Expansion In Years at Chamber Meeting

Reviewing latest developments in the industrial situation in the city, Mayor Frank Follwell told the directors of the Chamber of Commerce at their weekly luncheon on Thursday, that 1947 would see the greatest industrial development in years.

Negotiations were under way with three outstanding firms of Ontario and Quebec and present indications pointed towards them locating in the city. "These satisfactory conditions were in the main due to the fact that the city taxpayers had endorsed a by-law authorizing the expenditure of $25,000 for the purchase of industrial sites," the chief magistrate said.

The Industrial Commission, he went on, had sought the co-operation of the railways and banks and this will be forthcoming, indicative of the teamwork that is existing among city organizations towards development of the city.

The mayor stated that he was a member of the Chamber and of the Junior Board of Trade. "The latter", he said, "was a group of live wire younger men of the city who have the well-being of the community at heart and were doing a splendid job along these lines." He felt, however, that the seasoned veterans of the Chamber of Commerce could give them guidance when they needed it.

More Publicity Needed

As a member of the senior Chamber, the Mayor stated, he had a "pet peeve". He felt that the rank and file of the organization did not know what was going on at times, and he felt that the activities of the body should be given to its members.

President Lorne McDougall of the Chamber told the mayor that he had realized this situation and arrangements were now under way or would be early in the year to publish bulletins containing Chamber activities and these would be circulated to all members.

The mayor also urged that the rank and file of the chamber be given some small job in projects so that their interest would be maintained and the Chamber go on to greater successes than heretofore.

Adopts New System

The Chamber adopted the system of the Port Arthur Chamber of Commerce relating to itinerant advertisers. It endorsed a motion that all people desiring to solicit advertising for periodicals, programs, trade and organization organs and publications of this ilk, must first secure the authority of the secretary of the Chamber.

A number of merchants of the city as well as industries had been bilked by these travelling solicitors and the action taken is designed to protect business and industry from the inroads made by these individuals.

A special guest at the luncheon was Mr. H. D. Hilton, of the inspection staff of the Royal Bank of Canada who was a guest of Mr. I. Hefkey, Chamber director, and manager of the Royal Bank branch here.

Judge Admonishes Accused for Part Played in Cases

Fred A. Scott, Belleville cattle drover, and Dr. Stanley H. Shipsides, Wellington veterinarian, were each fined $1,500 in Picton county court on Thursday by Judge W. S. Lane, following pleas of guilty on conspiracy charges.

The charges involved violations of export regulations of the Contagious Diseases of Animals Act and concerned shipment of ineligible cattle to the United States. Cattle had been exported with substitution of ear-tags and with false blood samples being used for laboratory tests at Kingston.

Forgery charges against both accused were dismissed.

Special Prosecutor Malcolm Robb of Belleville asked for a fine of $5,000 for Mr. Scott and for a $1,500 fine for Dr. Shipsides, but Judge Lane viewed the part the latter played in the matters as being much more serious than that of Mr. Scott. R. A. Pringle of Belleville, acted as defence counsel for Mr. Scott, while W. R. Widdifield of Picton acted for Dr. Shipsides.

Honorable Profession.

"You must realize that your profession in an honorable one and one calling for fullest integrity," stated Judge Lane as he passed sentence on Dr. Shipsides. "You must also realize that the type of evasion of export regulations brought to light in this court could not be without the assistance of a veterinarian.

"If it had not been for the recommendation of the Crown I would have given you a three-month jail term and a fine of $4,000. I view your offense much worse than that of Mr. Scott."

Passing sentence on Mr. Scott, Judge Lane declared that his offense had not been against an individual but one against the entire Dominion and according to the evidence had been carried on for a considerable time.

In lieu of payment of the above fines, jail sentences of six months were awarded in each case.

Only Two Cases Left

With cases against Mr. Scott and Dr. Shipsides completed, all but two of a series of charges against American and Canadian cattle dealers, and two Canadian veterinarians, involving illegal shipment of cattle have been concluded. The two uncompleted cases are those against M. Levine of Belleville and Dr. George L. Brown, of Selby Both are charged with conspiracy with the cases expected to be concluded Friday afternoon.

Previously charged with conspiracy for violation of the Contagious Diseases of Animals Act were H. Meyers, New Jersey cattle buyer who paid a $300 fine; Harry O'Nell, Thurlow township, fined $75, and Mr. Leon Switt of Elmer, New Jersey, fined $1,000.

The conspiracy charge against Dr. Shipsides arose as result of his testing for Fred Scott, cows which had been purchased in Hastings county, and because false blood samples were represented as being from cows purchased.

According to summary evidence given by Cpl. Greaves of the R.C.M.P., Mr. Scott and Mr. Geo. Lisker, New Jersey cattle buyer had bought seven cows in Hastings. Dr. Shipsides had tested them for T.B. as additions to Mr. Scott's herd in Prince Edward county and from two cows in Mr. Scott's herd had drawn false blood samples for test at Kingston.

Must Undergo Two Tests

It was explained that cattle from Hastings county, must undergo two tests at 60-day intervals before they are eligible for export, while cattle from Prince Edward county could be exported with only the one test. The above Hastings cows had been shipped as natural additions to Prince Edward herds, with substituted ear tags and with only the one T.B. test.

The first blood samples taken by Dr. Shipaides to cover the Hastings cows had been frozen en route to Kingston, and the accused had then taken 19 further samples from two of Mr. Scott's cows to cover the damaged samples.

Called to the stand Dr. Shipsides testified he had been "surprised" when he learned that seven cows purchased by Mr. Scott in Hastings had been exported. He said he had given them legitimate tests as additions to Mr. Scott's herd

Electrical Club Strong in District

"Who are they? Never heard of them."

Oh yes you have. At one time or another one of these men has been in your home, on your farm, and always will be in the industrial plants, not only around the Bay of Quinte District but all over the country. These are the guys who look after the "juice", that flows in electric wires. You know that stuff that kicks back at you if you don't treat it just so...

If something goes "haywire" and blows a fuse, who do you think of first?—The electrician of course!—I'll call him .. "Say, Bill, my lights are out, can't keep a fuse in. As fast as I replace it, it seems to spit right back at me." "Okay, I'll be right over."

You may ask—How do these men, away from the big cities keep abreast of the times?—and I'll tell you. They formed electrical clubs all over the country and this is where the club of the Bay of Quinte District pops up.

This Club was formed in 1942, drawing up its own constitution and conducting itself according to parliamentary rules. Meetings are alternately held in Belleville and Trenton each month, and it is the duty of the secretary to obtain speakers for the evening. Electrical engineers are invited from all over Ontario to bring lastest in electrical equipment, or projectors and films to show their equipment in production and operation. These men give a lecture, answer questions and show where their products will best fit in homes, farms and industrial plants Managers of certain of these plants in the Bay of Quinte District benefit so much by this educational information that they willingly give the small amount that each member must pay as dues.

Membership has climbed to the half-hundred mark in the past year, and the prospects for 1947 are even brighter, so please don't blow your fuses on a third Wednesday, as "Bill" will be at the club meeting.

Work Week Cut to 44 Hours; Increase in Take-Home Pay

Hamilton, Jan. 10 — (CP)—The work week at the Hamilton mill of Canadian Cottons, Ltd., is to be reduced immediately from 48 to 44 hours with an increase in take-home pay, W. M. Boyd, manager, announced today. The textile plant employs more than 800 persons.

The plan also calls for an alternating shift schedule, premiums for second and third shift operations and longer vacations with pay to employees with more than five years' service.

Russell Wotten Named Chairman P. U. Commission

Russell Wotten, Public Utilities Commissioner for the past three years was elected Chairman of the Commission at the inaugural meeting held at the Hydro office on Tuesday afternoon, replacing Morley P. Duff, who was elected by acclamation at the recent municipal election. Mr. Wotten was nominated for the chairmanship by Mayor Frank Follwell and seconded by Commissioner Duff, Manager O. H. Scott being in charge until the chairman was elected.

In stepping down from the position of chairman, Mr. Duff sincerely thanked the Commissioners, staff and maintenance men for the hearty co-operation that had been extended to him in his term of office. "I wish especially to thank the outside men for their loyal support under most trying circumstances" said Mr. Duff. He also pointed out their were difficult times ahead both in water and power for the city and hoped for the loyalty of the citizens in the conservation of each. In 1946 said Mr. Duff "The purification plant pumped 1,030,000,000 gallons of water which was 51 millions more than any previous year in the city's history and the time has come when the commission must think about placing the new main across the Moira River that was recommended in the Storrie report some years ago."

Highest Peak Dec. 30

Referring to the shortage of power Mr. Duff also pointed out that the peak load of this city for all time was carried on Dec. 30 when 9,700 H. P. peak was registered. The highest previous figure was in 1945 with a peak of 9,120 H. P. in a single day. "When you consider that the capacity of our equipment at the present time is only 8,000 H. P. you can readily realize that the situation with respect to power is serious and acute," said the speaker. "We have under construction an additional power station but owing to lack of material and equipment this station has not come into activity." continued Mr. Duff. A hearty vote of thanks was moved to Mr. Duff and Mayor Follwell thanked the Commission for their friendly co-operation "I serve on many boards and commissions with respect to my office and I have not received more co-operation than has been given me by this commission" stated Mayor Follwell.

Asks For Co-operation

In accepting the chairmanship of the Commission Mr. Wotten thanked the members for their confidence and hoped that a successful year would be had and that Belleville would continue to progress and expand. Taking up the question of the main across the Moira River the Mayor believed that the water utility should be able to service all the new houses and businesses that were contemplated and with this in mind he moved that the construction of the main be proceeded with at once the cost to be paid out of revenue of the utility. The Commissioners agreed with this suggestion and Mr. Storrie, the consultant engineer for the Commission, will be requested to immediately prepare plans and order the material.

Concur In Resolution

Commissioner Follwell was informed that the street lighting program for the main and intersecting business street was being proceeded with and it was more than likely this work would be completed this year. The Commission concurred in the resolution in having the Province changed over to 60-cycle and that the said body would bear their share of the cost of the project. A number of bills were passed and a number of associations joined. The Commission will attend the O. M. E. A. convention in Toronto on March 3rd 4th and 5th.

Power conservation was also discussed and the Commission are requesting everyone to use as little power as possible so that it will not be necessary to issue any mandatory orders in this respect.

Dairy Farmer Figures Loss $1.55 Per 100 lbs. Milk

Hamilton, Jan. 10—(CP)—W.D. Black, a dairy farmer from nearby Waterdown, said today in a brief presented to the Royal Commission on milk that he estimated that dairy farmers in the Hamilton area lost $1.55 on every hundred pounds of milk produced.

Dairymen receive $3.45 a hundredweight and Mr. Black said the true cost of production was close to $5.

"This is a condition that cannot continue indefinitely," he said. "Some readjustment or reaction is inevitable. Already there are signs of this in the fact that many larger scale dairy farmers, more immediately alive to unfavorable cost though not necessarily having a detailed knowledge of their nature, are getting out of the business in whole or in part.

"I sincerely regret to say that I am to be numbered among these."

Town Council Asks Investigation Of Street Paving

Trenton—The inaugural meeting of the Trenton Town Council was held on Monday morning last in the town hall where Mayor Kenneth J. Couch delivered his inaugural address. This was preceded by the devotional service conducted by Captain the Reverend A. S. McConnell, M.B.E., rector of St. George's Anglican Church.

Standing committee chairmen for 1947 were set up by the town council at this meeting. They are as follows: Finance, Clarence Saylor; Fire, Market and Police, Claude V. Graham; Highways and Streets, Gerald A. Weaver; Sewer Maintenance and Parks, William Bradshaw; Court of Revision, Victor R. Ryan; Printing, Stationery and By-Laws, Norman H. Banfield; Relief, Mayor Kenneth J. Couch.

At the first business session of the 1947 town council, held on Monday evening last, January 6, council appointed a committee, Gerald Weaver, Clarence Saylor and Victor Ryan, to investigate all matters pertaining to street paving carried out by the council of 1946, and report its findings in writing at next meeting.

Appeal By-Laws.

Council voted to appeal the by-laws appointed Col. H. E. Smith, town solicitor, and Charles E. York, assessor and building inspector, these positions to be advertised, with applications of both officials, if made, to be considered with others.

Council decided to advertise in the Daily Commercial News, a Toronto publication, for applications for a competent town engineer.

By a deciding vote of Mayor Couch, decided that no salaries will be made to members of the council, also to take up the matter of salaries with the Public Utility Commission.

Council laid over until another meeting, appointments to the High School Board of Trustees and the Board of Health.

Appointed a committee to take up with Dr. E. A. McQuade, the new medical officer of health, the question of salary to be paid to him.

Discuss Parking.

Discussed question of providing space in down-town Trenton for the parking of cars, to relieve congestion on comparatively narrow streets.

Voted not to pass a by-law confirming the sale, authorized by council of 1946 at its last meeting, of the property known as the old shipway lot, to Trenton Cold Storage for $1,255.

Council accepted with regret the resignation of Town Clerk and Treasurer, W. J. Potts, who wishes to retire on account of failing health after 28 years' service.

Laid over for further consideration applications for salary increases from full-time employees of the fire department, also a request for some new equipment and repairs.

Granted Permission.

Council granted to the Rathbun Bus Service permission to operate buses on town streets to serve local factory workers, the question of payment for said rights and other matters to be taken up later.

Approval was given by the town council on Monday evening last on the recommendation of Chairman Claude Graham of the Fire, Market and Police Committee, of the engagement of Edward Loader, a Trenton man, as a member of the Trenton police force. He succeeds Constable Don Sutherland, who resigned recently to go into private business.

Customs Returns Up.

Customs and excise collections at the Port of Trenton for the twelve months of 1946, amounted to over half a million dollars. The government's fiscal year ends on March 31, 1947.

Collections for the month of December were ten thousand dollars more than in November. The last three months of the year revealed a decided increase over previous months.

The returns for the port cannot be compared with those of war years when heavy excise taxes, many of them now non-existent, were collected, and when much machinery for war purposes came into the district. Indications are that the current fiscal year will be ahead of last year.

First Baby.

The first baby born to Trenton parents in 1947 was a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Don Whitley, 33 Alfred Street. It first saw the light of day at 7:04 a.m. on January 2nd., with Dr. J. W. Farley as the attending physician. Mother and daughter are both doing well. The proud parents will collect many beautiful prizes.

Mozart Was Perhaps the Most Phenomenal Genius of Them All

Mozart's piano and violin concertos, his three great symphonies, the E flat, the G minor, and the Jupiter, are the sure successes of a first-class orchestra. Apart from the worshippers of Salzburg who proclaim with Rossini that Mozart is the only composer in the world, he is the one above all others who satisfies the general listener, the music lover of any age or kind. He seems to supply whatever is wanted from music: exquisite melodies, pathos, gaiety . . . every shade of emotion, rhythm that is pulsing with life, and orchestration that for sheer loveliness is hard to beat . . .

Mozart was perhaps the most phenomenal genius of them all, the farthest removed from the ordinary. Even among the greatest masters he remains unique. It was a mystification to his friends how he managed to compose his masterpieces—for that is what they were—so casually; one eye on a game of bowls, or one ear listening to a fairy story from his wife. He describes his processes in one of his admirably written letters, and very amazing they are. In the right condition, "when I am as it were completely myself, entirely alone, and of good cheer—say, traveling in a carriage, or walking after a good meal, or during the night when I cannot sleep," ideas came, "became methodized and defined," and formed themselves into a complete whole, a finished work in his head. This was so clearly written on the tablets of his mind that all he had to do next day was to use his miraculous memory and copy it down as if off a slate, an almost mechanical business, that let his attention wander as it pleased . . .

That was the kind of sensational thing he did. He confounded the musicians, from the age of three onward, as the most prodigious of all musical prodigies.

His father, Leopold Mozart, a sound professional musician himself, recognized at once the eaglet that was inhabiting the family nest . . .

Leopold Mozart must have been happy those first years. Never had a father acted as impressario to so brilliant a little son. They played to all the crowned and titled heads in Europe—that was the hallmark of success in those days. Wolfgang met the experts and read at sight, improvised, and played his own compositions amid an ever-mounting chorus of wonder. He was a wonder child; his concerts were crammed. . . . Not only was he a wonder, but he was a very charming, unaffected, pretty little boy . . .

Then came Italy, still the supreme land of music, with the hardest of all audiences to please. There he was set musical conundrums like the princess' suitors in the fairy tale. They even shut him up alone for a week to see if he would really emerge with a composition—which he did. He came triumphantly out of the severest tests possible, and was made a member of the Philharmonic Academy, as great an honor as there was.—From "Listening to the Orchestra," by Kitty Barne. (Indianapolis: Bobbs-Merrill, 1946.)

Says Peterborough And Stratford Are Most Planning Conscious

Toronto, Jan. 10—(CP)—Stratford and Peterboro are the most planning-conscious cities in Canada, Dr. E. G. Faludi, Toronto planning consultant, said last night in an address in which he also declared that approval by Toronto ratepayers of a slum clearance project will have a profound influence on the thinking of city councils across Canada.

In Peterboro and Stratford, "the best citizens become members of city council" and representatives from all walks of life serve on planning committees, he said. In Peterboro 25 per cent of the citizens were interested enough to attend a city planning exhibit while in Toronto only three per cent viewed an exhibition of the city's 1943 master plan.

Hamilton was the only city in Canada with the ideal minimum park area — 10 acres for every 1,000 residents — but its parks were difficult of access. Hamilton was unique in that it took 100 years for its residents to realize the mountain-top was an ideal residential area. Other cities with similar topographical situations usually developed higher areas as the best residential sections.

The Toronto slum clearance vote was the first popular recognition that blighted areas should be cleared and replaced by subsidized, low-rental housing.

Preventing Snow Blockades

Present day weather forecasting is proving of inestimable benefit in these days of winter which often becomes unruly and threatens tie-ups of traffic across large stretches of country. Not only do those whose duty it is to keep traffic moving along highways and roads and streets benefit by foreknowledge of what change is about to happen in the weather outlook but persons who use highways and other thoroughfares for business or other purpose know what to do, whether to make the journey or to delay until conditions change for the better.

In this age the open road is the need of the whole country and every part of it for no period up to this time has been so dependent upon transportation that will carry on in the face of heavy falls of snow and drifting caused by high winds. This is the problem of the Highways Departments of the Provinces, of county authorities and of urban community public works and engineering staffs all over the country that has winter as we have it.

The place of modern mechanism in fighting the snow banks and drifts and in clearance is before the public now. This development has come forward very swiftly in the past couple of years and will be more and more prominent as the years pass.

Conditions a few decades ago knew not such problems for province-wide traffic was not developed as in these days. In those times the travelling public had not automobiles to move across one or more of the provinces in winter, and even if there had been cars a few decades ago he would have been a venturesome driver who would try to cross a province. Today it is different. Effort is made to keep the ways open and to open them if they are closed by heavy storms.

The necessity of digging out the snow and moving it from business streets has been demonstrated here this past week when hundreds of tons were moved so that the streets could be made passable. City roads are plowed out so that they are not only open and therefore encouraging to motor traffic to come out and they are even used by pedestrians, sometimes the roadways being preferred by them to sidewalks with their uneven surface of trodden snow.

Congested areas at a time like this, such as a business section, indicate in the very sharpest way the need of clearance. Front Street and Bridge Street would have become areas of confusion and stagnation of traffic but in this age of traffic which goes on the year around and which comes across the province such could not be allowed to develop. Hence the removal of snow is undertaken. Hills too create their problems as in the last storms which would have impeded movement by the very weight and nature of the sandlike icy snow, if it had not been cleared to the sides.

Snow even with modern apparatus is a formidable obstacle to be faced and to be prepared for. Such conditions as snowbound the community of Tobermory must be dealt with without loss of time for communities are not so independent of one another as they were in other days when there was not the dependence upon food stores which exists today.

In other times communities were more self-contained and possessed reserves of food which the average home in snowbound settlements today would not possess. Food has to get to the people, storm or no storm, and with modern snow-fighting equipment that is possible. Many a story was once written around experiences of snow-bound persons. Today the story does not run to so many chapters as the story of old. At Tobermory there was something of the old picture with as many as 28 persons put up at a restaurant for one night, when women had to bake bread for the first time in years. Some persons are said to have actually got some rest and sleep while standing up. This situation at Tobermory was unusual with drifts fifteen feet high and the snow filling in with drifting as fast as the plows could clear the path. Finally the blockade has been broken and normalcy begins to reign.

In another generation those roads would not have been cleared out for a long time or might have been left, as some roads used to be, closed until spring warmth melted the snow, traffic in the meantime having been carried on for long over the banks of snow or across fields by impromptu routes.

Feed The Birds

Unusually heavy snow lies deep upon the land and covers any bushes where any natural food of winter birds is buried. To reach this is utterly impossible for birds because of snowstorm after snowstorm, sleet, rain, uniting to make a coating that securely locks up the food from the feathered inhabitants which stay here the year round or which come south under the compulsion of weather conditions.

Around Hamilton 500 pounds of grain is to be distributed by airplane to feed the birds.

In this part of the province many householders are helping the birds by placing out for them scraps of bread, fat and grain and whatever birds might eat. The lives of these creatures which are precarious in any winter are more so this winter because of unusual combinations of conditions which make a bird's life one of hardships and hazards.

The creatures are beneficial to man for the service they render in their war upon insect pests.

Food scraps, bread, fat and such if placed where birds may eat it in safety from cats and where they will not be covered by snow will help to save hundreds and thousands of the birds.

Bats in Attics, Cellars

This is the time year when mammal experts at the Royal Ontario Museum expect to hear outcries from citizens of the Province that they have encountered bats in their attics or cellars. The species they find on capture is the big brown bat, which used to hibernate in caves, but in our cities may pick on almost any dark and sheltered spot. Then the proverbial January thaw may warm him up a bit, and stir him to activity. Most other species of Canadian bats move to warmer climates in the U.S.A. during winter.

Such a mild spell may bring out other mammals as well, the groundhog, the chipmunk or the skunk. The latter's wavering track across the snow is frequently seen in January.

When no thaws soften winter's icy blasts, the deer have a particularly hard time of it. They find deep snow difficult to navigate, and in their search for food, they are forced to confine themselves to small areas which they beat down into deep paths. This practice gave rise to the term deer "yarding."

The black or grey squirrel is untroubled by cold and snow, for now is the time when he can literally reap the fruits of his summer and fall industry. Many of the nuts he buried singly, but he can find them, even under three to four feet of snow—probably by scent.

Hand For The Mitten

The Times of London recently drew attention to the fact that: "Mankind, as a whole, ignorantly derides mittens as suitable only for old ladies." It is, indeed, the case that, in general, male dignity has always demanded freedom and independence for the fingers—no knight ever flung down his mittens as a gage of battle, and no iron hand ever functioned in aught but a velvet glove, states the Christian Science Monitor.

But why should the mitten not be taken seriously? It may be that memories of the nursery cling to it—but against these may be set its record in the ring and in the arctic. It is certainly warmer than the glove, and there is at least some force in the argument that it is better to feel one's fingers all thumbs than not to feel them at all.

JUST FOLKS

FALSE COUNSEL

Some will counsel you: "Be safe,
Loose care's cinches when they chafe;
Never dare the doubtful thing
That may scorn or mockery bring.
Never fight a stronger foe.
Run before he strikes a blow."
Safe! but thought a moment give:
With yourself you have to live.

Some will teach you: "Compromise.
Take from men what fawning buys
Hearing right and wrong dispute,
Join with neither. You stay mute.
Share no struggle you can shun,
Side with each and everyone."
Safe! But should this way you do,
What about that fellow, you?

Better to be wrong than choose
Never for a cause to lose;
Better, when the gauntlet's thrown,
To step out and fight alone
Than to slink away in fear
Of the crowds that wait to jeer.
Hard to bear is hatred's curse;
But to hate yourself is worse.

40 YEARS AGO

JAN. 10TH, 1907

There was a large crowd at the rink to witness the hockey match between Belleville and Picton. The locals had a good deal at stake in the match, owing to the fact that if they lost, it would be, in all probability, the tall timbers for them. So they went upon the ice prepared to play the game of their lives, and they did just that as the score at the finish was 7 to 1 in their favor. Doc. Gilbert was timekeeper for Picton and Herb Fish for Belleville. Doc. had a stop watch and Herb Fish had only a regular time piece. When the time was up according to Doc. Gilbert the score was 7 to 0, but Herb. Fish said there were yet four minutes to play. Chaucer Elliott, the referee, settled the matter by ordering two minutes more of play and in that time the Pea Canners scored their goal. The following composed the teams: Belleville — Boland, Pepper, Connolly, Allen, Burke, McGuire, and Spangenberg. Picton—Croft, Thorne, Bedborough, Benson, Williamson, Welsh and Reid.

Ald. Cameron Brown of the Belleville Daily Sun, spent yesterday in Toronto.

Mr. S. A. Lazier has returned home from Rossland, B. C., where he spent several months.

Mr. Fred Gillen has returned to the city from the British Columbia mining country.

Mr. John Parker Thomas and Mr. S. D. Lazier have formed a partnership for the practice of law. They will also conduct a general insurance business.

Joshua Simpkins and his company arrived in town today. Their street parade at noon attracted a large crowd. At the corner of Bridge and Front Streets the hoosier band rendered several selections in a creditable manner. The make up of the musicians was such as to cause much amusement. They should draw a big audience at the opera house this evening.

Bobsleds—Museum Pieces?

(By John Gould in Christian Science Monitor)

Yesterday was Christmas, and it should be entered upon the records and laid up in the archives that the lad did NOT get a bobsled. He didn't expect one, but he certainly didnt' get one, and the reason is worth pondering.

In my own time, which wasn't too long ago, a beautiful red bobsled adorned the back steps of most of us, one year or another, when we stepped out to observe the holiday morning in new mittens and stocking hat. But there must be those who don't know what a thrill that was, because a bobsled has been a useless possession for some years now.

About the middle of this November, I chanced to remark: "I've got the wood on hand to make a set of traverse runners for Christmas." The lady who keeps me out of trouble replied: "Now that's a bright idea if I ever heard one." And she went on to point out that a modern winter is different from the sliding times we used to have. And it is even so.

We used to go bobsledding after we helped wipe the dishes, and would get in a couple of good slides before bedtime. Three slides were too much for one evening, because the slide was about a mile and three-quarters of open country highway, and after the whoosh we had to walk back that distance pulling the heavy sleds.
